EVERY POLICE SERGEANT MUST GO, CITY IS TOLD

Mayor Lists 2,479 Jobs for Ouster.

Rays of Hope

While Mayor Cermak was telling the city council that wholesale slashes of public service were made necessary by the city's financial condition, some rays of hope appeared from other sources yesterday:

1—First payment of 1930 personalty tax is made by bank and other large banks are ready to follow suit. Details on page 4.

2—Circuit court tells county commissioners that the judges will not object to economies in trimming fee offices which are under judicial control. Details on page 4.

3—Teachers decide to carry on despite their payless condition. Details on page 4.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Mayor Cermak recommended to the city council yesterday afternoon that it authorize department chiefs to discharge 2,479 city employés. In the reduction are all of the city's 572 police sergeants and all of the 57 battalion fire chiefs and 305 firemen.

Asked later if he had heard the news, Police Commissioner Allman said: "It's not news; it is a calamity. This cut added to the 350 who have died, resigned, or been discharged practically takes the heart out of us."

But the council was told that the city hasn't the money to pay these employés, nor any prospect of getting it.

Explains City's Plight.

"The present economy plan, now in effect, by which a saving of $1,000,000 a month is obtained," reads the mayor's message to the council, "has been found insufficient to enable the fiscal officers of the city to conserve or realize enough money to continue the activities of all of the deparments on the basis of the last preceeding fiscal year. The further saving of $6,345,740 by the discharge of 2,479 employés is absolutely necessary in order to maintain service in the most essential municipal activities."

The mayor's recommendation was referred to the finance committee. Ald. John J. Coughlin [1st] urged that instead of discharge, the employés be given a furlough. This amendment also went to the committee.

Proposed Ousters Tabulated.

The following table shows the number of jobs recommended for elimination and the money savings, and it also indicates the cases in which all or half of the employés of various classifications are to be eliminated:

Number of employés.	Titles.	Estimated savings.
572	[All] Sergeants of police.	$1,658,800
240	[All] Section foremen	504,000
300	Senior clerks	675,000
57	[All] Battalion chiefs	228,000
112	[All] Nurses	240,000
45	[All] 1st asst. oper. engrs.	197,100
40	[All] Playground directors	97,480
30	[Half] Electrical inspectors.	130,000
40	[All] Pub. serv. employés.	127,000
305	Patrolmen	707,600
305	Firemen	707,600

20	[All] Bathhouse employés.	34,000
	All. Auto maintenance	200,000
2,479		$6,345,740

"This does not include," the mayor said in his message, "additional retrenchments that will be necessary in the way of electric street lighting repairmen, stopping of all water tunnel work and water pipe extension, and the complete shutdown of vehicle tax expenditures unless some relief is granted."

Merely Beginning.

In addition to his message, the mayor made a talk to the aldermen.

"There must be further curtailment," he said. "What is proposed is just the beginning. There is nothing else we can do. In 60 days we will have to lay off 2,000, 3,000, or 4,000 more employés, unless we obtain relief.

"The public will realize soon that it is impossible to function without money. The residents must know this is their city. Their property needs fire and police protection and they require health service.

"I know there will be protests and objections, but what can be done about it? I have been trying to borrow money for 10 days. The 1930 tax bills

LEO BROTHERS LOSES SUPREME COURT APPEAL

Lingle Slayer Must Serve 14 Yr. Term.

The texts of both the majority and dissenting opinions of the Supreme court in the Leo Brothers case will be found on pages 6 and 7.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.

The Illinois Supreme court yesterday affirmed the conviction of Leo V. Brothers for the murder of Alfred J. Lingle.

Under the decision of the court, Brothers must serve the penitentiary sentence of fourteen years fixed by the jurors who found him guilty.

In a lengthy decision, delivered by Justice Norman L. Jones, the Supreme court reviewed in detail all the evidence presented at the trial of Brothers and discussed the law in the case. The finding of the court was that the evidence justified a verdict of guilty, and that Brothers received a fair trial according to law.

Calls Testimony Convincing.

The concluding paragraphs of the decision, in which the Supreme court stated its conviction that Brothers was guilty, follow:

"It is contended that the verdict is contrary to the weight of the evidence. We have very carefully examined and considered all of the evidence in the case and we cannot agree with that contention. The identification of defendant as the killer was the principal contested question of fact. It appears to us that the testimony of the witnesses who identified the defendant as the man who threw down the gun and fled from the tunnel and across the street is more convincing than the testimony of the witnesses for defendant.

Heavier Penalty Warranted.

"Under all the evidence the jury would have been warranted in fixing a penalty much greater than they did, but the penalty is within the limits fixed by the statute. The jury heard the evidence and saw the witnesses, and the province of fixing the penalty belonged to them and their decision is final in that matter. The record contains no error sufficient to disturb the verdict, which appears to have been justified by convincing evidence showing the guilt of defendant beyond a reasonable doubt."

The decision of the court stated the facts concerning the murder of Lingle, who was slain on June 9, 1930, in the pedestrian tunnel leading under Michigan avenue at Randolph street. The murderer strode behind Lingle in the tunnel, which leads to the suburban station of the Illinois Central railroad, and, lifting a revolver to the back of Lingle's head, fired a single fatal shot. The court described how witnesses had seen the killer drop the revolver and run from the scene.

Trial Properly Conducted.

Then the Supreme court in its decision described the testimony given by every witness at the trial, held last March and presided over by Judge Joseph Sabath. The high court then reviewed the law points raised by the defense and found that the trial was properly conducted.

Five of the seven justices of the court joined in the decision approving the conviction of Brothers. They are Chief Justice Clyde E. Stone and Justices Jones, Warren W. Duncan, Oscar E. Heard and Warren H. Orr.

A dissenting opinion was presented by Justices Frederic R. De Young and Frank K. Dunn, in which they announced a belief that the case should have been reversed upon a legal technicality. The two justices declared that the fact that the jury had inadvertently been given a blank manslaughter verdict, which was withdrawn by the trial judge while the jury was deliberating, constituted an improper communication between judge and jury.

Dissenting Decision Given.

The entire dissenting decision was based on this point, although in introducing the question Justices De Young and Dunn stated that the evidence in the case relating to the identification of Brothers was "exceedingly contradictory," and that it was difficult for them to say on which side of the case was the preponderance of the evidence.

But the minority opinion did not pass on the question of identification.

"However that question may be determined," the minority opinion stated, "the error of the court in communicating with the jury after they had retired from the bar requires a reversal of the judgment."

The five justices in the majority,

4 DAY DRIVE FOR JOBS IN U. S. PUTS 52,593 TO WORK

New York, Feb. 19.—[Special.]—The campaign against depression waged by the United Action Group for Employment restored 11,458 wage earners to jobs in the 24 hours ending at noon today, it was announced tonight at the national headquarters of the campaign at the Hotel Biltmore. This brought the total number of jobs obtained for unemployed since the campaign began last Monday to 52,583. The object of the drive is to obtain work for at least 1,000,000 unemployed.

Backing the campaign are the American Legion, the American Federation of Labor, the Association of National Advertisers, the American Legion auxiliary, and many other organizations mobilized for the purpose. Coöperating are the 10,600 local posts of the Legion and 30,000 local unions of the A. F. of L.

Eighty-three communities in 31 states were represented in the results made public tonight, against 134 communities in 39 states the day before. Illinois was in the lead with 6,091 jobs, 3,260 being obtained in Chicago. In addition, communities in many parts of the country were reported appropriating millions of dollars for work.

READERS OFFER 2 METHODS OF CURING SNORES

Two theories about snoring and how to cure it were advanced yesterday by readers of THE TRIBUNE.

"My conclusion," wrote R. W. Menk of 814 Clement street, Peoria, "is that snoring is a habit and can be controlled through the subconscious mind. My formula for control is quite simple and will be made public in a short time."

Another informant, who signed himself "Mankind's Well Wisher," asserted that the Italian method of snore suppression was the best.

"A friend taught me how to cure snorers while we were on a fishing expedition," he said. "All you have to do when you are awakened by a snore is to make a noise like saying giddap to a horse and the snorer will quit."

Other readers are hereby reminded that they may contribute their bit toward alleviating the suffering of those who must listen to snorers by revealing their own special remedies, if any.

Atty. H. M. Ashton Ordered Suspended for One Year

The Supreme court of Illinois yesterday ordered the suspension of Attorney Henry M. Ashton for one year. Complaints were made against Ashton by the Chicago Bar association, which charged him with participation in a scheme to attract business to a stockholders' protective bureau. From 1912 to 1914 Ashton was a member of the state legislature. Recently the county board gave him a contract to collect back taxes.

De Valera Sees Irish Victory; Reveals Aims

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, Feb. 19.—Eamon de Valera, who, as far as any prediction is possible in this almost unpredictable election, will be the next president of the Irish Free State, tonight outlined his policy in his headquarters in an old Georgian house on Upper Mount street, which he expects to change for government buildings on Merrion street in the very near future.

He smiled as the latest election returns gave his Fianna Fail 70 seats and President William T. Cosgrave's government party 60 seats. These figures included nine Labor seats for De Valera and 15 Independents for Cosgrave. Only 22 seats of the dail's 152 have yet to be filled. Cosgrave's managers concede a majority of eight or twelve seats for De Valera.

De Valera Different Man.

De Valera tonight is a very different man from the romantic leader who a few years ago was in arms against the Free State. The prospect of responsibility has sobered him. He is looking forward to two or three years of power before trying to change the basic relation of the Free State with England.

Possibly many things will happen in that time to modify or change De Valera's opinions, but in any case here is his policy in question and answer form:

"Will you, if returned to power, abolish the oath of allegiance to King George now required of members of the dail?"

"Yes."

Wants to Cut All Ties.

"Will you insist on the establishment of a republic independent of the British commonwealth of nations and how will you go about obtaining that separation?"

"That will come in its own good time. Meantime our mandate does not extend that far."

"You have mentioned the necessity of a free vote of the people on the constitutional relations with Great Britain. Will you define what you mean by a free vote?"

"I mean a vote taken in circumstances which would make it quite clear that Britain would not resist any decision taken."

Speaks of Trade Relations.

"Will your government be represented at the imperial economic conference at C[illegible]a in June?"

"Last year we bought £35,750,000 [about $175,000,000] worth of goods from Great Britain and she bought £31,250,000 [about $150,000,000] from us. We are Britain's best customer and she is ours. We are ready to enter trade agreements for our mutual advantage and are prepared for that purpose to meet representatives of Britain in Ottawa or elsewhere."

"What is your policy about Ireland's external trade—high tariffs, exclusion, reciprocity treaties, or what?"

"Our policy is to give adequate protection to our own manufacturing industrics so that they may be developed to meet our own needs as far as possible."

"Will the civil servants, police and army, including higher officers, retain their jobs if you assume power?"

"If we assume power we shall take over the administrative machine with as little disturbance as possible."

Plans to Eliminate Waste.

"What is your program in respect to economy in the public services?"

"We propose to eliminate waste in every direction, to cut the higher salaries which we deem extravagant, and gradually, by stopping recruiting, to reduce the police and other forces to reasonable dimensions."

"What is your immediate program of legislative and administrative reform?"

"We propose immediately to eliminate the oath from the constitution. It has been the cause of internal trouble since its imposition. It prevents a considerable section of our people from being represented in the people's assembly and therefore it prevents that universal acceptance of the laws which would insure willing obedience."

"Will you try to open negotiations with Great Britain or Ulster for the reunion of Ireland?"

"If the occasion presents itself, I shall certainly be happy to do so. The reunion of Ireland must always be first in the mind of any Irishman who loves his country."

SEES HIS 1ST MOVIE AT 84 AND REGRETS THE 2 BITS HE SPENT

"It's all foolishness," was his verdict.

"Well, didn't you think it wonderful that you could hear the voices of those people on the screen?" he was asked.

"It sounded like all hell was broke loose," he said tartly.

"Are you going again, now that you've started?"

"Nope," was the reply. "It cost 25 cents and it wasn't worth it."

Mr. Cobb's family held religious scruples against the theater, he said. As a boy, however, he sneaked away from home once or twice to see "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

His parents brought him to Chicago in 1855 and settled on a farm at what is now 62d and State streets. ..ecently he has made a practice of walking to a neighborhood theater to escort a niece home from the show there, and it was she who persuaded him to see his first and what he said was to be his only movie.

Woman Bound and Put in Bathtub by Bandits

Three bandits who invaded the home of Mrs. Alexandria Nikolas, 3651 5th avenue, late yesterday afternoon, bound her hand and foot, placed her in the bathtub and turned on the water, then fled with $2,000 worth of jewelry and $89 in cash. She managed to keep her head above water and was freed by her mother, Mrs. Marie Polyzaki, who was absent during the robbery.

CHINESE LINES STORMED BY INFANTRY AND TANKS

LATE BULLETINS ON HOSTILITIES IN THE FAR EAST

SHANGHAI, Feb. 20 (Saturday). —(AP)—Japanese naval headquarters announced this afternoon that the Japanese army captured Kiangwan town, where a severe battle was fought through the forenoon, and that this constituted the objective for today. The statement said the army probably would consolidate its position there before making further advances.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 20.—(AP)—Chinese military authorities this afternoon disputed claims of Japanese naval officials that the Japanese had captured Kiangwan, and said the Chinese troops had driven the Japanese back.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 20 (Saturday.) —(U.P.)—A shell fired during the height of the Japanese offensive today completely wrecked the headquarters of a United States marine detail guarding the Tungyin cotton mill within the boundaries of the international settlement. The marines had just vacated the room to change guards and none was injured. It was not determined whether the shell was fired by Japanese or Chinese.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 20 (Saturday.) —(AP)—The Japanese army began making a slow, gradual advance along the battle front north of Chapei, through Kiangwan to Woosung late this afternoon, using airplanes, tanks, infantry, artillery and a concentrated fire from nine destroyers in the river.

BRISBANE, Australia, Feb. 20. —(Saturday.)—(U.P.)—It was understood today that extended shore leaves in the Royal Australian navy have been curtailed and naval reservists ordered to prepare for possible mobilization in view of the Shanghai situation.

CHANGCHUN, Manchuria, Feb. 20.—(AP)—A bitter battle raged today between Chinese and Japanese forces at Tunhua, strategically the most important town in the province of Kirin, which is now a part of the new Federated State of Manchuria, called "The Land of Peace."

MANILA, P. I., Feb. 20.—(Saturday.) — (U.P.) — All cables between Manila and Shanghai were severed at 10:30 a. m. today. They apparently were cut near Woosung, China, scene of war operations.

Capture of Kiangwan Is Claimed and Denied.

[Copyright: 1932: By the Associated Press.]

SHANGHAI, Feb. 20.—[Saturday.] —The great array of military strength Japan has been massing here during the last few weeks was flung against the Chinese positions along a sixteen mile front from Shanghai to Woosung this morning in the greatest military action since the world war.

The purpose of the Japanese assault was to smash the strong Chinese positions near Kiangwan, two miles north of Hongkew Park, in the international settlement of Shanghai, and from that vantage point to deal with the troops holding the ends of the line at Chapei and Woosung.

Japs Go "Over the Top."

Japanese assault lines of infantrymen advanced with fixed bayonets behind a barrage of world war proportions laid down on the Chinese strongholds at Kiangwan. Meanwhile numerous big bombing planes harassed the entrenched Chinese.

It was reliably reported that the Kiangwan positions had been taken over by the 87th and 88th divisions of Gen. Chiang Kai-shek's crack troops.

This was looked upon as a development of the utmost importance, as hitherto the 19th Chinese route army has done all the fighting in Shanghai. The Japanese have endeavored to stress the local nature of their activities by saying their purpose was to chastise the 19th. Gen. Chiang is China's chief military commander, and participation by his troops in the action put it on a national rather than a local scale.

Artillery Opens Attack.

The big push started at 8:50 a. m. The signal for it was a thundering volley from the Japanese big guns stationed in Hongkew park. The Japanese ultimatum, demanding that the Chinese forces be withdrawn 12 miles from Shanghai, had expired at 7 a. m.

Three hours after the hostilities started the Woosung end of the line burst into action. The Chinese had brought in additional artillery there and they rained projectiles into the Japanese trenches. Some of their guns were trained on the Japanese cruiser Yubari, lying off the Woosung waterfront.

Japanese naval headquarters announced that shells were dropping all about the cruiser and that a captain and five men were wounded.

The morning was heavy and foggy when the big offensive was launched, but after midday the murk lifted and there was brilliant sunshine. The temperature was snappy. Conditions were ideal for the big air circus that the overwhelmingly strong squadrons of Japan were putting on over the whole battlefront.

Chinese Position Bombed.

Naval headquarters revealed that airmen had bombed Yanglingkow, a heavily fortified Chinese position, northwest of the Paoshan forts.

No infantry action occurred in the vicinity of Woosung during the early hours of the engagement, but the Japanese pllanned to open up on that front as well as in Chapei if they succeeded in breaking the Chinese line at Kiangwan.

A spokesman at naval headquarters said the command intended to clean out Chapei "with a minimum action possible in the hope of protecting the foreign settlement."

It was in the tortuous streets of Chapei that the original Japanese attack was repulsed by the 19th army three weeks ago.

Wounded Arrive in Shanghai.

The first batch of wounded brought back from the front wer 13 Chinese, who were taken to Chinese hospitals within the international settlement. They came from the vicinity of Kiangwan, north of Chapei. United States marines, on guard at the setlement border, let them through the line.

Soon after the opening of the artillery duel with which the action started, United States marine headquarters said two Japanese shells fell within their area.

The marines expressed fear that an increasing number of missiles would land in their section as the artillerymen "warmed up to their jobs."

As a result of the gradually increasing hostilities in the vicinity of Chapei, the 31st United States infantry, which yesterday took over the front line of defense facing the Chinese city, covered their sand bag defenses to the rear of their machine gun blockhouses with half inch steel plates.

About noon numerous Japanese plans appeared over Chapei. They reconnoitered over wide areas to the rear of Chinese positions, apparently searching every foot of ground between Chapei and Kiangwan.

Meanwhile Japanese airmen prepared to blast away the Chinese positions with great bombs, dwarfing in explosive power anything that has been used during the hostilities heretofore.

At the Yangtzepoo flying field this correspondent saw ten of the largest of Japanese bombing planes loaded with these huge missiles of death and destruction. The bombs were about a yard long and a foot and a half through. They were so heavy that each plane could carry only two of them.

There was no indication when the bombers would take off, but the pilots stood by ready for action. Other planes, carrying from six to ten smaller bombs, were kept warmed up.

ULTIMATUM SPURNED

BY JOHN POWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, Feb. 20.—[Saturday.]—The great Japanese offensive which began in Shanghai this morning followed the action of the Chinese government in refusing to comply with the terms of the Japanese ultimatum of last Thursday, demanding that the Chinese withdraw from their front lines by 7 o'clock this morning.

The Chinese reply, written by Premier Wang Ching-wei at Nanking, was conciliatory, but in Japanese eyes it constituted a rejection.

Stated briefly, the reply indicated that simultaneous withdrawal of both Chinese and Japanese troops would be acceptable, but withdrawal of Chinese troops alone is impossible.

Regarding Japan's second point—discontinuance of the anti-Japanese movement—Premier Wang declared that freedom of speech and press is guaranteed by law and cannot be interfered with, but that where it goes beyond regulations, it will be legally dealt with.

Japan's third demand, that China's fortifications in the Shanghai district be leveled, cannot be considered, Wang said.

Regarding the withdrawal of troops from the Shanghai district, Wang said that ordinarily China does not station large bodies of troops about Shanghai, and that when normal conditions prevail the district will be patroled by ordinary police.

Japan's proposal to observe the Chinese troop withdrawal from airplanes was rejected by Wang. And any investigation of China's withdrawal, he said, would have to be by a third party.

Chinese Commander Defiant.

Both the Chinese mayor of Shanghai, Wu Teh-chen, and Gen. Tsai Ting-kai, commander of the Chinese 19th route army, also replied to the Japanese ultimatum. Both merely stated that since the ultimatum was concerned with the general relations of the two countries and not to an isolated incident at Shanghai, it had been referred to the national government.

Gen. Tsai's reply, characteristic of his straightforward attitude, consisted only seventy-five words. He said, in part:

"The troops under my command belong to the Chinese government and are subject to government orders. Hence, the ultimatum was sent to Nanking for consideration and reply."

Foreigners Take to Cover.

Foreign consular authorities, particularly the British and American consuls, are genuinely alarmed at the prospect of a major military engagement in the city, with its attendant danger to foreign lives and property. Following a hurried conference, the consuls warned their nationals residing in the Hongkew, Yangtzepoo and western residential districts of Shanghai to evacuate to safer zones immediately. Hundreds of Americans and other foreigners followed the advice and began moving out of the immediate danger zone. They were escorted by police and firemen.

American missionary hospitals, including the Episcopal St. Luke's institution, were immediately closed and the patients and nurses removed to the section guarded by British and American forces. The patients were taken out in ambulances and fire trucks.

The American and British consuls also warned shipping in the harbor to get out of range of the Chinese batteries. The Japanese cruiser Idzumo, anchored near the Japanese consulate, is drawing especial attention from Chinese gunners. The cruiser serves as headquarters for about six Japanese admirals.

Japanese to Show No Mercy.

Lieut. Gen. Kengichi Uyeda, 60 year old commander of the imperial Japanese Ninth division of 18,000 men, which will bear the brunt of the attack on the Chinese lines, summoned correspondents from more than 40 newspapers representing all parts of the world to his headquarters in a Chinese cotton mill last night and expounded his views on the local situation.

The gist of his remarks was that once the offensive gets under way his men will show little mercy for the Chinese troops until they have been driven to the specified 12½ miles from Shanghai. He said his ultimatum left no room for Chinese quibbling.

"If the Chinese are not out of their front line trenches by 7 o'clock tomorrow morning the Japanese troops will move," he declared in unequivocal terms.

Says Chinese Started It.

Lieut. Gen. Uyeda declared that the Japanese did not start the present trouble, but were forced to take the defensive, due to Chinese attacks. He said efforts had been made for a peaceful adjustment, but it was finally found necessary to hand the Chinese an ultimatum.

The general's reply was somewhat confused when a correspondent inquired how he expected to break the anti-Japanese boycott through drastic action. He said that phase of the campaign would be handled through the diplomatic branch of the Japanese government.

Lieut. Gen. Uyeda declared that Japanese antagonism is directed only against the 19th Route army and not toward Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, unofficial Chinese dictator, or the Chinese people. He said even part of the 19th army might become friendly to Japan and explained in detail that the Japanese army only insisted on demilitarization of the area north and east of Shanghai and did not intend to interfere with the section west or south of the city. He became indefinite when asked regarding Japan's plans for government of the demilitarized zone.

TOKIO THREATENS TO RUSH MORE TROOPS TO CHINA

Ponders Move as Nation Goes to Polls.

TOKIO, Feb. 20.—[Saturday.]—(AP)—Japan's voters went to the polls to settle domestic policies today while government leaders pondered the need of sending still more troops to Shanghai to enforce their ultimatum.

PREMIER INUKAI.
[Acme Photo.]

The Selyukai [government] party was expected to emerge victorious over the Minseito [opposition] party in a campaign fought chiefly on the inflation issue. Both parties support in the main the state's military policy and the result is unlikely to affect the course of the Sino-Japanese conflict.

Calls on Emperor.

Premier Inukai called on Emperor Hirohito last night and was understood to have submitted grave decisions for his approval. His move came after an important cabinet meeting at which Minister of War Araki warned that Marshal Chiang Kai-shek was reported to be leading heavy reinforcements into the Shanghai lines in defiance of the Japanese demands.

Araki said that if these reports were true the Japanese land and naval forces would be placed in a more serious position and that he might be forced to dispatch additional reinforcements to China.

"Our intelligence reports indicate that there are at present 90,000 Chinese soldiers facing our men in the Shanghai area," he said, "including Chiang's troops, which are reported to have joined the 19th route army. If these reports prove true we may be compelled to reinforce our expedition proportionately."

Ready for Emergency.

He declined to say how many more soldiers would be necessary, nor whether they already were prepared to leave, beyond admitting that the general staff was always ready for emergencies.

Accusations that the United States had a hand in the drafting of the league of nations' latest note of protest were withdrawn by the foreign office. Official dispatches from Geneva were said to have rectified the misunderstanding and shown that Secretary General Sir Eric Drummond was the author.

CHINESE BANDITS GET RANSOM, BUT KEEP U. S. CAPTIVE

PEIPING, Feb. 19.—(AP)—Plans for the release of Capt. Charles Baker, American master of a Yangtze river boat who was captured by bandits on Jan. 6, have miscarried, a dispatch received at the United States legation from the American consul at Hankow said today.

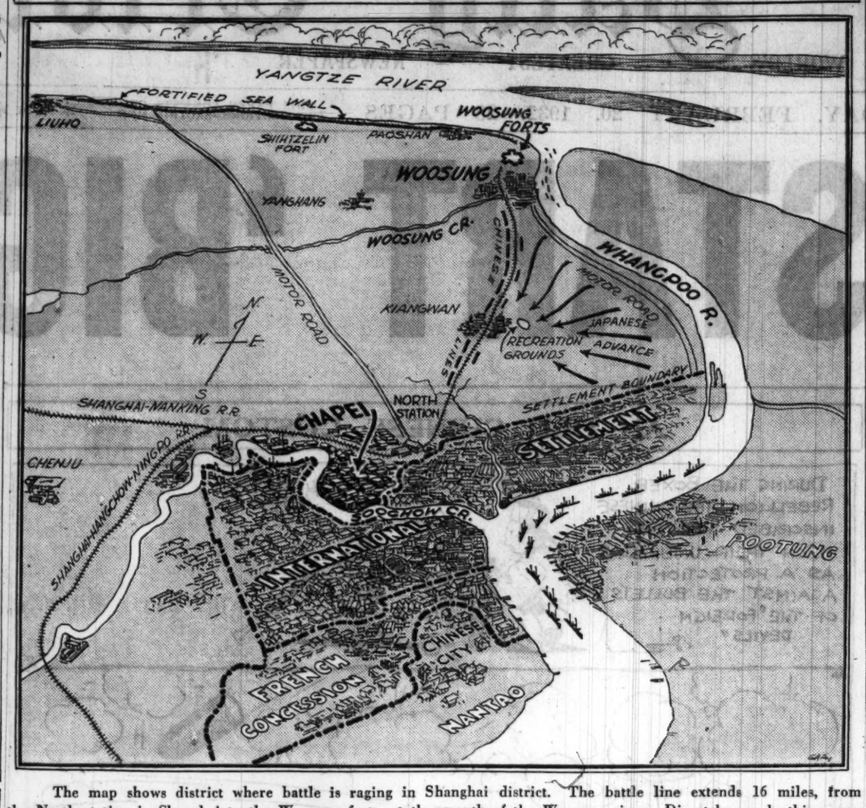
An agent of the Yangtze Rapids Steamship company, owners of Capt. Baker's boat, arranged to pay the bandits 10,000 silver dollars and transported the money to Pailochi, 120 miles west of Hankow, by launch.

The bandits broke faith, the dispatch said, after receiving the money and took Capt. Baker back to the mountains. They are now demanding 50,000 silver dollars, the dispatch said.

Senate Backs J. C. Grew as New Envoy to Japan

Washington, D. C., Feb. 19.—(AP)—The senate today approved Joseph Clark Grew to shoulder this country's diplomatic burden at Tokio. He is to leave his post as ambassador to Turkey within a few days and is expected to relieve W. Cameron Forbes as envoy to Japan within six or seven weeks. En route he will come to Washington to discuss far eastern problems with President Hoover and Secretary Stimson.

GREAT JAPANESE OFFENSIVE UNDER WAY



The map shows district where battle is raging in Shanghai district. The battle line extends 16 miles, from the North station in Shanghai to the Woosung forts, at the mouth of the Woosung river. Dispatches early this morning indicated that the heaviest fighting was centered around the village of Kiangwan, between Shanghai and Woosung, where Japanese infantrymen were trying to drive a wedge through the Chinese front line. Bombs dropped by Japanese planes set Chinese barracks and other buildings in Kiangwan on fire. The first wave of Japanese infantry and tanks captured the race track outside of Kiangwan, but were driven back from the village, their objective. Foreign observers said the Chinese were holding thir ground in Chapei against Japanese attacks.

JAPANESE TURN "BOY EMPEROR" INTO DICTATOR

Young Manchu Made Head of Manchuria.

TOKIO, Feb. 19.—(AP)—A slight young Manchu, who used to be the emperor of all China and Manchuria, was reported today to have been returned to power in only a fraction of his once far flung empire.

HENRY PU-YI.

Henry Pu-yi, who never cared for affairs of state, was hailed by the press as the first "censhu"—sovereign or chief executive—of the new republic of Ankuo [land of peace] comprising Manchuria and inner Mongolia.

Dictator for Life.

Dispatches from Mukden, accompanied by pictures of the former "boy emperor," Husan Tung, said he had been made dictator for life over the government set up yesterday by Chinese officials parading under the name of the executive committee of northeastern Manchuria.

It was the first time that the Japanese government had allowed his name to be used, although it had been understood for many weeks that when he was brought to Manchuria last fall his place had been selected for him. He is expected to rule with the aid of a Chinese premier and under the direction of Japan.

But it was also reported that he had refused to assume the office unless he was made king or emperor, insisting upon a restoration of the glory of the Manchu dynasty and the "dragon throne," and there was some confusion as to whether he would rule as a democrat or an autocrat.

Whisked Away by Japan.

Pu-yi was whisked out of Tientsin by the Japanese last fall when the effects of the Manchurian conquest threatened to spread to that city and was set up at a resort near Dairen.

He became emperor in 1908 at the age of two and abdicated four years later with the formation of the Chinese republic.

Hold Back Your Army! League Begs; Too Late! Japan Replies

BY JAY ALLEN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GENEVA, Feb. 19.—It is up to the league of nations assembly now to see what can be done about the Sino-Japanese war. The council tonight called the assembly to meet on March 3, after convening at the eleventh hour and politely asking the Japanese to hold back its army at Shanghai.

J. PAUL-BONCOUR.

"If the delegate from Japan could extend the ultimatum ordering Chinese troops to evacuate," Joseph Paul-Boncour, president of the council, said, "what an example he would give, what service he would perform for the league of nations!"

Minutes Tick Away.

Looking at the clock in the council room ticking off the minutes, he continued:

"That ultimatum may take effect within the next few hours. Indeed, if this meeting is prolonged, we would be in the tragic situation of deliberating this situation while a real battle is being fought."

The little Japanese delegate, Naotake Sato, said stonily that he had heard this appeal and that if the council were asking merely for both parties to cease firing and not for Japan to withdraw, he would be glad to transmit the request to Tokio. But he said the council should also appeal to the Chinese.

Paul-Boncour assured Sato that everything depended on an extension of the ultimatum. The Japanese delegate nodded politely. Once in the corridor, he looked at his watch and said regretfully that he was afraid no telegrams could reach Shanghai in time to avoid the battle, then, according to calculations, only an hour and a half away.

Chinese Call Session.

The Chinese this morning asked that the council meet at once to consider what "measures of conservation" they intended to take to prevent bloodshed. The council actually met at 5:30 p. m. The Japanese, by their own admission, were asked too late to hold off, and the "wish" was expressed by council members that representatives of the powers could do something on the spot.

Paul-Boncour in his speech explained that the council is not convening the assembly as proof of its impotence but because the Chinese have demanded it. He denied that it is through the league's incompetence that matters had reached their present stage. The league must act within the framework of the covenant, he said.

Unhappily, it has not been allowed to work in peace, he remarked, reproaching the Japanese and adding that he thought that Tokio might have heeded the council's appeal.

Others Back Him Up.

Others backed him up. The marquis of Londonderry of Great Britain endorsed the appeal to Japan and spoke of "the impending catastrophe."

"I am not losing hope," he said. "The British government is not relaxing its efforts."

China gave the Japanese a tongue lashing today. Dr. W. W. Yen, Chinese delegate, first accused the Japanese of using dumdum bullets and poison gas.

Dr. Yen opened up again!

"China was suffering from floods and 40,000,000 people were starving," he cried. "Others helped us. Japan invaded us. Japan is famed for her knightlyhood and yet she is fighting China. She has not declared war but is taking all the advantages of war by refusing to shoulder its responsibilities. Is that bravery? Is that courage?

Sees Failure for Japan.

"It is the height of folly for Japan to act like this. No settlement obtained by force will ever be permanent. Japan will fail in Manchuria. We are sending 1,000,000 Chinese there this year.

The Japanese delegate talked about Manchuria at length. About Shanghai, he had very little to say.

"We only want to protect ourselves," he said. "After that we will withdraw."

BRITAIN CREATES 'WAR COUNCIL' ON SHANGHAI CRISIS

Empowered to Take Any Action for Protection.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 19.—The British government tonight established an emergency "council of action," composed of members of the cabinet, with full powers to take any measures deemed necessary to protect British interests in Shanghai.

The council was named at an extraordinary cabinet meeting following reports from Shanghai that Japan had launched her great offensive to drive the Chinese army out of the city.

It was also learned tonight that plans have been completed for the immediate evacuation of British women and children from Shanghai, if necessary.

High Officials on Council.

The emergency council is composed of Stanley Baldwin, lord president of the council; Sir John Simon, foreign secretary; Lord Hailsham, secretary for war; Sir Bolton Eyres-Monsell, first lord of the admiralty; Sir Samuel Hoare, secretary of state for India; Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer; J. H. Thomas, secretary for dominions.

The Shanghai crisis was considered so serious that these ministers were empowered to take any steps, naval or military, which may be necessary to protect British life and property in the war area.

Instructions were given to the war office and the admiralty to stay open day and night until further notice. The chief of the imperial government staff, Field Marshal Sir George F. Milne, and naval heads are standing by over the week-end.

On Duty Day and Night.

Special intelligence officers, who will be in constant touch with British warships at Shanghai through the admiralty wireless, have been instructed to keep the cabinet council informed of all naval and military developments, minute by minute, during the week-end. The council members will be prepared to meet on an hour's notice, day or night, if developments warrant.

The view taken is that no useful purpose can be served at present by sending further notes to China or Japan. The British and American governments are understood to be acting in coöperation and it has been agreed that neither country shall take action without notifying the other.

Japs Fire Envoy Who Said War Is Aimed Against Reds

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LISBON, Portugal, Feb. 19.—The newspaper Diario de Lisboa announced today that the Japanese government has ordered its minister to Portugal and Spain to resign following a recent declaration by the Japanese legation in Lisbon, published in O Seculo, that the bellicose attitude of Japan in China is intended to crush once and for all soviet influence in the far east.

U. S. CIVILIANS IN SHANGHAI MAY BE MOVED TO SHIPS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 19.—The American diplomatic guns remained silent tonight as the world awaited the impending clash of Japanese and Chinese armies on the Shanghai battle front. State department officials said tonight that no new notes had gone forward and none were contemplated pending further developments. The note holding Japan responsible for any damages caused to Americans at Shanghai still reposed in the American embassy safe at Tokio pending further consideration.

State department officials disclosed tonight that American officials in the Shanghai area have been clothed with full authority to take whatever steps are necessary to protect American lives and property.

Should it become necessary in the eyes of these officials, American civilians will be moved onto ships in the river. Officials said tonight, however, that wholesale evacuation of American nationals is not expected. For the present Americans are being sent to the safest areas in the international settlements.

DEMOCRATS ACT TO GET ECONOMY IN GOVERNMENT

Plan Program to Slash Bureau Waste.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
Washington, D. C., Feb. 19.—[Special.]—Following the introduction of a resolution in the house today for the creation of an economy committee, it became known that the Democratic leadership of that body is perfecting a program of radical deflation of the paternalistic, subventionary and regulatory activities of the federal government now costing the taxpayers more than 800 millions of dollars a year.

HENRY RAINEY.

This is the first definite step taken by the responsible majority of either house of congress in the direction of the objective of the fight for radical reduction of federal expenditures and for withdrawal of the central government from activities originally conceived to be the functions of the states.

With a tidal wave of popular sentiment now sweeping the country and constituents raining demands for action upon senators and congressmen, the leaders of the Democratic house, which controls the national purse strings, found it expedient to initiate a policy contemplating a more radical scheme of retrenchment than the cheese paring economies in expenditures being effected by the President's budget bureau and the house appropriations committee.

The Democratic Program.

The Democratic program provides for action along these lines:

1. A survey of the economies possible of accomplishment in the administrative branch of the government by every means, including the transfer and consolidation of bureaus, boards and commissions and other reorganization and abolition of activities representing encroachment upon the functions of the states.

2. A horizontal further reduction of appropriations for the next fiscal year to be effected by a joint resolution of congress after the passage of the last of the appropriation bills at this session.

3. Elimination of paternalistic and unnecessary activities to be effected immediately by cutting off appropriations for the bureaus, boards, and commissions involved and eventually by repeals of the acts creating the units.

This course was agreed upon at a series of conferences in the last 48 hours in which Speaker John N. Garner [Dem., Tex.], Majority Leader Henry Rainey [Dem., Ill.], Chairman Joseph W. Byrns [Dem., Tenn.] of the appropriations committee, and Chairman John J. Cochran [Dem., Mo.] of the committee on expenditures in the executive departments participated.

Economy Committee Proposed.

In pursuance of the policy adopted, Representative Lewis W. Douglas [Dem., Ariz.], member of the appropriations committee, introduced in the house late this afternoon a resolution providing for the creation of an economy committee of seven members and the rules committee prepared to procure its immediate adoption. The members are to be Chairman Byrns and Representative William R. Wood [Rep., Ind.], ranking minority member of the appropriations committee; Chairman Cochran and Representative William Williamson [Rep., S. D.], ranking minority member of the expenditures committee, and three others to be named by the speaker.

The resolution directs the committee to investigate "economies in the federal government which may be effected without impairing the necessary functions of government," and to report the findings on economies to the appropriations committee and, on reorganization, to the expenditures committee, not later than April 15, next.

Premises Set Forth.

The resolution recited the following premises of the action:

"The current operating expenses of the federal government have increased approximately one billion dollars within the span of the last decade.

"The industrial depression, under which the country, its industries and its people are now and have been suffering has substantially reduced the revenue accruing to the United States.

"In addition to a cumulated deficit of over three billion dollars for the years 1931 and 1932 there is an estimated deficit exclusive of debts retirement requirements of one billion 250 million dollars for the year 1933.

"The deficit for 1933 must be eliminated and the budget balanced by the practice of economy and the elimination of appropriations for objects not now necessary and essential to the orderly and requisite activities of government."

Republican Retrenchment Moves.

From the Republican side there came two moves toward retrenchment, Representative William P. Holaday [Rep., Ill.], offered a resolution to carry into effect President Hoover's government reorganization recommendations. It would authorize the President by executive orders within one year after adoption of the resolution to abolish or combine any commissions, boards, departments, bureaus or divisions, congress to be advised thereof within ten days. By the terms of a proviso the aggregate pay of employés of the reorganized unit might not exceed 80 per cent of the aggregate pay of the units replaced.

Representative C. William Ramseyer [Rep., Ia.], introduced a bill to create a reorganization board composed of 2 senators, 2 congressmen and a chairman appointed by the President to survey government reorganization and report by June 30, 1934.

Would Start on "Farm Board."

"Now is the time to cut out the dead wood of government," said Mr. Cochran. "If we fail to make a radical reduction of expenditures the government will blow up financially. The department of agriculture is a good place to begin. We have been spending millions teaching the farmers to produce the surpluses by which they have been impoverished. Why continue doing that?"

Wm. J. Maloney, 50 Years a City Employe, Is Dead

William J. Maloney, 72 years old, who had been an inspector in the department of public works in Chicago for more than 50 years, died of pneumonia in his home at 5818 Erie street yesterday. Funeral service will be held at 10 o'clock Monday morning from St. Catherine of Sienna church in Oak Park. Burial will be in Calvary cemetery. Mr. Maloney is survived by one son, Father Joseph A. Maloney of St. Bridget's church.

Michigan Cherry Queen Here

Arrives for Contest

Miss Maxine Weaver, 18-year-old cherry queen of Michigan, arrived in Chicago yesterday to spend Washington's 200th birthday taking part in the first national cherry pie baking contest. Miss Weaver will present the $500 prize offered by the national cherry week committee, to the winning girl on Monday.

All morning in the kitchen of the Morrison hotel, the state winners of Wisconsin, New York, Michigan and Illinois, will bake cherry pies. These will be judged by the following Chicago women: Mrs. Wilbur Fribley, president of the Housewives' league, Mrs. Henry W. Hardy, president of the Chicago and Cook County Federation of Women's Clubs, and Miss Lillian Kemp, of the School of Domestic Arts and Sciences.

The cherry queen was met at the Pennsylvania limited at the Union station by Greeter Gaw upon her arrival from Traverse City, Mich. Also there to greet her was Miss Stella Snow, 17 years old, 714 West 61st street, the champion pie maker of Illinois.

MAYOR HOAN TELLS WAY TO GOOD CITY RULE

Good government cannot be had by a search for good officials alone, but by building an organization which backs good government, Mayor Dan Hoan of Milwaukee told members of the Press club, 30 North Dearborn street, yesterday.

"You can get anything in this republic by organizing for it," he said. "The Federalists got a strong central government by organizing for it, then the Jeffersonians got state rights by building an organization. We were put into a useless war by persons who organized to put us in it. Why do we have prohibition? Because a powerful organization with a powerful campaign fund was built up to get it.

"If you know who's giving the campaign funds, you know who's going to dictate over a candidate after he gets in office," Mayor Hoan said. "You can't let bankers, contractors, or public utility magnates in your organization and not expect them to get out of it more than they put in. Public utility interests constitute a source of corruption in nearly every city in the country, including your own."

FREED GUNMEN'S VICTIMS MAY GET PROBATION UPSET

The victims of Carl Parker, nephew of Judge Carl G. Sherwood of Clark, S. D., and Stanley Wilson, confessed gunmen, can appeal to Chief Justice Harry Fisher of the Criminal court to set aside the probation granted by Judge Charles C. Williams after he had once sentenced them to the penitentiary for terms of 1 year to life each. This announcement was made at the state's attorney's office yesterday after a conference between State's Attorney Swanson and Assistant Prosecutor William A. Rittenhouse.

The prosecutors decided that inasmuch as it was a judicial act which freed the two gunmen after some unusual court maneuvering, the responsibility for taking any action which might set it aside should come from the courts. If the seven known victims of the two gunmen want to make an appeal to the chief justice, it is said, the prosecutor's office is willing to assist in drawing a petition to override the probation granted.

RESERVE CREDIT WINS SPEEDY O.K. IN UPPER HOUSE

Senate Extends Time for Currency Issue.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
Washington, D. C., Feb. 19.—[Special.]—Without even the formality of a roll call the senate today approved the Glass-Steagall bill giving the member banks of the federal reserve system the right to receive loans on heretofore ineligible paper, and to the federal reserve banks the right to issue currency backed by United States government bonds.

SEN. JOHN THOMAS.

Instead of the originally contemplated one year limitation on this right to issue federal reserve notes on the basis of direct government obligations, the bill as passed extends the limitation to March 4, 1934.

Thomas Change Adopted.

The change was made through the adoption of an amendment offered by Senator Thomas [Dem., Okla.]. Though opposed by Senator Carter Glass [Dem., Va.], sponsor of the measure in the senate, and Senator Walcott [Rep., Conn.], Republican spokesman for the bill, the amendment found an oddly mixed support composed of some of the most vehement radicals and many of the most conservative regulars.

The vote on the amendment's adoption was 46 to 18.

An amendment offered by Senator Blaine [Radical Rep., Wis.] was less successful. Designed, in Senator Blaine's words, to guarantee that the "expanded credit and currency go into the channels of industry, commerce, and agriculture instead of being used for speculation and gambling on the stock market" the amendment sought to provide severe penalties for any member bank using its new privileges to reloan money for speculative purposes.

The bill as passed also carried an amendment which changed the clause permitting loans to be made to single member banks in "exceptional and exigent circumstances" and when the bank has no further eligible assets to permit it to obtain credit accommodations.

Includes Big Banks.

The earlier stipulation permitted only banks with a capital of $500,000 or less to take advantage of this provision. As amended this figure is increased to $2,000,000 which will take in, it was said, all but 136 of the country's largest banks.

The bill will now go to a conference committee of the two houses where difference between the house and senate versions will be ironed out.

PARTY HARMONY VITAL THIS YEAR, RITCHIE ASSERTS

New York, Feb. 19.—[Special.]—The Democratic party cannot afford to endanger its bright chances of winning in the presidential campaign this year by getting into a bitter factional fight in the national convention, Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, Maryland's candidate for the nomination for President, said today. He came to New York for social engagements, saying he was taking a little rest. In his suite in the Ambassador hotel he made a few comments on the drift of the campaign.

The governor said he would call on Alfred E. Smith some time during his visit, but that it would be a courtesy call and not for political discussion. In his brief conversation between breakfast and telephone calls, the governor made this remark:

"No candidate should ruin the Democratic chances of victory."

He was asked if he had any particular candidate in mind and instantly and emphatically said, "No." He repeated that he did not want his remark to be interpreted as applying to any one in particular of the many candidates, but said it would apply equally to all the candidates.

CARDOZO INDORSED BY SUPREME COURT AFTER DRY'S ATTACK

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
Washington, D. C., Feb. 19.—[Special.]—Members of a senate judiciary subcommittee today listened to William H. Anderson, ex-convict and ousted head of the New York Anti-Saloon league. They heard him assail Chief Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo of the New York State Court of Appeals. And when he had finished, they promptly and unanimously recommended that the senate approve President Hoover's choice of Justice Cardozo to fill the Supreme court vacancy left by the resignation of former Associate Justice Holmes.

Anderson served a term in Sing Sing prison upon conviction of altering the books of the New York Anti-Saloon league, of which he was state superintendent. He now styles himself general secretary of the American Protestant alliance.

Justice Cardozo was a member of the court when it refused to reverse the lower court's judgment against the Anti-Saloon league leader. In his testimony today Anderson ascribed this to a political plot in which the justice had aided Tammany.

The subcommittee's favorable report will be passed upon by the full judiciary committee next Wednesday with the probability that Justice Cardozo's nomination will be approved by the senate before the end of next week.

HE'D BE HAPPY IF COPS WOULD LET HIM ALONE

For an hour last night Roy Rainey, 35 years old, formerly of New York and now of 813 South Halsted street, pleaded before a jury of six men in the Oak Park court of Magistrate John L. Kreitzer.

Mr. Rainey was accused of disorderly conduct, along with one Joseph Manys. The police seized the two on suspicion they were shoplifters, but they were booked on the minor charge. They demanded a jury trial.

Rainey acted as his own lawyer and also for Manys. Eloquently he told of his career from childhood. He was thrust into the world on his own at an early age. He had tried to make good. But once he made a mistake. And since then, he shouted, the police had harassed him.

"The police hound me," he cried. "Won't you gentlemen announce to the world my right to the pursuit of life, happiness, and liberty without police interference?"

The jurors acquitted Manys, but they found Rainey guilty and fined him $40.

On the jury which convicted him sat Herbert Orth and Thomas Jones. Both are policemen.

MITCHELL GEM ROBBERS TO GO TO PRISON TODAY

Four members of the "42" gang who were sentenced in the Lake county court to serve terms of one year to life for the $150,000 gem robbery in the Lake Forest home of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Mitchell, will be taken to the state prison at Joliet today.

Preparations for the transfer were made last night, following expiration of the prisoners' 30 day stay. Sheriff Lester Tiffany of Lake county ordered a detail of armed guards to accompany the prisoners to prevent any attempts at liberation. Chief Deputy Thomas E. Kennedy was appointed to deliver them at the prison. It was said last night that the transfer might be made before daylight this morning

The convicted bandits are Frank Tufano, Paul Ross, alias Rossi, Nick Maentanis and Joe Perello. They were found guilty of raiding the Mitchell home Nov. 21, and robbing the Mitchells and seven guests, all members of Chicago and north shore society.

DROWNS HER 2 CHILDREN AND ENDS OWN LIFE

Estranged Wife's Letter Tells Reason for Act.

A young mother who feared her estranged husband would take their two small children away from her drowned the children in the bathtub of her home yesterday and then killed herself by swallowing poison and submerging herself in the same water filled tub in which the youngsters had died.

The victims of the tragedy were Mrs. Mabel Randall, 26 years old, of 1507 East Marquette road, and Ruth, 4 years old, and Robert, 2. She was the wife of Frank L. Randall, 6136 Kimbark avenue, who told Woodlawn police he is treasurer of the Taylor Trunk company, 673 North Halsted street.

Mother Finds Bodies.

The deaths were discovered last evening by Mrs. Katherine De Gries. Mrs. Randall's mother, with whom she lived. She returned home after an absence of two days, during which she visited friends. Alarmed because of difficulty in entering the apartment, Mrs. De Gries summoned Mrs. Bessie McGinty and the latter's nephew, Kelso Valentine, who live in the building, and they searched the apartment.

They found the children dead in a crib, their clothing still wet, and discovered the mother in the tub. The mouths of all were seared with acid Mrs. Randall after drowning the children had stuffed acid soaked cotton in their mouths, then swallowed several ounces of the poison herself and leaped into the tub. Dr. A. O. Stephenson, 6308 Cottage Grove avenue, said the children were drowned and that Mrs. Randall died of submersion and poisoning.

Letter Explains Action.

A three page letter written by Mrs. Randall and addressed to her mother was found. It gave directions for burial. In explaining her act, Mrs. Randall wrote that "Frank is threatening to take the children from me and it would be impossible for me to stand anything like that."

In another paragraph she said: "I am taking the children so he won't make them suffer as I have." She also instructed that her husband and his family be restrained from interfering with the funeral.

Randall told police he and his wife had separated three months ago because of incompatibility, but that he had hoped for a reconciliation.

Girl Brought to Chicago on Auto Theft Charge

Miss Eleanor Winkleman, 24 years old, 1237 East 47th street, was brought back to Chicago yesterday by police from Shelbyville, Ill., where she was arrested in an automobile which had been stolen from Fred Larson, 2342 North Kedzie avenue. Her companion, Harold Lee, disappeared when she was arrested.

RAID 3 LOOP "SUIT CLUBS"; 3 WOMEN, 22 MEN ARRESTED

Police last night raided the offices of three tailoring companies and arrested twenty-two men and three women on complaints that the concerns operated suit clubs in which members were defrauded.

The places visited were the Standish Tailoring company, 81 West Van Buren street; the Rogers Tailoring company, 506 South Wabash avenue, and the Monroe Tailors, also known as the Imperial, 215 South Market street. Sergt. Michael Ahern of the state's attorney's office, aided by detective bureau squads and investigators from the corporation counsel's office, made the raids and confiscated a wagonload of records.

According to Assistant State's Attorney Donald Thompson of the racket bureau and Gordon Smith, assistant manager of the Better Business bureau, members of the suit clubs complained that they paid $1 weekly for forty weeks. At the expiration of the installments each was entitled to a suit unless, meantime, they had won one. However, they complained, no suits were won and the suits finally offered for the $40 were worth about $12.50.

REPUBLIC BANK 1ST TO PAY 1930 TAXES, $368,012

Other Loop Institutions Ready to Contribute.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The Central Republic Bank and Trust company, of which Philip R. Clarke is president, paid all its 1930 personal property taxes yesterday. The payment was made within 30 minutes after the bill was delivered. The amount is $368,012.08 and no protest was made nor condition attached when the check for that sum was handed to Assistant County Treasurer Harry Perry. The payment was made by J. E. Lindquist, vice president of the bank.

"This sets an excellent example to other taxpayers," commented Mr. Perry to Mr. Lindquist.

Other Banks Take Action.

A vice president of the Continental Illinois bank conferred with County Clerk Sweitzer on the percentage of taxes which goes to each of the local governments. This indicates that this bank has purchased some 1930 tax anticipation warrants to aid the city, county, schools, and parks which will probably be turned in for their taxes.

"I got the impression the Continental would pay its taxes tomorrow or Tuesday," said Mr. Sweitzer.

The Harris Trust and Savings bank requested its tax bill before it had been reckoned, and intimated that it would pay as soon as it receives the official figure.

These three banks indicate that the larger financial institutions of the city, all of which have expert legal advice on assessments, will probably pay their taxes within the next few days as a civic duty as well as an aid to the hard pressed local governments.

Nineteen Banks Get Bills.

Otto Woerter, chief clerk of County Treasurer McDonough's office, delivered requests by messenger yesterday to 19 banks for a total of $3,450,000 in 1930 personal property taxes. These are all of the banks in the first five volumes of personal property taxes which have been completed by County Clerk Sweitzer.

Some of the banks, as listed on the tax books, have been merged or closed. These banks have an aggregate personal property tax valuation of $52,597,000, which at the 37 per cent ratio means an appraised value of their personal property totaling $142,157,000. The list of banks which have received their tax bills, together with the assessed value of personal property and taxes for 1930, follows:

	Valuation.	Taxes.
Douglas National..	$ 100,000	$ 6,743.06
Equit. Trust Co. of Chicago	87,500	5,897.90
First Nat. Bank..	8,500,000	572,912.83
Amalgamated T. & S. Bk. of Chgo..	130,000	8,763.72
Binga State Bank of Chicago	50,000	3,370.52
Central Mfg. Dist. of Chicago	300,000	20,220.00
Central Trust Co. of Illinois	5,466,000	368,012.08
Chicago Trust Co. of Chicago	900,000	60,660.00
Congress T. & S. Bank of Chicago	100,000	6,740.47
Cont. & Com.....	25,125,000	1,693,452.55
First Union Tr. & Savings	5,100,000	343,740.33
Foreman State Nat	110,000	7,419.25
Foreman State Tr. & Savings	25,000	1,685.24
Franklin Trust & Savings	120,000	8,088.28
Guardian National	400,000	26,960.39
Harris Tr. & Sav..	4,559,990	367,345.80
Kaufman State ...	80,000	5,392.15
Lincoln State	140,000	9,437.51
Nat. Bank of the Republic	1,312,500	88,483.33

Because some of the banks on this list are no longer in business it is not believed that the total tax will be collected.

Act to Fix Penalty Date.

Mayor Cermak said he expected that 50 per cent of the 1930 taxes would be collected within the next sixty days. Thomas D. Nash, attorney for County Treasurer McDonough, has asked the county board to aid in fixing a penalty date for real estate taxes. April 15 or May 1 were the two dates most frequently suggested yesterday.

Extensions will be completed and bills ready to be mailed today on all of the real estate in the loop area bounded by the Chicago river, south branch, and Roosevelt road. Mr. Nash desires that the county board hold a special meeting today so the penalty date may be affixed to the bills and sent out today and tomorrow.

The only opposition to the plan of having the property owners contribute at once to the support of the local governments came yesterday from President J. Soule Warterfield, president of the Chicago real estate board, in an address at the board's Washington bicentennial luncheon.

"The Chicago real estate board objects to any attempt to place the 1930 taxes in collection before a legal assessment roll has been made or the state legislature reconvened for the passage of relief bills," said Mr. Warterfield.

SCHOOLS' SINKING CREDIT INCREASES COAL COST $78,000

Because the school board cannot meet its obligations, a supply of coal sufficient to operate the schools for the remainder of the year will cost taxpayers an extra $78,000. This was revealed yesterday with the opening of new bids, made necessary by the refusal of contractors to deliver on credit under the terms of the old contracts.

The new bids averaged $5.07 a ton on the required 60,000 tons, as compared with an average of $3.77 under the old contracts. This 34 per cent increase was justified by the contractors, according to Chief Engineer John Howatt, on the ground that they will be forced to discount the tax anticipation warrants which they have agreed to take as payment.

Howatt said he would recommend award of the contracts at a special meeting of the board Tuesday because the supply is virtually exhausted.

LEADERS DECIDE TEACHERS WILL REMAIN ON JOB

Will Wait Longer in Hope of Relief.

A vote against the threatened walkout of the city's school teachers was passed last night at an executive conference of representatives of teacher unions in the union headquarters at 506 South Wabash avenue. Heads of the unions endorsed the campaign of Mayor Cermak to prevail upon property owners to pay a fair portion of their 1928 and 1929 taxes as leading toward payment of back salaries.

The conference was called to consider petitions for a strike being circulated throughout the city. Representatives were told the sentiment of teachers is overwhelmingly in favor of a walk out. A poll of one school in which 24 of 26 teachers supported the threatened strike was cited. After two hours of debate the unions voted to urge teachers to await results of relief measures not under way.

The conference was attended by Miss Agnes Clohesy, president of the Elementary Teachers' union; Miss Dorothy Weil, president of the Federation of Women High school teachers; Joseph Meade, president of the Men Teachers' union; Miss Kate Krauel, president of the School Board Playground Teachers union, and Miss Ann Larm, president of the Education Secretaries' union.

"We decided it would not be fair to teachers to ask them to walk out at this time," Miss Clohesy said. "A walkout would jeopardize pension and other rights. Further it would not be fair to the officials in their efforts to aid teachers. If the efforts fail the educational system will collapse so that a walkout will not be necessary."

Attorney Thurlow B. Essington, representing the teachers, will meet City Comptroller Szymczak, Corporation Counsel Sexton, School Board Attorney Thomas V. Sullivan and Attorney Theodore S. Chapman this morning to discuss the tax anticipation warrants which the school board is to issue to its employés next week.

COUNTY VICTOR ON APPEAL OF 1928 TAX CASE

The 1928 assessment as it affected an apartment building at 6922 Jeffery avenue was upheld by the state Supreme court yesterday. The high court reversed the decision of the Superior court, which held the assessment on the building excessive and reduced it by $18,000. The Supreme court held that the Superior court was without authority to do this.

County Attorney Hayden N. Bell, who represented the county in this suit, declared that the decision presaged a similar reversal of County Judge Jarecki's recent voiding of all the 1928 and 1929 tax levies for Cook county.

"This decision indicates that the Supreme court judges are standing as they always have stood on tax cases," he said. "If they continue to maintain the same attitude, Judge Jarecki's decision will be reversed."

The decision of the Supreme court read in part: "Where a bill to enjoin a collection of a tax alleges overvaluation of the complainant's property, the complainant must prove that the overvaluation then was made for some corrupt or illegal motive or was so grossly excessive as to be of itself evidence of fraud."

LIVELY SESSION IS DUE TODAY ON COUNTY BUDGET

A lively session is expected this morning when the county board holds its public hearing on the 1932 budget. Indications are that the commissioners will hear fiery criticism of the tentative budget which they have adopted. Representatives of discontented county employés, taxpayers, and civic organizations will be present.

This is the first hearing of the kind ever to be held on a county budget. It was provided for in a new law passed recently.

JUDGES EXPLODE COUNTY BOARD'S FEAR OF ECONOMY

Bench Denies Calling Halt on Discharges.

County officials may fire as many jobs holders as they wish without interference from Circuit court judges. This was the statement of Chief Justice William V. Brothers of the Circuit court after the judges had held a meeting in his chambers yesterday afternoon.

JUDGE BROTHERS.

In the last few weeks the county commissioners have often "passed the buck" to the judges, declaring they would be in contempt of court if they did not hire men to fill all the jobs that the judges allow for each fee office.

Brothers Condemns View.

"I can't believe that any intelligent man could take such a stand," said Judge Brothers. "The judges set only the maximum limit of positions in each fee office. Each county official may hire only half as many men if he thinks that he can still do the job efficiently, and certainly the judges will not condemn, but heartily approve.

"The judges have heretofore been reluctant to reply to the many foolish statements that have been made concerning their powers because of the position they hold. But it is time that the public understood just what the law says the judge should do.

"A committe of Circuit court judges hears the various heads of the county fee offices. Each official presents sworn testimony as to the number of employés he thinks he needs. The judges then act as a jury in deciding how many men he should have to run his office efficiently.

Permitted to Reduce Forces.

"If the county official later decides he can run his office efficiently with less men, there is no reason in the world why he shouldn't cut the number of employés. Bear in mind, also, that the judges have nothing to do with appropriations for salaries. The county commissioners may decide to appropriate just as much for salaries as they wish and thus practically have the entire power of allotting the number of jobs in each office.

"It should also be remembered that the judges fix the number of positions for fee offices only. There are many more positions in nonfee offices with which the judges have nothing to do."

Solution of Problem of Paschen Cattle Expected

A solution of the livestock problem at Paschendale, the estate of Christian A. Paschen, former city building commissioner, near Antioch, appeared to be near yesterday. Creditors who obtained a judgment against Paschen have sought to sell the bulls, calves, turkeys and farm equipment to satisfy the judgment. They were prevented from doing so by an injunction issued by the federal court. Yesterday, after a brief hearing before Referee in Bankruptcy Henry A. Parkin, it was announced that Mr. Paschen would be allowed "a reasonable length of time" in which to raise money to satisfy the creditors.

are going out. We have a plan to persuade people to pay part of their 1928 and 1929 taxes.

"I have been charged with consenting to the recess of the legislature. You know I urged you to plead that the legislature remain in session until we obtained some relief. In my criticisms of the lack of action I have made no reflection upon the governor nor the general assembly."

New Session Is Urged.

Ald. Barnet Hodes [7th] presented a resolution to ask Gov. Emmerson to call a fourth special session of the legislature to relieve Chicago before the legislators reassemble on April 19.

This same idea was advanced in the council committee on judiciary and state legislation earlier in the day. That committee decided that a plan acceptable to the city council, at least, should be first adopted. A subcommittee headed by Ald. James R. Quinn [50th] was appointed to work out a plan, and that group conferred with County Tax Attorney Heyden Bell and Attorneys William B. Hale and Lester Falk yesterday afternoon.

Ald. O'Grady and others urged a sales tax as one way out. The Hodes resolution was referred to this subcommitee, which hopes to have a program ready by next Tuesday when the council will convene in special session to consider it. The discussion yesterday indicated that the subcommittee will recommend a pending bill which would confer authority upon the county judge to order a reassessment for 1928 and 1929, and perhaps 1930 taxes.

Mayor Phones Taxpayers.

In the meantime three plans have been adopted to prevail upon the property owners to pay a fair portion of their 1928 and 1929 taxes. The mayor has a list of property owners who owe $20,000 or more in taxes. He said that he had called several of these on the phone and they had agreed to pay what they considered fair. The mayor announced he would have the city controller call every one of them.

"If that plan does not succeed," said the mayor to the Chicago school teachers who called upon him at his invitation yesterday morning, "I will turn the list over to you. Perhaps you can persuade these property owners to pay the part of the taxes which they deem fair.

"I have spent more time the last week attempting to get a loan from the bankers than doing anything else. If we cannot get a loan, then we will almost have to close the city hall."

No Money for Schools.

The teachers appeared with a request that more of the city's trust and surplus funds be invested in school tax warrants. The mayor, City Controller Szymczak and Corporation Counsel Sexton convinced the teachers that this is impossible. The teachers appeared satisfied and several of them complimented the mayor on what he is attempting to do.

Another plan to get in taxes was adopted by the city council by the adoption of a resolution presented by Ald. John Toman [23d]. This ordered the city controller to "deduct the amount due for taxes from the sums which the city may owe contractors and tradesmen for services rendered, or for merchandise, or moneys due for property taken in condemnation, or from other indebtedness incurred, where contractors or tradesmen are delinquent in the payment of their taxes."

The resolution also asserts "that when any such delinquent tax payers are city employés, then it shall be the duty of the city controller to deduct the taxes due and payable from the salaries of such employés."

Mayor Has an Added Plan.

Still another plan was announced by the mayor, as follows:

"I can take away the police details from those who have not paid their taxes. I can refuse to sign ordinances and permits for persons who have declined to pay their taxes. I have told the teachers they can tell their pupils to request their parents to pay their taxes."

"The tax dodgers are attempting to wreck the community," said James A. Meade, teachers' representative, to the mayor. "They are worse than Al Capone."

D. F. Kelly of the committee to sell tax anticipation warrants for the local governments attended the meeting between the mayor and the school teachers. He was asked what aid he could give.

Decision Halts Payments.

"It is hard to sell tax anticipation warrants, Mr. Kelly replied. "The decision of Judge Jarecki, holding the 1928 and 1929 taxes illegal, has killed the payment of taxes. No one is paying. The bankers cannot take more warrants until they can get rid of the enormous amounts they now have on hand.

"I have seen the mayor's list of property owners who owe $20,000 or more and I would be ashamed to be on that list. I shall see Judge Jarecki and urge him to aid in the collection of taxes. He has the courage to do what he deems is right. He can appeal to the taxpayers to pay at least 50 per cent of their taxes as a patriotic duty to the city."

Falls 2 Stories in Air Shaft; May Die of Injuries

Thomas Dwyer, 34 years old, 2551 North 72d avenue, Elmwood Park, was possibly fatally injured last night when he fell from a window on the seventh floor at 111 North Dearborn street into an air shaft. His fall was halted at the fifth floor level by a roof. He was found on the roof by William Halpin, a janitor. At the county hospital it was said his skull had been fractured.

SCIENCE PEPS UP CAPONS TO GROW LIKE ROOSTERS

New Hormones Treatment Is Described.

Science has discovered a new way to overcome the loss of glandular activity in male fowls and mammals and even to restore a great part of such glandular power after it has been destroyed.

A description of the modern methods used and of the effects of the treatment, which involves injecting fluid which contains harmones, or activating secretions into the blood of capons and sterile rats, was given before the American Chemical society last night in the Midland club by Prof. F. C. Koch of the University of Chicago.

Give up Transplantation.

Until recently experiments designed to regenerate or rejuvenate powers of animals have taken the form of glandular transplantation. A few years ago there was great popular interest in the transfer of goat or monkey glands, but the effects were temporary. Prof. Koch pointed out that the injections of serum containing harmones could be given daily and that they apparently restored virility.

Capons, for instance, under the treatment, again grew full combs, wattles, and ear lobes and became like roosters in all secondary characteristics of sex. Changes in the small mammals were equally marked. Their destroyed glands grew again and functioned.

Not Ready for Mankind.

Prof. Koch's remarks tended to minimize to the possibility that the fountain of youth has a workable substitute in the new discovery.

"It would be dangerous to use the fluid on men now," he said. "There are inter-relations of the glands which we do not understand. It is possible that this new extract would injure the pituitary gland.

"However, these experiments have opened a tremendous field for biological study which may lead toward a solution of the enigma of the relation of the glands to changes in the human body."

Another obstacle to human treatment, he said, was the difficulty of obtaining a sufficient amount of the hormones in the form needed. It may be obtained from the tissues of animals or from the human body. So far most of the supplies for the University of Chicago experiments have come from cattle, rams and hogs killed at the stockyards, and a great amount of tissue is needed for a small amount of extract.

Druggan Gets Another Week's Respite from Prison

Terry Druggan, who is under sentence of two and one-half years in the penitentiary for income tax evasion, was granted another week's delay of his trip to Leavenworth penitentiary by Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson yesterday on representations of his physician, Dr. Louis Schmidt, that he is too ill to be removed from St. Luke's hospital. Frankie Lake, Druggan's former pal in the beer business, who was sentenced to eighteen months in the penitentiary for income tax dodging, started serving his term three weeks ago.

DAUGHTER FAILS TO RECOGNIZE HER MOTHER IN COURT

A reunion between Mrs. Valeria Grosiczka, 4725 South Lincoln street, and her 15 year old daughter, whom she had not seen for ten years, ended in tears yesterday when the daughter failed to recognize her mother.

The reunion took place in the courtroom of Circuit Judge Daniel P. Trude. Mrs. Grosiczka divorced her husband in 1922 and was awarded custody of her daughters, Ellen and Sophie. Grosiczka, however, fled to Poland with Ellen. He returned five years later and recently sent for the girl. Sophie, now 11 years old, who had remained with her mother, also met her sister for the first time yesterday.

Attorney Victor Frohlich went before the court with a motion to enforce the original order giving Ellen to her mother. Judge Trude granted the order for the period of one month, during which time the social service bureau will investigate both homes to determine in which the child should be placed. Mrs. Grosiczka charged that her former husband had prejudiced her daughter against her, telling the child she was dead. Ellen, not knowing her mother, expressed a preference for remaining with her father.

Bandit Reveals $7,229 Loot Hidden Under Stone

Clarksville, Ark., Feb. 19.— (AP) — Directed to its hiding place by the man captured late yesterday and identified as one of the robbers of the bank of Hartman, officers today found $7,229 of the loot under a stone and some leaves in the woods near Ozark.

$6,000,000 SET AS COUNTY NEED IN RELIEF FUND

Part to Pay Rolls Already Incurred for Poor.

As much as $6,000,000 may be needed by the county bureau of public welfare to augment its regular budget of $500,000 for relief work this year, the county notified the Emergency Relief commission yesterday.

EMMET WHEALAN.

The relief commission has the duty of dispensing the $18,750,000 charity fund authorized by the legislature and the $6,000,000 would be taken from this fund. No money would actually be turned over to the county or to any other agency, however, the method being for the commission to approve bills spent for relief, after careful investigation.

About half the county's suggested allotment would reimburse the county for expenditures already made for relief, bills for this work being unpaid while the county waited for legislation at Springfield. The county had a $5,000,000 bond issue bill in the legislature which it withdrew when the Joint Emergency Relief fund began its campaign for charity legislation.

Officials at Conference.

President Emmett Whealan and Commissioners Kelly, Busse, Sears, and Kavanagh, and Efficiency Expert J. L. Jacobs, represented the county at the conference. The relief commission members present included Samuel Insull Jr., Edward A. Cudahy, and Victor A. Olander. Frank D. Loomis spoke for the Joint Emergency Relief fund.

About $7,000,000 of state warrants issued to raise the $18,750,000 charity fund already have been sold, the relief commission said yesterday, and a vigorous campaign to dispose of the remainder will be undertaken next week. Some new selling features will be adopted, it was said, the details of which will be announced later.

According to Mr. Loomis, the Joint Emergency Relief fund now has 14 service stations in operation on the Red Cross plan of disaster relief, for the sole purpose of caring for the needs of the unemployed. This is part of the plan to allow the five major charities united with the fund to return to their own special fields of work among the poor.

To Aid 46,000 Families.

The charities—the Salvation Army, United, Catholic, and Jewish charities, and the Red Cross—will continue to operate on their own budgets, augmented, if necessary, by the relief fund, when the plan is completed. About 46,000 families would be cared for by the service stations.

Joel D. Hunter, superintendent of the United Charities, made an investigation yesterday of the assertions of Luther Steem, 3209 Prairie avenue, who told police on Thursday night that the United Charities station at 2959 Michigan avenue had been caring for him and his family and that he had been enabled to purchase a $75 automobile although he is out of work.

Mr. Hunter reported to Mr. Loomis that the United Charities had helped the Steem family since October, giving them $20 in grocery orders, but no cash, each month.

Torrents of Rain, Intense Heat Menace Lima, Peru

LIMA Peru, Feb. 19.—(AP)—Lima's water supply was threatened today by the heaviest rains since the summer of 1925, and the country was sweltering in 100-degree heat. The purifying plant could not filter the thick yellowish mud stirred up by flood waters. Chosica, winter resort, 25 miles from Lima, was reported flooded. The last train from Lima was caught in a landslide and wrecked last night, although none was hurt.

COOK COUNTY TAX BILL AMONG FIVE SIGNED BY GOVERNOR EMMERSON

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 19.—[Special.]—Five house bills of the first special session were signed today by Gov. Emmerson.

Most important among them is the Schnackenberg measure, house bill 282, which will give Cook county taxpayers credit for money they pay or have paid on 1928, 1929, or 1930 taxes in the event a reassessment is ordered. The bill carried the emergency clause and is effective at once. Its enactment into law is expected to stimulate collections of Cook county's 1930 taxes.

Other bills signed follow:

H. B. 252—Roderick—Authorizes building and loan associations to borrow money for payment of withdrawals or maturities.

H. B. 233—Lyons—Removes minimum interest requirement of 3 per cent on deposit of funds of city under commission form of government.

H. B. 35 and 36—Governor's tax conference bills. Permits allowances to be made in county and municipalities appropriations to cover the loss and cost of collecting taxes to be levied for the fiscal year and also the amount of taxes so levied, for the nonpayment of which, real estate shall be forfeited to the state.

All the bills signed today carry emergency clauses.

SLAYER MUST SERVE 14 YEAR TERM IN PRISON

Text of Decision by Justices Given.

however, went into the importance of the technicality assigned by Justices De Young and Dunn, cited many cases, and held that the inadvertent inclusion of the manslaughter verdict was not such a grave error as to warrant upsetting the conviction, and that the action of the judge in withdrawing the verdict was proper.

Mr. Rathbun, asked last night to comment on the action of the Supreme court, replied:

"The decision speaks for itself."

Opportunity for Rehearing.

Under the customary procedure of the Supreme court, Brothers is given an opportunity to present a petition for a rehearing. If his attorneys present such a petition, it may be heard at the April term of court. Should Brothers fail to file the petition, the court will issue a mandate commanding the Cook county sheriff to take the defendant to Joliet penitentiary to serve his term. Brothers has been held in the county jail since his arrest on Dec. 22, 1930.

The capture of Brothers was the climax of a long search which was organized and financed by THE TRIBUNE. The investigation of Lingle's murder was led by Charles F. Rathbun and Pat Roche. Mr. Rathbun, a member of the law firm of Kirkland, Fleming, Green & Martin, regular counsel for THE TRIBUNE, was appointed a special assistant to State's Attorney John A. Swanson. Mr. Roche was then, as now, chief investigator for the state's attorney.

After Brothers was captured, Prosecutor Swanson assigned Assistant State's Attorney C. Wayland Brooks, who had achieved a brilliant record as a trial lawyer, to present the evidence to a jury. Mr. Brooks, with the aid of Assistant State's Attorney John Holman, conducted the trial for the state.

Suffered Many Disappointments.

During the months of the search for the murderer of Lingle, dozens of suspects were traced down and captured by Rathbun and Roche and their staff of investigators. Many times they suffered disappointments as the clews dissolved under investigations, and the suspects, being captured, were found not to be the murderer.

Finally an undercover investigator, John Hagan, was sent into the gangs of Chicago to seek by that means the answer to the crime. He spent many weeks mingling with Chicago gangsters, and finally learned that the murderer of Lingle was named "Buster," and that he associated with another gangster named Pat Hogan.

Hagan then located Hogan in New York, curried an acquaintance with him, and spent weeks in constant company with Hogan. For a time Hogan never mentioned the Lingle case, nor did he disclose the identity of "Buster." Finally the gangster, convinced that in Hagan he had a fellow criminal, told the undercover man that "Buster" had killed Lingle, and then Hagan was able to inveigle Hogan into disclosing "Buster's" whereabouts.

Finally Seized in Flat.

Rathbun and Roche, who had kept in constant communication with Hagan, directing him in his contacts with the gangster Hogan, spent days in a surveillance of "Buster's" activities, and finally trapped the suspect in a south side apartment hotel.

His name was then found to be Leo V. Brothers, although he had been hiding in Chicago under an alias of "Louis V. Bader." It was learned that Brothers was a fugitive from St. Louis, where he had committed another murder in full view of witnesses who had known him intimately. Many other crimes were laid to Brothers, and to escape all of them the gangster had fled from St. Louis immediately after the murder in that city.

Hired by Chicago Gangs.

Through his gangster connections he contacted with leaders of the gangs in Chicago, who hired him to kill Lingle. He has refused to disclose the names of those who hired him or to give the motive which inspired the killing.

After a preliminary investigation had disclosed the extent of Brothers' record, the witnesses to the Lingle murder were called into see Brothers, and they identified him positively as the killer.

MAJORITY OPINION

Text of Decision Affirming Brothers' Conviction

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 19.—[Special.]—The majority opinion in the Leo Brothers case, read by Justice Norman L. Jones, was as follows:

Leo V. Brothers, the defendant, was found guilty by a jury in the Criminal court of Cook county of the murder of Alfred J. Lingle and his punishment was fixed at fourteen years in the penitentiary. Motions for a new trial and in arrest of judgment were overruled.

Lingle, reporter on THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, was killed on June 9, 1930, at about 1:30 p. m. in a tunnel used by foot passengers under Michigan boulevard, in Chicago, and connecting Randolph street with an Illinois Central railroad depot. He was shot in the back of the head with a revolver. He fell face down, with both hands in his pockets, a stub of a cigar in his lips and a newspaper under his arm. A number of people were in the tunnel at the time of the killing.

The assailant threw the gun down and fled up the steps of the tunnel to the east side of Michigan boulevard, then across the boulevard, zigzagging between automobiles to the north side of Randolph street. He was chased by a police officer named Ruthy and by others, but finally escaped in an alley. The weight of the testimony shows he was dressed in a gray suit, although one witness said it might have been a "grayish brown," and another testified that it was dark brown. His hair was light in color.

WINS VICTORY

Charles F. Rathbun, special assistant state's attorney, who conducted nine months' investigation which resulted in obtaining the evidence that procured the conviction of Leo V. Brothers as the slayer of Alfred Lingle.

Runs Across Boulevard.

As he fled up the steps of the tunnel he held his straw hat in his hand and remained bareheaded while he ran across Michigan boulevard. It was proved by a ballistic expert that the bullet which killed Lingle was fired from the revolver thrown down in the tunnel. The serial number on the revolver had been obliterated, but was restored by a process of etching. The evidence showed it had been previously purchased from a dealer by Frank C. Foster.

The principal controversy relates to the identification of defendant as the man who shot Lingle and fled from the scene of the crime. Various witnesses positively identified defendant as being in the tunnel and as the man who dropped the gun and ran up the stairs and across the street. Other witnesses testified with equal positiveness that they were present and that defendant was not the man. Defendant did not testify in his own behalf and no effort was made to establish his whereabouts on the day of the killing.

Otto Swoboda testified that on June 9 he was in the public library at the noon hour and after reading a newspaper went out and saw a man, who he later learned was Frankie Foster, leaning against the wall on the north side of the library, and another man, wearing a gray suit and a straw hat, standing nearby. Swoboda decided to cross the street and go to Grant park. He entered the tunnel from the west side of the street and after descending the steps a man rushed past him and in doing so bumped against the witness, knocking out of his mouth a lighted cigaret.

Sees Moles on Cheek.

The man turned around and Swoboda observed two moles on his cheek. The man was wearing a gray suit and a straw hat. Swoboda proceeded to the stairway leading up from the tunnel on the east side of the street. He had gone up three or four steps when he heard a shot. He turned around and started down the steps, when the man who had knocked the cigaret out of his mouth rushed by him with his hat in his hand, going up the steps.

Swoboda retraced his own steps and saw a man's body on the floor of the tunnel. He turned and ran up the stairway, yelling, "Catch him!" When he reached the street level he saw the fleeing man stop, look around, and then run zigzagging across the street. Upon the trial Swoboda identified defendant as the man who knocked a cigaret out of his mouth and fled immediately after the shot was fired. He directed attention to the two moles he had observed on the man at the time of the killing.

Patrick Campbell, Warren Williams, Daniel Davidson Mills, and Marcus David each positively identified defendant as the man who fled from the tunnel across Michigan boulevard. Williams testified the man passed within a foot and a half of him.

APPLEGATE'S STORY

Hears Shot, Sees Man Throw Gun Away and Flee.

Clark Louis Applegate, a trainer of race horses, in company with his wife, was in the tunnel at the time of the shooting and knew Lingle in his life time. He testified he heard a shot, saw a man throw down a gun and come up the steps, looking bewildered; that the man was white as a sheet and ran away, pursued by an officer. He identified defendant as the man he saw. Mrs. Applegate was in Chicago at the time of the trial, but was not called to testify.

John J. Reynolds, a priest, was a teacher at Notre Dame university. He testified he arrived in Chicago from South Bend, Ind., over the South Shore railroad and got off the train at the station at the foot of Randolph street. In going through the tunnel he had almost reached the stairs on the west side when he heard a shot behind him and turned around.

He saw a number of men running up the east stairway, but he ran to and ascended the stairway on the west side and proceeded to the edge of the walk. He heard a voice crying out, "Stop that man! Stop that man!" and saw in the street between the safety island and the curb a blond young chap with a gray suit and blond hair making his way rapidly to the curb.

Watches Fugitive.

"I followed him with my eyes and then he paused directly across the street from me," he testified. The witness fixed this distance at sixty feet and said he stayed there watching the man run up the street chased by a policeman. The man turned and ran up an alley. The witness was asked the question, "Do you see any one in the courtroom now that you saw that day?" The answer was, "Mr. Brothers answers the description." Later he was asked when he next saw defendant and stated, "I saw him at the Congress hotel."

Albert W. Kelfstrom had been a salesman in the Taylor Trunk works, 28 East Randolph street, for ten years. This building is located between Randolph street and the alley through which Officer Ruthy chased the man. Kelfstrom testified that on June 9, 1930, at about 1:30 p. m., he was preparing to go to lunch and had gone into a small room in the store for his hat. As he stepped out of the room he noticed a man near a side entrance of the store. This entrance was not used by customers. It led into the store from a hallway of an office building.

The main entrances to the office building and to the trunk store were on Randolph street. The witness described the man as being very pale, and when asked if he wanted anything pointed to a lady's suitcase and asked the price. It was $5, and the man said, "I will take it," without making any examination of the suitcase. While he was buying the suitcase he was standing near a post and could not be seen from the street. He was asked by the salesman whether he desired to take the suitcase with him, and replied: "What time do you close the store?" The witness said, "At 5:30."

Says He'll Return.

The man answered that he would be back about 4 o'clock. He gave his name as Doherty, without stating any initials. He paid for the case and walked toward the front entrance of the store, where he looked from one side to another through the doors. Then he turned around and came back to the salesman and asked if there was a washroom, and the witness told him: "Yes, come along with me and I will show you where it is." The washroom is located just two or three feet from the side entrance to the store and is lighted by electricity.

The salesman turned on the light and walked out of the room. After waiting for some time for the man to return he became curious and went to the washroom. The man was not there and had evidently come out and left through the side entrance unobserved. The witness found in the toilet a small, square piece of white paper with folds in it. The man never returned for the suitcase. He wore a gray suit and a straw hat, and the witness was definite in his identification of defendant as the purchaser of the suitcase.

For the purpose of showing interest of two witnesses it was disclosed on cross-examination that Swoboda had been paid small amounts of money, ranging from two to twenty-five dollars, by employés of the state's attorney's office for time spent in viewing persons in different states suspected of this crime, and that the witness Williams had been employed since June 15 by the state's attorney as an investigator at $200 a month.

DEFENSE WITNESS

Tells of Visiting Store on Day of Murder.

On behalf of the defendant Vincent Veitch was called and testified that he was passing the Taylor Trunk store on the day of the murder about a quarter to 1 o'clock in the afternoon and saw a Gladstone bag in the window marked $10; that he walked in to purchase it, but learned that the price tag was not on that bag, but on a lady's purse; that he could not describe the man who waited on him, except that he had an effeminate way of speaking, and that he was in the store 35 or 40 minutes and left the store abruptly, "maybe rudely," as it was necessary to keep an appointment.

Says He Saw Slayer.

Lawrence J. O'Malley, a railroad switchman, testified that he was in the tunnel at the time Lingle was shot; that he saw the man who did the shooting and was within six feet of him at the time, and that Brothers was not the man; that the man who fired the shot had on a gray suit and a straw hat; that he did not report what he saw and made no effort to lend aid to the law enforcing officers of the city because he was making big money and feared his home would be bothered or his job interfered with if the killer was a gangster and that he was making more money than he could make fooling with any police officer.

Harry J. O'Connor was engaged in the real estate business. He testified that around 1:30 p. m. he was in the tunnel, about ten feet from the east exit; that he heard a shot and saw a man running along, hugging the rail; that the man wore gray clothes and had a straw hat in his left hand and that he was turning his face into it, apparently to prevent recognition.

Defendant stood, and the witness said he did not believe the assailant was as tall or as heavy as defendant. He further testified that he had told counsel for both sides he could not identify the man who fired the shot.

Albert Stein, employed in the recorder's office of Cook county, testified that on June 9, 1930, about 1 or 1:30 p. m., he, in company with Harry J. O'Connor and a man named Kane, was in the tunnel at Randolph street, about five or six feet from the east stairway; that he heard a shot fired and saw a man running from the scene with two men chasing him up the stairs; that he never saw the man before; that when the man reached the street the sun was streaming down and he looked like a very light haired fellow, and that he was not as tall as defendant or as heavy and was not the defendant.

Mrs. Abigail Wilson testified she walked through the tunnel on the day of the shooting and was about ten feet from and saw the man who fired the shot; that the color of his hair was light; that defendant was not the man; that she never told any officer she knew anything about the case, although she was aware that a search was being made for every one who knew anything about the killing.

Madeline Whitehurst testified that she saw a young man coming up the stairs, and at the same time heard some one in the tunnel saying, "Get that man!" that she got a good look at him; that she was about a couple of yards from him when he was coming out of the tunnel; that she had never seen defendant before the day of the trial, and that he is not the man she saw coming out of the tunnel.

Writer Is Witness.

Paul Thorne, a fiction writer, testified he saw the man who was running on Michigan avenue on the day of the killing of Lingle; that he had been standing in front of the entrance to the tunnel and heard a shot; that the young man appeared at the head of the stairs, not over five feet away; that he saw him full face, saw his profile as he went by him and saw his back as he went across the street, and that defendant is a taller man than the man he saw in the subway.

When asked if defendant was the man he saw coming out of the tunnel the day Lingle was shot, he said: "I should say not." He also testified that after hearing the shooting he got on a bus and went home immediately without going into tunnel to see what had happened. That night he wrote an anonymous letter to THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. He also wrote a story of the killing of Lingle, which he attempted to sell throughout the country, claiming to be the star witness for the defense, and testified that Roche and Rathbun repeatedly referred to him as a star witness. Roche denied he had made such a reference to this witness.

Pasquale Clarizio, a stock clerk with the Dennison Manufacturing company at 62 East Randolph street, testified he saw Policeman Ruthy and several people chasing a man through an alley; that he was close to him and got a good look at his face; that he had light hair and his hat was in his left hand; that he weighed about 150 pounds and was about five feet eight inches high, and that defendant was not the man whom he saw Ruthy, police officer, chasing.

Rebuttal Is Reviewed.

In rebuttal Capt. Daniel A. Gilbert of the Chicago police force testified that O'Connor, in the presence of Brooks, one of counsel for the people, stated that when the shot was fired he was about ten feet from the bottom of the stairs at the west approach to the tunnel; that he was so far away from the shooting he could never identify any one; that he was asked to view defendant, but said it would be useless, as he would not be able to identify the one who fired the shot. Gilbert also testified Stein told him he was with O'Connor and Kane at the bottom of the stairs at the west approach; that Stein went to the Criminal Court building to look at defendant, and said he answered the description as to height, but was not able to identify him because he did not see his face, color of his hair, or profile.

Edward J. Kelly, a salesman living at Kankakee, Ill., testified he met Thorne on June 9, 1930, and had a conversation with him at 170 North Michigan boulevard about forty-five minutes after the crime had been committed; that Thorne told him he had been about a half a block away from the mouth of the tunnel and that he was not able at that time to describe the man he saw running away.

CLAIMS OF ERROR

Reviewed in Order as Presented by Counsel

We will consider the assignments of error in the order in which they were presented by the argument of counsel for plaintiff in error.

The fifteenth instruction given by the court on behalf of the people defined the term, "An accessory." It and also the ninth instruction for the people directed the jury to find the defendant guilty if they believed from the evidence, beyond a reasonable doubt, that he did aid, abet, assit, advise, or encourage in the perpetration of the crime, as charged in the indictment. While the record contains some evidence tending to show that one or two persons were with the actual assailant just before the killing and rushed up the stairs after him immediately thereafter still, it is apparent that the prosecution was based upon the theory that the defendant was the actual assailant and not an accomplice.

Under the circumstances there was really no substantial basis for giving these two instructions. [People vs. McCarthy, 313 Ill. 303; People vs. Blades, 329 Ill. 182]. However, the defendant is in no position to complain, because at his request the court gave two similar instructions [the third and fifth] which told the jury that a conviction of the defendant could not be had unless he actually committed the murder or was present, aiding, and abetting it.

Instruction on Flight.

The state's given instruction numbered 10 told the jury that if defendant, immediately after the commission of the crime charged against him, fled and remained away until taken into custody, such flight is a proper circumstance to be considered in determining his guilt or innocence. Two objections are urged against this instruction. One is that it was stipulated that defendant lived in Chicago from January, 1930, to November, 1930, and therefore there was no evidence that he had fled and remained away until taken into custody. The other objection urged is that the word "flight," in its legalistic sense, must include flight from the place of habitation and abode of the acused.

No error was committed in the admission of evidence tending to show that the man who shot and killed Lingle immediately threw down his weapon and precipitously fled through the tunnel, up the stairway, across crowded streets and disappeared in an alley while being chased a great portion of the distance by a police officer and by citizens, who were crying out, "Stop that man!" The conduct of the assailant in his efforts to avoid capture tended to bespeak his guilt and a desire to escape arrest.

By the common law flight was considered so strong a presumption of guilt that in cases of treason and felony it carried the forfeiture of the party's goods whether he was found guilty or acquitted. [1. Wharton on American criminal law, section 714]. In this country flight does not generally raise a presumption of guilt but may be shown in evidence as a fact to be considered by the jury and from which they may draw an inference of guilt. [Fox vs. People, 95 Ill. 71; 16 corpus juris, 551.]

GOT EVIDENCE

Patrick Roche, chief investigator for the state's attorney's office, who, working under the direction of Charles F. Rathbun, special assistant state's attorney, obtained the evidence which resulted in the conviction of Leo V. Brothers.

Instruction Approved.

The instruction complained of did not direct a verdict. It simply told the jury that if they believed that immediately after the commission of the crime defendant fled and remained away until taken into custody, such fact is a proper circumstance to be considered in determining his guilt or innocence. Such a flight as was shown by the evidence, even if unaccompanied by subsequent seclusion or concealment, was proper for the jury to consider. It was unnecessary to prove subsequent concealment, and the instruction placed a greater burden on the people in that regard than was essential. Defendant was not harmed by imposing an additional and unnecessary burden upon the people.

After defendant had been taken into custody he was exhibited to a number of witnesses for identification by a method known in police circles as the "showup." In other words, he was placed in a room by police officers and the witnesses at different times were permitted to look through a slit in a curtain upon defendant under a strong light. The evidence shows that the identification by the people's witnesses was first made under such conditions.

Instruction Refused.

Defendant requested, and the court refused to give, the following instruction, to wit:

"The court further instructs you that where one under arrest is brought alone before a witness for the purpose of identification, and the witness knows that the party arrested is to be presented for the purpose, an identification under such circumstances cannot be given the same weight and credibility where the witness picks out the accused from a number of unknown persons."

Defendant insists that the instruction is almost in the precise language used by this court in People vs. Crane, 302 Ill., 217. In discussing the testimony of certain witnesses in that case it was said that such an identification cannot be given the same weight and credit as where the witness had picked out the assailant from a number of unknown persons.

The court was merely expressing its views concerning the probative force of such testimony and was not endeavoring to lay down a rule of law to be announced by instructions to juries. Nothing is better settled than the weight and credit to be given testimony is a question for the jury and that the court is not permitted to influence the jury by commenting on its weight and credit. [People vs. Taylor, 316 Ill., 67; People vs. Calseg, 311 Id., 365.] The instruction was properly refused.

Campbell Case Covered.

Patrick Campbell, a witness for the people, was asked on cross-examination by counsel for defendant if he had ever been in trouble, to which question an objection was sustained. Later he was asked if he had ever been indicted, and an objection to that question was sustained. No intimation was given of counsel's purpose in asking these questions, but after the verdict had been returned a motion for a new trial was entered, and one of the assignments of cause was that the court erred in limiting the cross-examination of this witness.

A supporting affidavit was filed setting forth that the witness was under indictment in the Criminal court of Cook county by the name of John Campbell and was charged with conspiracy to commit robbery; that John Campbell and the witness, Patrick Campbell, are one and the same person; that he was released upon entering into recognizance in the sum of $2,500, without surety; that when his case was called for trial he did not appear and his bond was forfeited and a capias ordered to issue; that thereafter the judgment of forfeiture was vacated and Campbell was again released upon his own recognizance in said sum; that the fact of Campbell's indictment under the name of John Campbell was not known to defendant until the day previous to the making of such affidavit; that all of such facts were material and relevant on the trial as showing an interest of the witness and a motive for giving false and perjured testimony against defendant.

Purpose Not Apparent.

When the questions were propounded to the witness the trial court could not visualize that counsel's purpose was to show interest or motive. The questions, standing by themselves, were obviously objectionable. It is proper to disclose the interest of a witness by showing he has been promised immunity from prosecution or that he has received favors which might influence his testimony, but a witness cannot be required to answer the bald question if he has ever been indicted unless the court is apprised of a legitimate purpose for asking it.

The fact that a witness has been indicted cannot ordinarily be shown for the purpose of affecting his credibility. [People vs. Decker, 310 Ill. 284; People vs. Garippo, 321 Idaho 157]. According to the counter affidavit filed, the fact that John Campbell and Patrick Campbell were one and the same person was known to counsel for defendant prior to the time of the trial. Under the situation existing the questions were improper.

STATUS OF RUTHY

State Regards Him as Unreliable Witness.

The police officer who chased the fleeing man across Michigan boulevard, down Randolph street and up alleys until he lost sight of the man was Anthony Ruthy. It appears that an assistant state's attorney who appeared for the people felt the officer should be accounted for on the trial and accordingly suggested it to the court, and stated that he regarded Ruthy as an unreliable witness and had previously so regarded him; that no suspect had ever been shown to him for identification; that he was mentally unbalanced because of a previous brain injury, and that he is able to function in the performance of some of his police duties but under excitement is unreliable and undependable. Counsel asked that the officer be called as the court's witness, so that both sides could have an opportunity to cross-examine him.

A lengthy colloquy was had between the court and counsel for the respective parties in the absence of the jury, at the conclusion of which Ruthy was called as a witness, and his testimony conclusively showed his mind was severely deranged. He was not asked to identify defendant as the fleeing man. The evident purpose of the state in wanting him called as a court's witness was to reveal his mental condition and to explain to the court and jury why he had not been called as a state's witness. It was not to offer any proof of identification or of guilt. The proceedings were unusual, quite unnecessary and without benefit or injury to any one.

Proven Incapable.

A deranged person may be a competent witness where, notwithstanding his affliction, he is capable of observing accurately and stating correctly what he observed and of understanding the nature and obligation of an oath [40 Cyl., P. 2201]. Ruthy's testimony demonstrated that he was not capable of observing accurately what he had seen, and this condition was well known to the assistant state's attorney. Ruthy could not be classified as a competent witness, and, although his testimony cannot be said to have been harmful, he should not have been accepted as a witness for the court or otherwise.

During the discussion it was developed that Ruthy had at one time identified Frankie Foster as the man he had chased. This identification was made at the instance of those representing Foster. When this circumstance was disclosed, one of the attorneys for defendant said, "Do you mean to say, Mr. Brooks, that he [Ruthy] identified Foster?" Upon receiving an affirmative answer defendant's counsel asked if there was a record of that hearing, and after some further discussion another of the attorneys for defendant said to the court, "We intend to call him—subpoena him as our witness—and we will be responsible for him."

Talked of Calling Ruthy.

Thereupon the assistant state's attorney again told the court he considered Ruthy an unreliable witness and the attorney for the defendant interposed the remark, "You have no right to say that; call an alienist." Defendant never objected to Ruthy on the ground of incompetency and the record contains no such objection. When it appeared that Ruthy had at a former time identified Foster as the man he had chased through the streets and alleys counsel for defendant showed a willingness to speculate upon the situation and endeavored to have the court compel the state to vouch for the credibility of the witness, in the apparent hope that he would say the man he chased was Foster and not defendant. Counsel went so far as to say he would call the witness on behalf of the defendant and be responsible for him. Under the circumstances defendant cannot now be heard to complain that Ruthy was called by the court.

The next alleged error is that the trial judge was guilty of improper conduct in receiving a communication from the jurors, and in withdrawing from them, in the absence of defendant, a form of verdict to be used in case defendant was found guilty of manslaughter. The incident occurred after the jury had retired to deliberate upon their verdict. They sent the following written communication to the judge:

"Your honor, are there any instructions relative to this case in 27-D? All instructions we have are on verdict 21. H. W. GROTZER,
"Foreman."

5 VERDICT FORMS

No Instruction Given on Manslaughter Verdict.

With the above communication the judge received the five forms of verdicts he had submitted to them, as follows: [1] Finding defendant guilty of murder and fixing his punishment at death. [2] Finding him guilty of murder and fixing his punishment at imprisonment in the penitentiary for life. [3] Finding him guilty of murder and fixing his punishment at imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term of years not less than fourteen. [4] Finding him guilty of manslaughter. [5] Finding him not guilty.

Instruction 27-D was the manslaughter form of verdict, and the jury by their communication asked if there were any instructions relative to it. No instruction on the law of manslaughter had been asked by either party or given by the court. There was no evidence in the case to warrant the giving of an instruction on that subject or of a form of verdict concerning it. When the court's attention was called to the fact that he had included a form of verdict as to manslaughter he withdrew it and returned the other forms to the jury. Shortly afterward the jury returned a verdict.

Presented by Mistake.

The record shows that the form of verdict finding defendant guilty of manslaughter was presented to the court through inadvertence. Too often have mistakes and grievious errors crept into the record through a practice of submitting "ready made" or "canned" instructions. Some attorneys prepare stock instructions and forms of verdict and file them away for future use. When occasion arises they are hastily gathered and submitted to the court without inspection or serious thought. This practice is often employed notwithstanding its danger and frequent condemnation by this court. It is responsible for the alleged misconduct of the trial in this case.

Communications from judge to jury should be made in an open court in the presence of the parties, and it is an almost universal rule that if any statements material to the issue be made by the judge to the jury in the absence of the defendant and his counsel a new trial will be awarded. Of such importance is an untrammeled deliberation by the jury that courts will generally grant new trial when any communication with a jury, either by the judge or a third person, is in any way calculated to prejudice the defendant. He must be present at the charge of the court whether such charge is given before the jury is permitted to retire or at a subsequent time. Wharton on crim. pl. and pr. Sec. 547; People vs. Kohler, 5 Cal. 72.

Communication Condemned.

This court condemned unwarranted communications between the court and jury in Fisher vs. People, 23 Ill. 218. The jury in that case came in to open court and in writing asked the presiding judge whether or not they were the judges of the law as well as of the facts. They were told they were not and that the law as given by the court should govern them. On the next day they again came into open court and asked for further instructions. On the third day they came and inquired concerning the credit to be given the testimony of witnesses.

The judge answered their question. He was then told there was little prospect for an agreement on a verdict and the jury asked to be discharged. The judge replied: "Before the next term of the court the witnesses may be in their graves and justice may be cheated out of its victim." The defendant was on trial for murder and was found guilty. The conduct of the trial judge in the Fisher case was palpably erroneous and prejudicial to the defendant. The judgment was reversed.

Other cases in which new trials have been awarded because of improper communication between judge and jury after retirement are: Crabtree vs. Hagenbaugh, 23 Ill. 349, where the judge went inside of the room in which the jury were deliberating and discussed the instruction with them; and Chicago and Alton Railroad company vs. Robbins, 159 Ill., 539, where the jury sent a written request to the judge to ascertain the time to which to compute damages and the judge returned a written reply telling them to comput them up to the present time; and City of Mound City vs. Mason, 262 Ill. 392, where the judge went into a jury room and answered oral questions pertaining to the party's rights; and People vs. Beck, 305 Ill. 593, where the judge in answer to a request of the jury, sent in an additional instruction in the absence of the defendant and without having the jury brought into open court; and People vs. McGrane, 336 Ill. 404, where an additional instruction was given in the absence of the defendant.

Jury Not Influenced.

In each of these cases the conduct of the judge was calculated to influence the deliberation of the jury and therefore constituted reversible error, but no case is cited, and, indeed, we have not been able to find one, where this court has reversed a judgment because of an act or ruling of a judge which did not tend to influence the verdict of a jury.

In the case there was no evidence whatever to warrant a verdict of manslaughter. The proof conclusively showed that the crime committed was murder, and whether or not it was committed by defendant was the only substantial question in dispute before the jury. There would be no more justification for a verdict of manslaughter than there would be for robbery, consequently no form of verdict finding defendant guilty of manslaughter should have been given. It is said that defendant's rights and interests were affected because the jury might have returned a manslaughter verdict, and thereby he would have suffered a lesser penalty.

This claim is without reason or logic, for if the jury were not authorized, under the law, to return a manslaughter verdict, and if the elements of manslaughter did not appear from the evidence, defendant was not entitled to such a verdict upon any theory. A deprivation of a right never results from withholding from a person something to which he is not entitled. The question was whether or not defendant was guilty of murder. There was no issue of manslaughter in the case.

Withdrawal Approved.

The form of verdict for manslaughter should have been withdrawn, and the action of the judge in doing so was right. While it would have been better procedure to have done it in the presence of defendant, still, he suffered no prejudice, and the action of the judge cannot be made the basis for a reversal of the judgment. As a general rule in this and other jurisdictions, judgments, either in civil or in criminal cases, will not be reversed when it is apparent that no injury has resulted from a communication to the jury, either by the court or by third persons. Thus, in Rafferty vs. People, 72, Ill., 37.

The trial judge, in the absence of the defendant charged with murder, sent a message to the jury that he would meet them at seven o'clock the next morning. It was urged that this constituted an improper communication and hastened a verdict of guilty against the defendant. The court, after considering the circumstances surrounding the sending of the message, decided that it could not have hastened the verdict, and said: "Although the message was improperly sent, yet if by no possibility it could work an injury to the prisoner it ought not to vitiate the verdict." To the same effect are the cases of State vs. Parker, 321 Mo. 553; Collins vs. State, 78 Ga. 87; Commonwealth vs. Heven, 162 Mass. 521; and Horrmann vs. Newman, 37 N. Y. Supp. 199.

Questions Are Written.

In the last mentioned case the jury sent two written questions regarding the case and the judge indorsed on the message that he had no further charge to make.

In Adams vs. People, 47 Ill. 37, it was alleged that the jurors were persuaded by expressions and opinions of divers persons that they were allowed to hear during the trial. It was held the jury was not influenced, even in the slightest degree, by such expressions, and that unless it was shown that such exposure operated in some way to the prejudice of the prisoner, a verdict for that cause alone should not be set aside.

In People vs. Strause, 290 Ill. 259, there were a number of acts of misconduct complained of, and among them were several alleged unwarranted communications with the jury. The court held that the verdict should not be set aside for any one of the many acts of misconduct charged, but they might be given weight in connection with other matters which took place on the trial in deciding whether or not the verdict should be disturbed, and it was said that all courts doubtless agree that any misconduct which was prejudicial to the accused or which improperly influenced the jury is ground for setting aside a verdict of the jury. This is the true rule, and it is announced in Gott vs. People, 187 Ill. 249; Marzen vs. People, 190 Id. 81; Martin vs. People, 54 Id. 225, and People vs. Rogers, 303 Id. 578.

PRIVACY GUARDED

Precautions Taken to Avoid Influencing the Jury.

Privacy of jury deliberations should be zealously protected against invasion, but the cardinal test on a motion to set aside a verdict on that ground is whether or not the invasion was calculated to influence the verdict of a jury. If it was not so calculated it would be idle to disturb a verdict. Often it is practically impossible to prevent a juror from communicating with a trial judge, as when he approaches the judge and asks permission to telephone to his family or to say that he is sick. Surely such harmless communications of themselves are an insufficient excuse for setting aside a verdict or reversing a judgment.

One of the grounds urged for new trial was newly discovered evidence. There was filed an affidavit of Carl Eddy, which stated that on the day of the murder he was driving north on Michigan boulevard about 1:30 p. m. and when he was almost at Randolph street a man ran from the sidewalk at the exit from the tunnel under Michigan boulevard and against affiant's car; that such person uttered an oath and continued to cross the street in a westerly direction; that he was short and stocky, had blond hair, was dressed in a gray suit and carried a straw hat in his hand; that he did not communicate this information to any one until the trial of defendant was nearing completion, when he consulted an attorney and was told to give the information to the trial judge; that he went to the Criminal Court building and was advised by the judge's bailiff that the evidence was in, the closing arguments were being made; that while he was at the Criminal Court building he saw defendant, and that defendant was not the man he saw running on Michigan boulevard.

New Trial Unwarranted.

The most that can be said of this offered testimony is that it related to identification of Brothers and was cumulative. A new trial should not be granted in order to receive it. In addition to that the testimony would be of a highly uncertain character, it could all be true and yet relate to any one of a number of persons who were running across the avenue, or relate to a time altogether different from that when it is claimed the assailant ran across the street.

The affidavit of Louis McCann was also filed. It stated that he was in the tunnel and saw the man fire the fatal shot and that said man was not the defendant; that affiant subsequently talked with representatives of the Chicago Tribune and with persons connected with the state's attorney's office; that when Brothers was exhibited to him in the Congress hotel he stated he was not the one who had killed Lingle; that he was told by Assistant State's Attorney McShane to instruct his wife not to answer the door if any one called at his home; that a subpoena was left at his home and he thereafter communicated with the assistant state's attorney; that he went to the office of said attorney and was informed that the subpoena was illegal because it was not personally served; that notwithstanding such information he went to the Criminal Court on the day mentioned in the subpoena and attempted to see the trial judge but was unable to do so; that he returned to the court the next day and was unable to get into the court room; that he was directed to go to the witness room, which he did, but was not called to the stand and did not testify at the trial.

Affidavit Is Denied.

The material facts of this affidavit were denied in a counter affidavit by the assistant state's attorney. The counter affidavit stated that McCann had not told affiant that defendant was not the man who fired the shot, but, on the contrary, McCann had said defendant was the man who fired it, and that McCann also said he was afraid to testify to that fact. The counter affidavit further stated that McCann had been seen in communication with attorneys for the defense prior to the time the trial was finished. It is quite evident that neither party cared to use him as a witness and that both parties had ample opportunity to use him if they had so desired.

Another ground urged for a new trial is that defendant was advised by his own counsel not to take the stand and in pursuance of such advice did not testify. It is urged that such advice was improper and resulted in serious injury to defendant. Whether or not it was prudent for defendant to testify in his own behalf was a matter for consideration and determination by him and his counsel at

BOOK BY TRIBUNE WRITER TELLS STORY OF BROTHERS CASE

The complete story of the investigation of the murder of Alfred Lingle, and of the capture and conviction of Leo V. Brothers as the murderer, is related in a book entitled "Jake Lingle, or Chicago on the Spot."

The book, now on sale, was published by E. P. Dutton & Co., Inc., of New York, and was written by John Boettiger, a reporter for THE TRIBUNE.

Mr. Boettiger, assigned to the case at the moment that the first flash of Lingle's murder was received at THE TRIBUNE office, was on the scene of the killing a few minutes later. He remained on the assignment throughout the course of the investigation and the trial of Brothers, and was in close touch with all the activities of the leaders of the inquiry, going with them in their journeys about the country.

EVIDENCE NAMING SLAYER 'CONVINCING'

JUSTICES FIND TRIAL CONDUCTED WITHOUT ERROR

Say Facts Warranted a Heavier Penalty.

the time of the trial. It does not appear from the record that his counsel were either incompetent or unfaithful. Such being the case, the wisdom of the conclusion reached by defendant and his counsel cannot be now questioned.

It is contended that the verdict is contrary to the weight of the evidence. We have very carefully examined and considered all of the evidence in the case and we cannot agree with that contention. The identification of defendant as the killer was the principal contested question of fact. It appears to us that the testimony of the witnesses who identified defendant as the man who threw down the gun and fled from the tunnel and across the street is more convincing than the testimony of the witnesses for defendant.

Under all the evidence the jury would have been warranted in fixing a penalty much greater than they did, but the penalty is within the limits fixed by the statute. The jury heard the evidence and saw the witnesses, and the province of fixing the penalty belonged to them and their decision is final in that matter. The record contains no error sufficient to disturb the verdict, which appears to have been justified by convincing evidence showing the guilt of defendant beyond a reasonable doubt.

The judgment is affirmed.

MINORITY OPINION

Justices De Young and Dunn Tell Why They Oppose the Majority.

The dissenting opinion in the Leo Brothers case, signed by Justices De Young and Dunn, follows:

The evidence in the record in regard to the identity of the plaintiff in error as the murderer of Lingle is exceedingly contradictory. As set out in the opinion of the court, of the witnesses who saw the man who fired the fatal shot and fled from the scene of the crime an equal number stated that the plaintiff in error was the man and that he was not. It is hardly practicable to set out or discuss in detail in an opinion all the cross-examination of each witness and all the evidence of circumstances tending to contradict or to coroborate each witness and it is not necesary for the purpose of this dissenting opinion.

It is sufficient to say that the evidence was in strong conflict. In our judgment it is difficult to say on which side of the issue was the preponderance of the evidence, much less to say that it was convincing of the guilt of the plaintiff in error beyond a reasonable doubt. However that question may be determined, the error of the court in communicating with the jury after they had retired from the bar requires a reversal of the judgment.

How Error Occurred.

The error occurred in the following manner: The court in instructing the jury read an instruction as to the form of the verdict which included three forms in case the verdict should be guilty, varying according to the punishment imposed, whether death or imprisonment for life or for a term of years, and another form in case the verdict should be not guilty. These four forms of verdict with another marked 27 D finding the defendant guilty of manslaughter were delivered to the jury. They retired and, after they had deliberated more than twenty-four hours, a written communication signed by the foreman was sent to the judge asking if there were any instructions in the case relative to form 27 D. As stated by the court in the bill of exceptions, this occurred very shortly before the verdict was returned.

The judge on receiving this note sent for all the forms of verdict which had been submitted to the jury and, finding them in proper form, except 27 D, retained the latter, returned the others and sent word to the jury that there were no further instructions.

All this occurred out of the presence and hearing of the plaintiff in error and his counsel and the jury was not brought into court. The manslaughter form of verdict was sent to the jury, as certified in the bill of exceptions, by inadvertence. An assistant state's attorney handed the forms of verdict in a murder case, including the manslaughter form of verdict, to the judge, who gave them to the jury without examination.

Decision in 1859.

Early in the history of the state it was decided at the April term, 1859, in Fisher vs. People, 23 Ill. 218 [orig. ed. p. 283], that it was improper for any juror to communicate to the court in writing or verbally in reference to any matter belonging to the case, but if the jury desired to communicate with the court it should send a request to the court through the officer in attendance, that the jury might be brought into court in a body.

It is true, as said in the majority opinion, that there were other errors in this case which required a reversal of the judgment, but it is also true that the court condemned the permitting of any of the jurors, while they were deliberating, leaving the jury room and coming into court and holding a conversation with the judge, and also condemned the court's making such a request of the foreman or any other member of the jury, saying it was liable to great abuse. In the same volume at the January term, 1860, is reported the case of Crabtree vs. Hagenbaugh, 23 Ill. 289 [orig. ed. p. 349], the nature of which does not appear, though it appears in 25 Ill. 214 [orig. ed. 233] that it was an action of assumpsit for a breach of contract.

The opinion, which was written by Mr. Justice Caton, was short and it was thought unnecessary to consider any other fact in the case than the action of the judge who, upon the invitation of the jury, went to the jury room and talked with the jurors on the subject of the instructions given them.

ABOUT MOTIVE

Judge's Intentions in Visiting Jury Not to Influence the Verdict.

It was said in the opinion: "This was manifestly done with no improper motive on the part of the judge, and it may be that it had no influence with them in the formation of their verdict. Indeed, the most the judge did was to decline to explain the meaning of the written instructions which had been given to the jury. We choose to assume that what was said and done by the judge, while in the jury room, did not influence the jury in their deliberations, for we think that, independent of its effect upon the jury, the judgment should be reversed, for the simple reason that such an interview did take place.

If, in this case, no harm was actually done, and for that reason the verdict is allowed to stand, we open the door to the inquiry in all such cases, as to whether the party has been injured by the interview. Such an inquiry should not be tolerated. The policy of the law requires that all the proceedings of the court should be open and notorious, and in the presence of the party, so that if he is not satisfied with it he may take exceptions to it, in the mode pointed out by the law, and not be put to extraneous proof to show that an error has been committed in a secret proceeding, and, in fact, out of court."

Follow Decision Consistently.

This case has been cited and consistently followed in our decisions. In Chicago and Alton Railroad company vs. Robbins, 159 Ill. 593, the court, in response to a note from the foreman of the jury inquiring whether damages should be assessed to the commencement of the suit or up to the present time, wrote in the same note "up to the present time" and sent it back by the bailiff who had brought it to him. The court, while holding that the answer stated the law correctly, reversed the judgment for the giving of it and in doing so quoted the opinion in Crabtree vs. Hagenbaugh, supra, and also quoted Fisher vs. People, supra, Sargent vs. Roberts, 1 Pick. 337, and O'Connor vs. Guthrie and Jordan, 11 Iowa 80, and cited Kirk vs. State, 14 Ohio 511, and Taylor vs. Betsford, 13 Johns 486. In City of Mound City vs. Mason, 262 Ill. 392, it was held error for a trial judge to hold any communication with the jury in regard to the instructions in the case except in open court and that it was immaterial whether the instructions given were right or wrong. People vs. Beck, 305 Ill. 593, decided the question the same way.

Many Similar Cases.

There are many cases in other states to the same effect. Sargent v. Roberts, supra, was decided by the Supreme Judicial court of Massachusetts in 1822 and is a leading case upon this question which has been followed by the courts in many states. In that case the foreman of the jury sent a note to the judge informing him that the jury could not agree and awaited his directions. The judge replied in writing, saying that he was unwilling that the jury should separate and giving them such directions as would enable them to reconsider the case in a more systematic manner.

After this a verdict was rendered in favor of the defendant. The court said: "As it is impossible, we think, to complain of the substance of the communication, the only question is whether any communication at all is proper, and if it was not, the party against whom the verdict was is entitled to a new trial. And we are all of opinion, after considering the question maturely, that no communication whatever ought to take place between the judge and the jury after the case has been committed to them by the charge of the judge unless in open court, and where practicable, in the presence of the counsel in the case." So in deciding a case in which the circumstances were similar the Supreme court of Iowa said in O'Connor v. Guthrie and Jordan, supra: "If further instructions are to be given to the jury, though the same in principle, as those already given, the parties have a right to require that they shall be given in open court, that an opportunity may be afforded to know what they are, except to them if desired, and ask others explanatory, if deemed necessary. Indeed, the necessity for adherence to this practice with strictness is so manifest that argument in support of it is quite unnecessary. It may, at times, it is true, be attended with inconvenience; but better so than permit a practice so liable to abuse and so much in conflict with the rights of parties litigant."

Communication with Jury.

In State v. Murphy, 17 N. Dak. 48, the trial judge, being informed that the jury or some of the jurors wanted to communicate with him went to the jury room about 8:30 or 9 o'clock in the evening, rapped on the door and, upon its being opened stepped inside, leaving the door ajar, and while standing in the open space said to the jury: "Good evening, gentlemen, I understand you want to see me. Have you agreed." The foreman answered: "No, I think we cannot agree." The judge then, after a pause of a second, replied: "I will ask you to consider the matter further. Good night," and thereupon withdrew and closed the door.

In a short time the bailiff reported to the judge that the jury had agreed. The court in the consideration of this action of the judge said: "As to the purity of the intentions of the judge in going into the jury room in this case, and there having the brief communication with the jury, no certificate or proof is necessary so far as this court is concerned, as it well knows that his uprightness and sincere desire to be absolutely just and fair in all cases are beyond question. That admitted fact, however, does not meet the question before us, which is: Did he do that which was beyond his judicial functions in respect to the case?

"We are forced to the conclusion that he did. His presence in the jury room for any kind of communication with the jury is not contemplated by any provision of the statute. The opposite is the plain inference from the statute. All communication to the jury in open court is subject to exception by the parties, if deemed improper. If any communication is made to them in the jury room in the absence of the parties, no opportunity is afforded for objections and exceptions at the time. The open court is the place for communications to the jury in the presence of, or on notice to, the attorneys.

Jury Room for Jury.

"The jury room is for the jury alone, and no communications are allowed with them in the room except upon orders from the court through the officers in charge of them, who is permitted to ask them whether they have agreed upon a verdict. All communications to the jury in reference to the case should be made in open court, and all communications to them in the jury room avoided. In this way all distrust and fear that something improper is said or done will be without foundation, and every act be subject to exception and review. Any communication by word or writing not in open court affects the efficiency of jury trials as a means of accomplishing justice after giving all parties full opportunity of being heard at all stages of the trial.

"A strict compliance with this practice of having all proceedings in court in the presence of counsel, or on notice to them, unless waived, is better than to countenance violations thereof unless prejudice is shown. The state urgently insists that no prejudice could have resulted from what was done or said in this case, but we shall not consider that question. However, the fact that the foreman said that he thought they could not agree when the judge first spoke to them, and that they did agree in five or ten minutes thereafter, would be a stubborn fact for consideration if we entered upon an inquiry as to the effect upon the jury of the words spoken to them and the visit to the room.

Held Prejudicial.

We think that any communication in this way as to the case should be prohibited and held prejudicial. It is against the policy of the law to indulge in secret communications or conferences with the jury or with jurors in reference to the merits or law of the case. To determine in each case whether prejudice resulted would be difficult, if not impossible, and justice will be better subserved by avoiding such communications entirely. The authorities are practically unanimous in condemning such communications, and in holding them prejudicial as a matter of law."

In State vs. Wroth, 15 Wash. 621, the court said: "In the discharge of his official duties, the place for the judge is on the bench. As to him the law has closed the portals of the jury room, and he may not enter. The appellant was not obliged to follow the judge to the jury room in order to protect his legal rights, or to see that the jury was not influenced by the presence of the judge; and the state cannot be permitted to show what occurred between the judge and the jury at a place where the judge had no right to be, and in regard to which no official record could be made."

RIGHTS IMPORTANT

Matter of Judge and Jury Vital to Fair Trial for Defendant.

In Havenor vs. State, 125 Wis., 144, the court said: "These rights are clearly of an important nature and affect the substance of a jury trial and the right of a party to be heard or to bring in review every transaction of the court's proceedings. For the attainment of the best administration of justice, the law requiring that all proceedings of court be open and public, and in the presence of the parties or their representatives, must be strictly enforced; and, in case of any infringement of this policy, parties are not to be put to the burden of showing that it, in fact, injured them, even though it be manifest that no improper motives prompted the acts complained of."

Other cases in which it has been held to be error where any communication of the judge with the jury or with a juror or jurors, either personally in the jury room or by written communication or telephone after the retirement of the jury from the bar in the absence and without the knowledge of counsel, has been held to be error for which the judgment must be reversed with regard to the innocent or injurious nature of the communication, are Hoberg vs. State, 3 Minn., 262; Coolman vs. State, 163 Ind., 503; State vs. Alexander, 66 Mo., 148; State vs. Bland, 9 Idaho, 796; Grace vs. State, 147 Ga., 672; State vs. Ashley, 121 S. C., 15; and Watertown Bank and Loan Co. vs. Mix, 51 N. Y., 558.

No Communication Whatever.

The principle decided in all these cases is that announced in Sargent vs. Roberts, supra, and the four decisions in which we have made the same announcement, that no communication whatever ought to take place between the judge and the jury after the cause has been committed to the jury by the charge of the judge unless in open court, and, where practicable, in the presence of the counsel in the cause, and that, independent of its effect upon the jury, the judgment should be reversed for the simple reason that the communication did take place and that no inquiry will be tolerated as to whether any harm was actually done. The defendant had a constitutional right to a public trial and to be present at every step in such trial, and, as was said in State vs. Ashley, supra, having reached the conclusion that the mere fact of the communication was a violation of this right, we find it unnecessary to consider whether any errors of law occurred in the substance of the communication.

However, it is clear that whatever did occur was prejudical to the defendant. We have not the form of the verdict before us because it was not included in the bill of exceptions. We know only that it was a form of verdict of guilty of manslaughter and the jury had it before them in the same manner as the other four forms of verdict, and considered it and were justified in considering it as a part of the instructions given by the court.

Jury Had Verdict Form.

Their inquiry was whether the instruction applied to that form of verdict. The jury had that form of verdict as well as the other forms of verdict all attached together by a clip and naturally might be expected to want to know that it had to do with the case and what their duty was in reference to it. Hence their inquiry. The court withdrew the manslaughter instruction and without any explanation to the jury sent back the other four forms with an oral notice to the jury that there were no further instructions. All this occurred in the absence of the plaintiff in error and his counsel.

There can be no pretense of justification of any such communication betwen the judge and the jury, not in open court, and not in the presence of the plaintiff in error and his counsel. The jury had the manslaughter verdict, given apparently by the court, the officer took it to the judge, who kept it, and returned the other four verdicts with the oral message sent by the officer that there were no further instructions.

This was a modification of the instructions out of court, in the absence of the accused with no opportunity for him to ask any further instructions which he or his counsel might deem necessary to protect his rights and the court's opinion holds that the accused, to obtain a review of this unconstitutional invasion of his rights, must be put to extraneous proof to show that an error has been committed and that he has been injured in a secret proceeding and, in fact, out of court.

Prejudice Not the Question.

Whether prejudice could or could not have resulted to the plaintiff in error from the action of the judge in withdrawing the form of verdict and sending word to the jury that there were no further instructions is not a question for consideration in this connection. However, the record indicates that the jury had not agreed and were considering the manslaughter verdict in connection with the instructions when the communication was sent to the judge and the fact that shortly after the communication of the judge to the jury, a verdict was agreed on would be, as was said in the similar case of State vs. Murphy, Supra, a stubborn fact for consideration if an inquiry were entered upon as to the effect upon the jury of the communication between the judge and the jury.

The jury had been out more than twenty-four hours and had not agreed but were considering the manslaughter verdict and desired further instruction from the court. To their inquiry the court answered that there were no further instructions and withdrew the the manslaughter form of verdict. Almost immediately after the judge's communication, "Very shortly," in the words of the bill of exceptions, the jury returned a verdict of guilty of murder fixing the lowest penalty under the law. These facts show clearly the effect of the judge's communication in hastening the action of the jury and, under the authorities which have been cited, the court's action was in violation of the right of the defendant to be present at every stage of the trial, and vitiated the verdict.

May Become Precedent.

If this single case were the only one to be affected by this judgment it might not be a matter of serious importance, but it is of serious importance if this case becomes a precedent. A strict compliance with the practice of having all proceedings in court in presence of the accused and his counsel with an opportunity to be heard at all stages of the trial is a fundamental requirement of a jury trial in this state which has been maintained by an unbroken line of decisions.

It is against the policy of the law of this state to indulge in secret communications between the judge and the jury, and for the failure to observe this fundamental requirement in jury trial the judgment, in our opinion, should be reversed.

MOVE TO CURTAIL LIBERTY OF PRESS FAILS IN QUEBEC

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTREAL, Que., Feb. 19.—The effort to force the legislature of the province of Quebec to adopt a law drastically restricting the freedom of the press of the province virtually went up in smoke today.

The legislative assembly by a vote of 53 to 8 turned down the second reading of the bill which would halt criticism of races or religion in the press. A committee was named to study the matter, the house meanwhile condemning efforts to arouse racial and religious hatreds.

The action is equivalent to shelving the bill. Premier Taschereau said that while he was at first in favor of the bill he now believes public opinion would not stand for it. Jewish members of the legislature had introduced the bill following an anti-Jewish campaign by two Montreal weekly newspapers.

$10,000 FOUND IN SAFE OF CHINESE SLAIN BY BANDITS

The $10,000 in cash and bank drafts which Jung Hoey, a Chinese laundryman, guarded with his life against bandits, who murdered him last Sunday, was recovered from a small safe in the Chung Lee laundry at 3422 West North avenue yesterday. Workmen with an acetylene torch and an electric drill opened the strong box in the presence of Jack Rubens, assistant public administrator, and John Butler, chief clerk of the coroner's office.

When the body was discovered, the torso bearing eighteen knife wounds, police believed that tong slayers had committed the killing. When the contents of the safe were disclosed they decided that Hoey had refused to disclose the safe combination and was murdered by robbers after torture had failed.

3 FINGERED JACK GETS NEW TRIAL IN MURDER CASE

High Court Upholds Plea of Public Enemy.

William [Three Fingered Jack] White, labor racketeer and one of the original public enemies, who was sentenced to fourteen years in the penitentiary when he was convicted last April of the murder of Policeman Edward Pflaume of Forest Park, was granted a new trial yesterday by the Illinois Supreme court. The killing occurred on Dec. 13, 1925, but it was not until after many delays that White was sent to prison.

The Supreme court held that the state had erred when, in an endeavor to connect White with bank robbery and to show that he had been arrested for robbery, "it admitted evidence made by third persons against White in his absence and without his knowledge."

Story of the Killing.

Policeman Pflaume was slain when he and two other policemen, searching for the robber of a truck driver, entered the Mannheim inn in Forest Park. There they found White and Jimmy Johnston, both ex-convicts, and two women. The men resisted arrest and in the battle that ensued Johnston, as well as Pflaume, was killed.

White was tried in 1926 for the murder and was convicted, but the Supreme court on that occasion reversed the conviction and ordered the second trial. In the second trial his attorneys offered no testimony in defense, turning the state's case over to the jury.

Kissane Sentence Upheld.

Another of the public enemies, Anthony [Red] Kissane, did not fare so well. The Supreme court affirmed his sentence of one year in jail and a $300 fine imposed on him in 1929 by Judge Daniel P. Trude for carrying concealed weapons. Judge Trude's sentence already had been upheld by the Appellate court.

Kissane is already serving the term, having been taken into custody last August, when he failed to perfect his appeal to the state's highest court. In the decision yesterday the judges held that when a person is a known gangster or is suspected of a crime the police are justified in arresting him.

Another case passed on yesterday by the Supreme court was that of Julius Frank Maynard, colored, convicted of the murder of Julia Hawkins, who was beaten to death in 1930. It was held that the lower court should have determined whether Maynard was insane and should have been allowed a guardian at law. Maynard was sentenced to death. This sentence is wiped out and a new trial ordered in the Supreme court decision.

BANDIT IS SHOT BY COBBLER IN HOLDUP BATTLE

Peter Mordas, 45 years old, and his wife, Sophie, were visited by three robbers last night in their home, which is behind Mordas' shoe shop at 1219 Wade street.

One of the men took Mrs. Mordas into a bedroom to try to force her to tell where she had money hidden. The other compelled Mordas to lie down on a day-bed and bury his face in a pillow. Under the pillow was hidden the shoemaker's own pistol.

Choosing a favorable moment, Mordas rose, shooting. The range was close and the robbers all fled out a rear door. There a police dog belonging to Mrs. Mordas attacked them. One of the trio shot the animal.

The men ran through an alley after firing a few times at Mordas. All the bullets missed him. A little later the police learned that a man, shot through the chest, had been taken to St. Mary's hospital. He was identified as Frank Casper, 21 years old, 1613 Elston avenue. Mordas asserted he was one of the men who tried to rob him.

"Act Natural, Don't Put Up Hands," Gunmen to Victims

Three bandits, armed with revolvers, robbed the Retailers' Coal company at 1310 Altgeld street of $525 yesterday afternoon. The gunmen ordered Louis Shabino, an official, his son, A. R. Shabino, and Eden Peterson, an employé, not to raise their hands or lie on the floor, but to act natural so that anybody looking in would not suspect a holdup was in progress.

BELIEVE SLEEPING POTION WAS FATAL TO U. S. HEIRESS

GIBRALTAR, Feb. 19.—(AP)—Although an analysis of the viscera of Elizabeth Barrett Cook, the 20 year old Boston heiress, who died mysteriously aboard the liner Chinese Prince, had not been completed tonight, it was indicated by the authorities that she probably died of a German drug used as a sleeping potion.

The authorities said the young woman probably did not succumb either to pneumonia or ether, as had been previously conjectured.

Miss Cook died en route from Naples to the United States after receiving a fake cablegram saying her fiancé, Arnold St. George of Bost . was dead and advising her not to return to the United States. The body was taken ashore here and an investigation ordered.

NATURE'S NOT SO DUMB IS LATEST DRAINAGE THEME

Turn Reclamation Upside Down to Sell It.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 19.—[Special.]—The flood and drainage racket is looking for a new catchword to replace worn out slogans which have lost their old gold digging powers.

The idea which the new technique would like to condense into one word is that nature is not so dumb after all and that the next crusade is to undo a lot of the "improvements" established in decades of racketeering the Mississippi and its tributaries.

Considerable concern over all this has been expressed by engineers at the national drainage, conservation, and flood control congress, which got through today. Out of the palavering of the technicians one idea has been especially protuberant, that the public must be fed something new if the racket is to survive after the depression is over.

Reverse Reclamation.

"Conservation," which began to stir great enthusiasms along about 1904, is in the antique shop. "Reclamation," the engineers dolorously remark, now sounds like tripe in the public ear.

In fact, the modernist technique is to turn reclamation upside down and peddle it sunny side up as a reform to turn the water back into many old wild duck and black bass lakes from which it was pumped a few years ago at a cost of $35 to $100 an acre.

"Drainage," which was the catchword of a racket orgy up to a few years ago, is back like a boomerang. The new theory is that too many drains have increased floods in flood time and are twin brother to droughts.

One Ohio engineer told them last night that so many ditches have been dug in Ohio that rainfall rolls off the fields as off a house roof. A few weeks later river beds are running almost dry and crops are burning up.

Flood Control Not So Good.

"Flood control" also, it seems, is no longer a word to conjure with. It served to chisel hundreds of millions out of the government treasury. But the modern theory in the Mississippi racket is that flood damage is largely caused by too much drainage and too much reclamation of bottom lands along the water courses.

"Wild life," which has a vogue, is said by its friends to be slipping.

The newest wrinkle discussed by the technicians is "terraced farming." By some it may be regarded as not orthodox because it is not to be paid for by Uncle Som, but at that Washington is already hopping to it as a good "educational field" for lectures, pamphlet writers, and other government pay rollers.

PAINLEVE GIVES UP EFFORT TO FORM CABINET

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 20 [Saturday].—Paul Painleve gave up his efforts to form a new French cabinet early this morning.

Painleve went to the Elysee palace at 4:10 a. m. and informed President Doumer of his failure. He issued the following statement:

"During the two days I have been trying to form a cabinet I have not spared any effort to accomplish the task with which I was charged. The left parties accorded me full collaboration. The participation of others [Laval, Tardieu and other right wing factions] on which I counted was systematically refused.

"We cannot, therefore, form any other government than one that would be considered a cabinet of struggle, despite its program. Such a result would be contrary to the interests of the nation and the character of the task allotted to me. Therefore I must abandon it."

TRAIN BORN BABY SETS FOOT TODAY ON REAL EARTH

A child which since its birth Wednesday night on a railroad train has traveled half way across the continent will be carried down to solid earth for the first time today when the Pacific Limited of the North Western railroad pulls into Chicago.

The parents are Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Blundell. They boarded the train Wednesday morning in Los Angeles, bound for Preston, Ontario. The baby was born between Las Vegas and Caliente, Nev. At Salt Lake City railroad physicians and representatives of the Travelers' aid urged that Mrs. Blundell and her child be removed to a hospital, but she and her husband decided to finish their trip.

Mother and child were attended by a railroad physician yesterday in Omaha, and another staff physician of the North Western will be on hand to attend them when they change trains in Chicago today.

Husband Freed

MRS. HARRY MOIR JR.

Harry C. Moir Jr., 29 years old, son of the former owner of the Morrison hotel, was freed by Judge James F. Fardy in the Felony court yesterday on charges of accessory to robbery, despite the protests of police witnesses. At the same time the evidence in a prohibition violation case, which grew out of finding a gallon of gin in his apartment, was ordered suppressed, since police had no search warrant.

Assistant State's Attorney Frank Mast agreed with Judge Fardy that it seemed an attempt to persecute Moir.

Moir and Miss Verda Weir, 19 years old, were arrested in his apartment at 7805 Essex av., several weeks ago, after two confessed bandits, Alfred Ferdinandson and Wilfred Anderson, told police Moir had supplied them with a revolver and suggested robberies to them. A charge against Moir of larceny of a pistol found in the apartment was continued to March 10.

Statutory charges against Moir and Miss Weir were transferred to the Morals court and set for hearing Feb. 26. Mrs. Maxine Moir, the defendant's wife, was in court, and revealed that she wanted to hear the testimony for use in her suit for divorce, which was filed in the Circuit court on Thursday.

NORTH SHORE LINE EMPLOYES WILL VOTE ON PAY CUT

Consider Voluntary 10 Pct. Reduction.

A voluntary wage cut of approximately 10 per cent, to be effective for one year beginning March 1, is being considered by the 1,500 employés of the Chicago, North Shore and Milwaukee railroad. Following the expiration of the year's agreement a contract at the now existing scale would be entered into for another year.

Union employés will vote on the reduction next Tuesday. The consensus of company and union officials yesterday was that the employés would take a voluntary reduction and avoid long negotiations. It was learned that in union meetings the workers had favored the reduction. It is expected that all unorganized employés will follow the example of the union.

"No stipulation as to the exact percentage has been made," said Arthur Kjellquist, president of local 900 of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway employés. "Britton I. Budd, president of the company, and B. J. Fallon, operating vice president, met with our executive council, explained the situation and asked us to consider a wage reduction."

900 Members in Union.

There are 900 members in the union, including trainmen [motormen and conductors], mechanics, dining car employés, ticket agents, city trainmen in Waukegan and Milwaukee, crossing flagmen and towermen.

Under the present scale motormen and conductors on the main lines receive 78 cents an hour and motormen on the one man cars operated on the city lines of Waukegan and Milwaukee receive 67 cents an hour. They are limited to a maximum day of 11 hours.

At the time of the conference with the union executive council company officials pointed out that the income of the road had dropped about 35 per cent since 1929. With the Chicago and North Western, a directly competing road, having the advantage of a 10 per cent wage cut, officials said a similar reduction would be necessary if the North Shore was to continue operation on a comparable basis.

Seek Cut in Printing Scale.

The Franklin association of Chicago, composed of book publishers and job printers, yesterday opened negotiations with local 16 of the Typographical union, seeking a reduction in the basic wage scale of $57 a week. In a letter to the union S. E. Stern, president of the association, pointed to the decrease in living costs and in the income derived by the printing establishments as reason for the suggested reduction. A previous request to reduce the basic scale to $46 was voted down by the union. The association asks for a response by March 1.

MAN WHO SEIZED ARGENTINE RULE KEEPS HIS WORD

BY HAROLD TATAM.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUENOS AIRES, Feb. 19.—Provisional President Jose Francisco Uriburu, who took over the government by force of arms almost a year and a half ago, today addressed a characteristically outspoken manifesto to the people of Argentina. Tomorrow he will leave the office of chief executive in favor of a duly elected president, Gen. Augustin P. Justo.

GEN. JOSE URIBURU.

The general recalled that he is handing Argentina over to constitutional government, according to his promise, "which has been skeptically received by politicians who are congenitally unable to conceive of a fellow countryman relinquishing power once it is attained."

Assails "Political Pharisees."

Uriburu lamented that his projected constitutional reforms have not been achieved "due to objections to them by political pharisees who put their party before the state and who have made democracy with a capital 'D' a meaningless term, because they systematically used it to assist in grinding their own axes."

He denied that he is reactionary because he advocated reforms of the electoral system.

"It doesn't imply that I am not a good democrat because I wish to see democracy—with a little 'd'—replace the frantic demogogy which has done the country so much harm," he said. "Nevertheless if I had to elect between Italian fascism and Russian communism my choice could not remain in doubt.

Hits System of Government.

"Something is wrong with a system of government under which a country of stockraisers and agriculturists is represented in congress by 59 lawyers, 36 doctors, 9 stockbreeders, 2 Laborites and a sprinkling of other professions as has been the case in Argentina prior to the revolution."

The general concluded with a farewell to the people, declaring he is going "into retirement where I will always remain at the service of my country."

Thus Uriburu, rich son of Argentina, made good his promise of Sept. 6, 1930, to hold office "only until a properly constituted government could be chosen."

Hipolito Yrigoyen was the man Uriburu deposed. One of Uriburu's last acts was to issue a decree pardoning Yrigoyen on charges of graft under which he had been indicted. President Elect Justo was chosen in last November's elections.

SENATE REVEALS $100,000 CUT PAID ON LEGUIA LOANS

Washington, D. C., Feb. 19.—[Special.]—Additional credits of nearly $100,000 to Juan Leguia, son of the former president of Peru, from the National City, the Chase National bank, and the Royal Bank of Canada were revealed today with the publication of the latest findings in the senate finance committee's inquiry into the flotation of foreign loans.

Earlier testimony before the committee showed that Leguia's checking account with J. and W. Seligman & Co. of New York had been credited with $415,000 because of his activities in negotiating a 100 million dollar loan to Peru.

A commission of $3,000 was paid to Antonio Borda, a citizen of Colombia, in connection with a $3,000,000 loan to the Mortgage bank of Bogota in 1928.

P. J. Eder, a New York lawyer, was paid $42,000 in commissions for arranging bond issues totaling $4,000,000 to the department of Cauca Valley, Colombia.

The company paid $33,981.64 to Borda for arranging a $12,000,000 loan to the department of Cundinamarca, Colombia, in 1928.

F. J. Alvarado of Costa Rica was paid $38,677.46 on an $8,000,000 loan to that republic.

Marc. Wilenkin of London was paid $60,000 for arranging a $12,000,000 loan to the bank of Jugo-Slavia.

CANAL LAWYER STARTS WORK ON PAY ROLL SUITS

District Seeks to Regain Millions.

The first step in the campaign to recover millions of dollars from pay rollers who did no work during the "whoopee" régime of Timothy J. Crowe as president of the sanitary district was started yesterday. President Thomas J. Bowler of the district has announced that he will start civil suits against the former employés.

T. J. BOWLER. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Attorney George Luebeck of the district legal staff, with the aid of two investigators and two stenographers, began yesterday the compilation of the names and data of nearly 1,000 pay rollers who testified that they had been paid without working or implicated others in the recent sanitary district graft trial. The indictment in this case charged a $6,500,00 fraud.

Northrup Lends His Staff.

First Assistant State's Attorney John E. Northrup opened his files for the investigators and placed at their disposal the men who had worked under him in the investigation and prosecution of Crowe and other defendants.

Not only will the former employés be levied upon in civil suits, President Bowler announced, but also the dummy concerns which charged inflated prices for material and work.

The civil suits will hit several members and former members of the legisuature and political leaders who were on the pay roll while in office during Crowe's administration in 1927 and 1928.

Among the men to be named in the suit, according to President Bowler, will be the Illinois Valley Claims investigators, who were called "The Beardstown Bucaneers" by Prosecutor Northup during the graft trial. Northup charged that these men were paid to investigate claims in the Beardstown area, but which they never saw although they sent in weekly expense accounts of $100 and more.

Sue Public Utility.

At the same time a suit by which the sanitary district would recover more than $1,000,000 from public utility corporations if a favorable verdict is returned was started before Superior Judge Walter P. Steffen. Attorneys for the district are contending that the Commonwealth Edison company should pay $100,000 for moving, replacing and relocating underground equipment for the concern in construction of the north shore intercepting sewer.

A verdict for the district would open up the means for collecting more than $1,000,000 for work done in other projects, officials estimate. The case was continued until next Tuesday.

NEW WAUKEGAN BANK PLAN UP TO DEPOSITORS

Depositors' Dividend

A ten per cent payment to the 10,000 depositors of the South Side Bank and Trust company, amounting to $295,176, was ordered by State Auditor Oscar Nelson yesterday. A 25 per cent dividend has already been paid.

Reorganization of the closed Waukegan State and Waukegan National banks into one bank to be known as the Citizens' Bank and Trust company was proposed yesterday by the reorganization committee. Under present plans, the reorganization would go into effect about March 15. There would be a payment of $1,500,000 to depositors of the closed banks as a 35 per cent dividend and a $750,000 payment of public funds, all that is due, to the state and county.

Hope to Pay All Depositors.

The plan will be put up to the depositors who will be asked to sign stockholders' liability waivers under present plans. H. F. Marsh, president of the depositors' association, said a meeting would be held next week to decide whether the depositors would agree to the reorganization plan.

William H. Kirkham, of the reorganization committee, who announced the plan, said that the balance of deposits above the 35 per cent dividend would have to come from receivers of the banks. The new bank will be capitalized at $350,000, with surplus of $100,000 and an emergency contingent fund of $57,500.

May End Nelson Case.

The reorganization, if approved by the depositors, will probably mean the dismissal of charges of conspiracy in connection with the closing of the Waukegan State bank against State Auditor Oscar Nelson, Norman O. Geyer and George Woodruff.

John H. Bain and Frank Mulholland appeared yesterday before Judge James J. Kelly, posted bonds of $13,000 and $10,000 respectively, and were released. John H. Bain said that his father, John Bain, and the others recently indicted for conspiracy in connection with the failure of the twelve Bain banks, would appear today or Monday and post bonds.

Coast Guard Gets Word to Start Recruiting Here

Word was received from Washington yesterday by Capt. Ralph Whitehouse, coast guard recruiting officer in the middle west, with headquarters in Chicago, to recruit forty apprentice seamen for duty on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts immediately. The instructions added that forty men from this district will be required every month until further notice. The physical requirements for the coast guard are similar to those of the navy. There has been no recruiting since a year ago last July.

Police Arrest Gun Toter in Front of Judge's Home

Richard Wilbourn, 21 years old, colored, 459 Oakwood boulevard, was stopped by two policemen as he was walking past the home of Judge John P. McGoorty at 429 East 45th street last night. He aroused the suspicions of Policemen Thomas O'Donnell and John Gallagher because of a bulge in his right sleeve. A search revealed a .45 caliber revolver in his sleeve and he was taken to the Hyde Park station.

BECOMES MOTHER

BESSIE LOVE (MRS. W. B. HAWKS).

Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 19.—[Special.]—A girl weighing 7½ pounds was born to Bessie Love, motion picture actress and her husband, William B. Hawks, local broker, at Good Samaritan hospital today. The parents decided to name her Patricia. Hawks is a brother of Howard Hawks, film director, and of the late Kenneth Hawks, also a director, who was killed in an airplane tragedy.

PROFESSORS PUT AWAY DIGNITY IN "GRADUATION"

N. U. Veterans of 25 Years "Honored."

BY KATHLEEN M'LAUGHLIN.

Wit temporarily supplanted wisdom last night as more than 200 faculty members of Northwestern university parked their dignity and acquired mock degrees at a burlesque commencement program at the North Shore hotel in Evanston. Fifty-five of the professors, each of whom has taught for a quarter of a century or more in the institution, were at once the guests of honor and the targets for the humorous shafts of the speakers.

As "prexy by proxy," Ward Evans of the chemistry department started the raillery by assuming the rôle of President Walter Dill Scott, to whom he bears a startling resemblance.

Dean Ralph Heilman of the school of commerce thereupon gave pseudo advice to the pseudo graduates, to the laughter of the audience. His initial golden rule for success in an academic career was "Applesauce the administrative officers."

Among the group honored Dr. Frank T. Andrews, professor emeritus of gynecology, who has been on the faculty 46 years and is now on McKinlock campus has the longest record of service. On the Evanston campus Dr. James Taft Hatfield, who went there 41 years ago, is the senior. He is professor of German language and literature.

Thomas F. Holgate, dean emeritus of the college of liberal arts; John H. Wigmore, dean emeritus of the law school; Henry Crew, professor of physics, and Dr. Archibald Church of the medical school were included in the group that has served more than 35 years. Miss Isabel Lovedale, assistant professor of voice and interpretation in the school of speech, was the only feminine representative.

President Scott, who was among those receiving degrees, expressed the appreciation of the university to these teachers in the only serious address of the evening.

IGOE PUTS LOSS BY PROHIBITION AT 11 BILLIONS

Compares Its Cost with Present Deficit.

Representative James T. Igoe [Dem., Ill.], ardent advocate of the repeal of "the iniquitous prohibition amendment," told house members that if he had his way he would not vote one dime of the proposed $11,000,000 appropriations for prohibition enforcement for the fiscal year 1933.

Representative Clarence F. Lea [Dem., Cal.] introduced a resolution calling for a constitutional amendment which in turn would require a national referendum on repeal.

Senator Hiram Bingham [Rep., Conn.], at the closing session of hearings on his "beer bill," denounced Dr. F. Scott McBride, general secretary of the Anti-Saloon league, for not "choosing to discuss before the committee whether 4 per cent beer is intoxicating, and "for fooling the American people."

Most Costly Experiment.

Charging that the "noble experiment has been, not only the most miserable fiasco in government in our history," but also the most costly experiment, Representative Igoe added up columns of figures to show that the treasury of the United States has suffered to the extent of eleven billion dollars since the prohibition dawn of Jan. 1, 1920.

The actual cost of "attempted enforcement" during that time he placed at 375 million dollars. The loss in revenue, based on the liquor taxes that would have been collected merely in the 15 wet states at the time prohibition became effective, he estimated at $10,500,000,000. Adding to these two figures 375 million dollars in direct appropriations and losses in revenue from wine and malt taxes, Representative Igoe sets the total sum at eleven billions of dollars.

Would Run U. S. Three Years.

This sum is sufficient, he reminded his colleagues in their economy discussion, to pay all the ordinary operating expenses of the federal government for three years. It is, he reported, four times the estimated federal treasury deficit this fiscal year.

Repeal the prohibition amendment, the Chicago congressman urged, and the national treasury will be richer by a billion dollars a year. And with that arithmetic, he argued, it won't be any trick at all to balance the budget.

The constitutional amendment suggested by Representative Lea puts prohibition up to the people, and at the same time spares the legislator from proposing repeal. Members of congress simply propose an amendment that would give the people the right to determine the question for themselves.

Provides Popular Referendum.

His plan calls for a ratification of the amendment by three-fourths of the states. Such ratification would make a popular referendum mandatory and automatic.

Not repeal but modification concerned the senate committee considering Senator Bingham's plea for the return of beer.

Informed that Mr. McBride, for the second time, declined to appear at the hearings, Senator Bingham asserted that "the Anti-Saloon league and its friends put over the dry law when 2,000,000 of us were in France. They got it passed in the states where people did not want it, and they took advantage of the fact that referendums in these states have no effect on legislation."

DR. BEVAN REFUSED SPACE TO DISCUSS HIS LIQUOR CHARGE

Dr. Arthur Dean Bevan, noted surgeon and past president of the American Medical association, was refused space in the journal of the association yesterday for a letter explaining his recent testimony before a senate committee in Washington that 90 per cent of doctors' prescriptions for whisky are bootleg prescriptions.

DR. A. D. BEVAN.

Dr. Bevan's testimony was called an "insult to the medical profession," and an editorial in the journal reproved him for his utterances.

Thereupon he wrote a statement for the journal, to which he received a reply yesterday as follows:

"The board of trustees has given careful consideration to your letter and to the transcript of the testimony you presented in Washington. In your letter you seem merely to reiterate the opinions expressed in the testimony which received wide publicity in the press.

"The board of trustees, therefore, does not think it desirable to publish your letter in the journal since neither the letter nor the testimony was supported by any evidence other than your own opinions, and certainly they are not substantiated by any evidence available to the American Medical association."

KING OF ENGLAND PRAYS FOR ARMS MEET AND NATION

Receives 2 Archbishops of Britain.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 19.—Quietly and with so little fuss that it might have been a weekly affair, the archbishops of Canterbury and York journeyed up to Buckingham palace today and laid before King George their loyal and fervent expressions of hope and fortitude.

DR. COSMO LANG. [A. P. Photo.]

Although the hour's proceedings were reported casually, the action was almost unprecedented. The visits exposed eloquently the concern felt for the welfare of the nation, still termed by the king and queen as "my people."

Uses Medieval Terms.

The king in both cases had prepared statements in answer to the messages delivered by the two archbishops. His replies, couched in medieval language, referred to the "provinces" of Canterbury and York. They were delivered in the white gold throne room.

Replying to Dr. Cosmo Lang, the primate of all England, the king joined in prayers for the success of the disarmament conference.

"The well being of the world and the well being of our country, depend on the same inseparable causes," he said. "In the present crisis the church has not only a great task but a great opportunity. It is encouraging that the bishop and clergy fully realize this and are resolved to do their best to bring the eternal truths of Christianity to bear upon practical problems and duties in this difficult time."

Prays for People.

The king turned to British problems in reply to the archbishop of York.

"The fortitude of the British people in the face of their present difficulties has shown the world that the spirit of unity and mutual service which shone so brightly during the miseries of the war still lives in their hearts and is ready to be rekindled in a time of national emergency," he stated. "I pray that divine guidance may be with those who in these anxious days bear the great responsibility of directing the affairs of our own and other nations."

Mexico Asks Internal Security.

GENEVA, Feb. 19.—(AP)—Mexico will accept a reduction of armaments with a minimum compatible with internal security, its spokesman, Francisco Castillo Najera, told the world disarmament conference today.

He agreed that the draft convention should be the basis for discussions and said that "Mexico will support every initiative toward prohibiting exceptionally destructive weapons."

The Mexican delegation, he said, approved of moral disarmament. "Mexico," he said, "is a country whose little army serves only to guarantee internal order."

Pays Tribute to Wilson.

Mahmoud Fakhry Pasha, Egyptian delegate, opened today's session with a glowing tribute to Woodrow Wilson as "founder of the league of nations and initiator of this conference." He approved the French plan for arming the league of nations, provided it were accompanied by reduction of armaments.

A proposal was made to adjourn the conference Monday in honor of the 200th anniversary of the birth of George Washington.

Agha Khan, noted sportsman and head of the Ismailian Mohammedans, spoke for India. "The basis of all security," he said, "is a foreign policy by which no country covets its neighbors' possessions or seeks to infringe on its neighbors' moral and spiritual rights. The United States has a long record of success in combining peace and prosperity. It fitly entitles her to take the active part she has already taken in our deliberation."

N. Y. GANGS AGAIN CHECK GUNMEN AFTER LAW FAILS

Two with Records of 29 Arrests Found Dead.

New York, Feb. 19.—[Special.]—Gangland's vengeance proved more effective than justice again today. William [Wolfy] Burke and Augie Moreno, alias Harry Donovan, were found dead in the rumble seat of an automobile parked in West 114th street, overlooking the cathedral of St. John the Divine.

Both men had been shot, stabbed, and beaten. There were seven bullets in Moreno's body, and Burke had been shot six times. The police said the slayers used a submachine gun.

Burke, the police records show, was arrested thirteen times on charges of robbery and assault. Moreno had sixteen arrests on the same charge to his record. Each was about 28.

But the slaying today, according to Police Commissioner Edward P. Mulrooney, who took personal charge of the investigation, was the aftermath of Burke's attempt to "muscle in" on the more important and more profitable rackets.

On Oct. 6 last John Farley and Frank Smith, the latter the proprietor, were wounded as they stood in front of a speakeasy. Burke, Commissioner Mulrooney said, was accused of the shooting.

Farley and Smith were located and arrested for questioning. But there was an added mystery for the police to solve. A man was arrested today when he applied for treatment for a bullet wound at the Sydenham hospital, which is near the place where the slain man was found.

The bodies of the two men were discovered when Mr. and Mrs. Fred Steinbach, who have charge of the building in front of which the murder car was parked, saw blood trickling from a roadster.

MAYOR CERMAK BUYS 100 BENEFIT TICKETS FOR HUNGRY PUPILS

Mayor Cermak, speaking over W-G-N, last night on a program anticipating the bi-centennial balls at the Trianon and Aragon ballrooms Monday for the benefit of THE TRIBUNE'S Hungary School Children's fund, called attention to the concern of Washington for the welfare of the children of his time who sought an education. Mayor Cermak bought 100 of the $1 tickets for the benefits and Charles H. Weber, county commissioner, bought 50.

The mayor told of the interruption of Washington's education accasioned by his father's death when Washington was a small boy.

The official George Washington bicentennial quartette, the Oxford singers, gave a Washington day number, the Wayne King orchestra at the Aragon and the Bernie Cummins orchestra at the Trianon, were introduced, and the details given on the special stage and radio star entertainment that is in store for the visitors at both ballrooms.

Tickets are on sale at THE TRIBUNE public service offices. The proceeds of the balls will go toward providing free lunches for more than 10,000 needy children in the 243 public schools. Yesterday's contributions to the fund are as follows:

$15.50—North Shore Christian Sunday school.

THEY WERE TALKING ABOUT SMOKING... whether girls should or should not smoke; but it came out that all three of them had been smoking for a long time.

They were asking each other what made a good cigarette. And after discussing one thing and another, they agreed that a cigarette should be milder.

They thought also that it should taste just right—that is, not over-sweet, but on the other hand, not bitter—just sweet enough.

And everybody, they said, wants anything that is placed in the mouth just as pure as can be.

Then they began to think what cigarette, if any, filled this bill; and agreed that CHESTERFIELD was milder—tasted better—and was pure. The girls were satisfied, because "They Satisfy."

IS A CHICAGO CRIMINAL MISGUIDED?

Several victims of the young robbers, Carl Parker and Stanley Wilson, have expressed their astonishment at finding that the criminals had received their liberty, after conviction and sentence, from the court from which they apparently had received their punishment. Parker and Wilson had committed numerous robberies and holdups. In at least one of these they had fired shots when resisted. They were given indeterminate sentences, but had no more than entered the penitentiary when they were released. Judge Edward D. Shurtleff of Marengo pleaded in their interest with Judge Charles A. Williams, the trial judge, who ruled that the sentence should be held for naught.

The procedure was admitted to be irregular. Judge Shurtleff conceded that to vacate a judgment was error, but "mere error" which the Supreme court might well ignore. The Supreme court has not ignored error in other rulings of Judge Williams which freed convicts. When particular cases of otherwise obscure criminals are picked up for discussion it may seem that eccentricities of law are being given overweight, but the whole cloth of justice is made up of separate instances, and many of them are patches.

In this instance it has been the judicial assumption that the convicts were misguided and had better stuff in them, although their record was not of one but of many crimes. It is assumed that a person who takes to crime for his livelihood is misguided. The assumption is more than questionable. It could be true only if punishment made it so. In such cases as the one under discussion the law itself proves that it is not true, and therein lies the gravity of each case.

Who would be so unrealistic as to say that Al Capone, even when and if he goes to the penitentiary and serves nine or ten years, was misguided from any but a moral sense, considering all his experience with law? The law permitted him to live for years the life of a millionaire. If he had been an honest peddler of fruit, balloons, or plaster casts, a track laborer, or even a small shopkeeper, a lean frugality would have been his reward. Crime gave him a luxurious life, with a bandit's authority and the satisfaction of every whim. It was possible under the administration of law as he encountered it. If he thinks the law in its belated adventure with him has imposed too much upon him he is an ingrate.

This is true of hundreds of criminals who are allowed to be the better and not the worse for their attacks upon society, and the assumption that a person taking to crime is misguided is confronted with too many proofs to the contrary to stand up. It is true of many wretches who think that the bread line is a hard line and who stumble into a police bullet in their first awkward attempt at robbery. The penitentiary contains many men who would have done much better to have gone straight on a hard road rather than try what they thought was an easier one, but it also contains others who are not dissatisfied with the two sides of their life's ledger.

There are in Chicago hundreds of criminals who act upon the conviction that the breaks are with them and not against them, that political and judicial influence is available and effective in their interest, that society's defenses are its weaknesses, and that life in crime is profitable, enjoyable and safe. When it is really proved that they are misguided, and not until then, there will be a change.

Of the two judges involved in the case under discussion, Judge Williams, as has been said, has displayed a weakness for the technical as well as the sentimental plea. In one case he released a murderer from the penitentiary and in another a rapist, corrected in both by the Supreme court. Judge Shurtleff formerly was one of the most distinguished speakers the Illinois house of representatives ever had. His authority, his command of turbulent men, did not then rest upon sentimentality. An odd man, Shurtleff, although the comment be irrelevant. A man of iron fiber as speaker, but all the promise withered when his hand dropped the gavel of that office.

THE LAST OF THE NEANDERTHALERS.

It is undoubtedly hard lines for a man of thirty-six to face the fact that age has taken from him the ability in which he was preëminently gifted. Our favorite Neanderthaler, Mr. Dempsey, should not be blamed if he tries to throw his glove in the face of that enemy and deny its power over him, but thirty-six in the prize ring is sixty on the polo field, seventy in baseball, one hundred and forty in golf, and Methuselah at backgammon.

Mr. Dempsey would know for another fellow what he tries to ignore for himself. He looks over a mediocre field of heavyweights and yearns to wish ten years out of his legs and eyes. He fought four rounds Thursday night with our local primitive, Kingfish Levinsky, a strong boy whose boxing technique is something equivalent to pulling a plank out of the floor and swinging with it. Mr. Levinsky was raised in the Maxwell street fish market and quite properly adopts the thrashing methods of the sperm whale.

The old Dempsey blows, which nearly killed Willard, which left Billy Miske a wreck, which knocked Firpo, somewhat unfairly, back to the pampas and which no opponent, other than Tunney, ever survived feeling quite the same again, landed all over Levinsky's ribs and chin and were only nourishment.

Here's a consolation for the world's great mass of obscurities and mediocrities. They never were any good and the chances are they'll never be any worse. The Hollywood beauty to whom the years are sextons, the singer whose gargles begin to fail, the pugilist whose young legs are old, the tennis player who meets a young man—the persons of physical perfections, they have the tragedies. They die twice. But the rest of us probably do not live once.

REORGANIZING THE SANITARY BOARD.

The legislature has before it a bill to reduce the number of sanitary trustees from nine to three, and the salaries of those three to $6,000 each. There is, of course, no good reason for having as many as nine trustees, each with a substantial salary and perquisites and political obligations to fulfill. Three would cost less and could do all that need be done, as well or better.

The bill deserves support as a measure of economy, but it would be interesting to know whether the bill is being fostered for its shakedown values as well. The record of the legislature in this respect is not exactly above reproach. It will be recalled that dozens of members of the legislature were on the sanitary district pay roll in one capacity or another and that still other members of the legislature, if they did not themselves take jobs as attorneys or investigators, did manage to place some of their political followers on the pay rolls. No doubt some few of these salaries were earned, but the great majority of them were not.

It is conceivable, of course, that the favors to members were extended out of personal friendship and admiration. It is also possible that the sanitary district was being shaken down by the legislature and yielded weakly to the pressure. Perhaps this analysis throws some light on the proposed reorganization of the sanitary board.

INCOMPETENCE OR WORSE.

The escape of the convict Nelson was either the result of corruption or gross incompetence. In either case the officer directly involved should be discharged. Because of his carelessness or worse a criminal, said by the police to be a dangerous character, is let loose upon the community and must be retaken before he commits other crimes. This will take money and effort by the police, and may take lives.

The prison guard who had Nelson in handcuffs was compelled, he says, to let him go at the point of a gun. It is explained that a gun must have been thrust into Nelson's pocket while he was en route. In a cab with his guard, though handcuffed, he contrives to put the gun against the guard, force him to take off the handcuffs and leave the cab, in which he escapes.

We have too many guards who do not guard. Recently a criminal escaped from the county jail in circumstances that prove gross carelessness, stupidity, or worse. We know that criminals have ways of inducing official laxity and blindness, but no flagrant case, whether explainable as carelessness or corrupt influence, should fail to meet prompt and drastic treatment. If complicity is not proved, incompetence is, and should result in immediate discharge from the service. That would soon bring about a more alert discharge of duty.

It is said we must not expect a high degree of intelligence in prison guards and we do not. We expect something better than slackness or worse shown in these escapes. If politics were not the test for appointment we could have better service. Especially at this time there are many men who would be glad to have one of these jobs and could be relied upon at least to keep awake while guarding dangerous criminals.

VICTIMS OF LAWLESS LAW ENFORCEMENT.

The house of representatives has passed a special bill appropriating $5,000 for the widow of Henry Wirkkula, a victim of dry law enforcement. Wirkkula was a reputable citizen killed by a federal agent near International Falls, Minn., in June, 1929. Like Jacob Hanson of Buffalo, he failed to stop when signaled by the dry agent. Thousands of other citizens have missed or refused signals to stop on country roads, but were not given the death penalty. Wirkkula, like Hanson, had the misfortune to encounter an enforcer of the noble experiment. It was revealed, rather late for him, that he was not a smuggler, but that did not help the widow. The house has now voted a modest compensation by unanimous vote. Probably even a dry senate will approve, but congress ought not to stop at a special measure. It should enact a general law to establish a procedure by which all victims of lawless enforcement may procure such compensation as money can provide. This would be good public policy for more reasons than that of official restraint, which would be little if any. It would also be an act of common justice.

Editorial of the Day

SHORTAGE OF METAL.

[New York Evening Post.]

Prof. Theodore Hoover of Stanford university expects that a profound change will occur in the course of civilization within a century or so as a result of depletion of the world's supply of useful metals. He estimates that consumption proceeds at the rate of 1,000,000,000 tons a year and that it becomes steadily more difficult to maintain the supply at a cost which allows a profit. And he predicts an early end to the taxation of mines and the substitution of a bonus on every ton of ore brought to the surface.

What might follow if the world ran short of iron and copper, gold and tin, and other metals essential to present industrial processes provides an entertaining opportunity for speculation. The modern world depends greatly on beams and plates, wires and pipes, wheels and bars that are fashioned from the stuff that was hidden in the earth when the mountains were made. But there are two obvious possibilities which may avert the disaster of a serious metal shortage. One is the discovery of substitutes, which may be inspired by other causes than necessity. The other is the probability that immense stores of metal still lie undiscovered, either in remote regions of the earth or in fields that have not seemed promising to the surveyor and the mining engineer.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

THE GREAT GRASSHOPPER WAR.

The U. S. senate has just dug up a million and a half dollars to fight grasshoppers in the northwest this summer. Considering that the treasury of the United States is now a trifle of two or three billion in the red, this turning over of a million and a half dollars to fight grasshoppers is mighty generous of the senate. It shows that the government expects to use the marines, the regular army, the National Guard, and as much of the navy as can get up the Mississippi river.

While, as is customary in war, not much is being said at the Grasshopper Bureau in Washington as to when the troops will be mobilized and the grand advance ordered, it is understood from a man high in authority in Washington that the hostilities will begin very soon. This man, disguised as a June bug, has been among the grasshoppers and in and out of their camps for several months, and has told the senate the best plan for carrying on a successful campaign against the wily foe.

With a fund of a million and a half dollars, it is conjectured by some that the government plans to capture the grasshopper army alive and make every single doggoned grasshopper stand up in front of the firing squad and be shot to death. A part of the million and a half dollars, it is said, is being expended for small silk handkerchiefs, which would probably be used to cover the grasshoppers' eyes as they take their place in front of the stone wall and wait for the deadly volley from the firing squad.

The large amount of money set aside for the grasshopper war leads many of the bureau grasshoppologists in Washington to the belief that the senate does not intend to shoot the captured grasshoppers, but plans to build great grasshopper penitentiaries, with a separate cell, south front, hot and cold running water, a radio, and the privilege of a circulating library for each grasshopper prisoner. An attempt will then be made by the Grasshopper Bureau in Washington to reform the grasshoppers and teach them there is more to life than just hopping around in the grass.

The Grasshopper Bureau, in its great marble twenty story building at the corner of E and Z streets in Washington, will send the grasshoppers letters and circulars, teaching them how to cook and sew and plant their own grass, and how to hop scientifically and systematically instead of just jumping foolishly around they way they do now. Other grasshoppologists of the Grasshopper Bureau are said to be working out a plan for utilizing the hops of the grasshoppers for the benefit of the country. It may be possible to convert the grasshoppers' hops into power to run machinery, or the hops may be used in the manufacture of yeast and beer if, as and when we get the beer.

LEONIDAS C. DYER (never heard of him?), a Democratic congressman from Missouri, in warning his fellow Democrats they were permitting the dry Democrats from the south to run things, shouted, "The speaker's a dry!" That means Mr. Garner, prominently mentioned for the Democratic nomination in June. Ah, is Mr. Garner a dry? Everybody has been trying to find out about that for a long time. And still Mr. Garner saith not. He's the speaker of the house, and we wish he'd do a little speaking on that subject. It's getting on towards the ides of June? Under which king, Bezonian?

SENATOR JAMES HAMILTON LEWIS, the w. k. favorite son of Illinois, Virginia, North Carolina, Washington, and points west: "Demands U. S. Quit Lending Money to Foreign Nations." The said U. S., James, should thank you for the compliment.

NOT ONLY are they clamoring in Kentucky to tax bachelors a hundred bucks a year (luxury tax) but they also want to round them up each year in the county courthouses all over the state and permit the unmarried maidens to take their pick. That all sounds too complicated; it would be a lot simpler to just round up the bachelors every year and shoot 'em.

IN THE FIRST TEST talk over the telephone between London and Honolulu yesterday "Mary's Little Lamb" was read slowly and patiently from the phone in London. Bet that when the reader at the London end came to "What makes the lamb love Mary so?" the bored stiff party listening in on the Honolulu phone said, "Sure, I know the answer to that one, 'Because Mary loved lamb chops, you know.' Ask me another."

FOOD VALUES IN FRUITS.

A CORRESPONDENT wants to know the number of calories in a certain fruit, implying that his decision about eating it will depend upon the answer. He is on the wrong track.

In their wild state fruits are a product of the plant devised for the purpose of propagation of the species. Somewhere in the structure the plant has located its seed and that is the essential part of the whole. Other parts are merely there—either to protect the seed, to bring about its dissemination, or to produce a bed of organic matter which may help the young sprout with some easily used pappy food to live on during a few hours or days when the roots are forming and pushing their way outward. The meat of the fruit contains a little starch and sugar, a moderate amount of fruit acids, some minerals and vitamins, and much water.

By cultivation and breeding we change wild fruits into the present articles of commerce. Much the greater part of the change consists in the addition of water. The difference between the small, firm wild plum and the present day prize winning plums—the enormous, luscious, and luxurious article—is little more than a difference in the amount of water in the two specimens. The two set side by side are a pygmy and a giant. Evaporated to marketable dryness they are not much different in size. When all the juice is squeezed from a large, luscious peach or pear nothing is left but a little pulp, scarcely enough to make a man's size swallow. A large watermelon can be squeezed and then dried and ground into a powder which will weigh only a few ounces.

We eat fruit for its flavor, aroma, taste, and palate appeal. We justify ourselves in eating fruit by saying it supplies us with vitamins and minerals and helps to maintain the alkali reserve of the body. These are valid reasons—as valid as the reasons for eating a standard number of calories. Probably most people get too many calories in the day's diet and pay the penalty in overweight and strain on vital organs. So far as we know few, if any, people in North America get too much vitamins and minerals in their diet.

It should be said that there are certain exceptions to these statements. Bananas, being less watery than the general run of fruits, have somewhat more than the usual food values. There are banana flours and, within limits, bananas replace some of the milk and other foods eaten for calories, especially in the diets of children. Dried fruits of several kinds supply considerable calories per pound, principally because of the sugar they contain. Preserved fruits yield a fair amount of calories, this too because of the sugar content.

BREATH AND FINGERNAILS.

H. A. writes: Recently you mentioned that you are more learned as to convex fingernails than concave fingernails. What information do you have regarding them? I have convex fingernails and they seem to be growing more so. People have remarked about them. I have heard that this is a possible indication of T. B.

REPLY.

People who have chronic difficulty in breathing eventually develop clubbing of the fingers and convex nails. It is caused by chronic asthma, heart disease with heart asthma, chronic consumption with shortness of breath, miner's phthisis, and some other causes of difficult breathing.

NO TROUBLE INDICATED.

Anxious writes: I am worried about my lung condition. I do not cough, but at times, after smoking cigarets, lumps come to my throat and I expectorate dark and sometimes white lumps. Where can I go to have a thorough lung examination free of charge?

REPLY.

Your symptoms do not indicate you have any trouble. If you want an examination, why not pay for what you get, saving it out of your tobacco money?

HAVE AN EXAMINATION.

Miss J. H. P. writes: My mother has a lump about half as big as an egg on the side of her right breast. It seems when she gets a little bit cold it affects her. The other day the shooting pain across her chest left her gasping for breath for a couple of minutes. Do you think it could be cancer or tumor?

REPLY.

It might be, though your description does not fit well. My advice is that she be examined right away.

RIGHT AS USUAL.

Mrs. C. M. C. writes: My husband takes milk of magnesia almost constantly. I tell him he takes too much. What do you think about it?

REPLY.

A BAD PRACTICE.

Chicago, Feb. 14.—[Friend of the People.]—Kindly advise me what to do in a case of this kind: A man on the third floor just south of us throws all his garbage in our yard. It's easier to throw it there than to carry it down. At first we used to put it in our garbage can, but he is getting worse, as he throws everything down now regardless of what it is. E. A. T.

Report is made that offender has been notified to stop throwing garbage into the yard and to make use of porch can which has been provided for garbage output. Location will be kept under observation.

UNPAID RENT.

Dixon, Ill., Feb. 12.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A tenant lived in a house and paid his rent promptly for years, but is now unemployed and unable to pay. 1. Can the landlord have him put out? If so, how is it done? 2. How long does it take? 3. Is the landlord responsible for damage which might happen to tenant's furniture? B. H.

1. Yes, the first step is to serve a five day notice.
2. It would take at least fifteen days if you count the notice, the summons, and the minimum stay of execution.
3. Not if he acts legally.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

MUST WAIT A YEAR.

Chicago, Feb. 14.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Am writing you in regard to a question of marriage. I wish to marry a Wisconsin divorcee who was divorced in that state last June. 1. Do we have to wait a year for her divorce to become final? 2. Does she lose the custody of her child? 3. Can we be married here and be within the law? R. M. M.

1. Yes.
2. Decision as to custody of the children is largely discretionary.
3. Only after expiration of a year.

A WAITING MATTER.

Chicago, Feb. 14.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I am seeking information regarding what steps can be taken to ascertain whether the money I requested to be dispatched to a foreign country from a bank which recently failed can be retrieved. I asked them to send the money on Saturday and the bank closed on Monday. I am unable to secure any satisfactory reply from the bank regarding the matter. Any information you can give me will be highly appreciated. T. J.

It does not seem likely that you can expedite matters by court proceedings. We advise you to wait until the receiver is ready to give you the information.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

CHINA-JAPAN WAR, 1894

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—War exists and hostilities are commenced. This partial confirmation of the reported declaration of war made by Japan against China was contained in a dispatch received tonight by Secretary Gresham. It was from Minister Dun, diplomatic representative of the United States at Tokio, and under date of today. There is no specific statement in the dispatch that Japan has declared war, but in view of the sentence that "war exists and hostilities are commenced" the state department officials say a declaration is unnecessary. Minister Dun also said in his message that he is taking care of the Chinese archives in Japan and looking after interests of Chinese residents in that country, according to instructions sent him some days ago, after China requested such action. The Japanese legation here is without official notice of a formal declaration of war. Secretary Gresham refused to discuss what the probable attitude of this country will be in regard to the sale of munitions of war by merchants of the United States to either China or Japan. The only purchase of arms by China in America, so far as is known, is in a contract for 20,000 revolvers of the Russian pattern. Neither Japan nor Corea has placed any arms contract, although Capt. Noaki, military and naval attaché of the Japanese legation, has been visiting the arms factories of New England and getting prices.

TOKIO, Aug. 1.—The Japanese government has informed the representatives of foreign powers here that a state of war exists between Japan and China. This is regarded as equivalent to a declaration of war.

28 YEARS AGO TODAY

FEBRUARY 20, 1904.

SHANGHAI. — A large Japanese cruiser has arrived at Woosung, eleven miles north of this port, and is undoubtedly on the lookout for the Russian gunboat Mandjur. The situation is being watched with deep interest by all foreign representatives as it involves many delicate points of international ethics. The chances of the Mandjur escaping are considered nil and a hard fought battle is expected.

ST. PETERSBURG.—Viceroy Alexieff has been deposed from power, so far as the military and naval conduct of the war with Japan is concerned. War Minister Kouropatkin will be appointed commander in chief of the army operations in the far east and Vice Admiral Makaroff, who is now on his way east on a train which is expected to reach Port Arthur in ten days, breaking all previous records, is to be commander in chief of the navy. Rear Admiral Jessen has been appointed to succeed Rear Admiral Ewald von Stackelberg, commander of the Vladivostok squadron. The Russian government today abolished the censorship upon all news and telegrams going abroad.

LONDON.—A dispatch to the Morning Post from Chefoo says the American squadron is expected to arrive there shortly. The dispatch adds there is possibility of trouble with Germany, which claims exclusive rights in the province of Shantung. It is stated the Americans intend to land marines at Chefoo.

WASHINGTON.—Another ominous prediction of uprisings in China has been received from Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans, commanding the Asiatic station. The navy department has given heed to his declaration and 1,500 marines are to be held in the Philippines to protect American interests.

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

FEBRUARY 20, 1916.

CHICAGO. — Friberg's dance hall, now known as the "Old Vienna" and the rejuvenated bright spot of the 22d street levee, was rocked when a bomb was exploded in the rear of the building. The shock was felt in Colosimo's noted café of the red light district, where windows were smashed.

NEW YORK.—The most elaborate police net ever spread in New York was set in an effort to apprehend Jean Crones, Chicago anarchist. Ten thousand men — the entire police force—were furnished with the latest description of the man who has taunted the authorities for their inability to catch him. Every point by which Crones might leave New York is guarded.

PETROGRAD.—The victorious Russian army in the Caucasus continues its sweep westward, and, according to an official war report, the grand duke's forces have captured Mush, eighty-three miles southeast of Erzerum. Other Russian forces, it is announced, have occupied the village of Akiem. The report says the remainder of the Thirty-fourth Turkish division has been captured northwest of Erzerum.

CHICAGO.—A man with a repeating rifle ran amuck in State street shooting right and left into the crowds that thronged the streets in the rush hour at 5:30 o'clock. When the police arrived one man had been killed and one perhaps fatally wounded, while another was dangerously wounded. Ira T. Meltzer, proprietor of a shooting gallery, was the man who did the shooting.

THE CARDOZO APPOINTMENT.

Chicago, Feb. 16.—The appointment by the President of Judge Cardozo of New York to the Supreme court of the United States deserves severe criticism. That gives three members of the court [Chief Justice Hughes, and Justices Stone and Cardozo] to one city and the small area of the Second circuit, Vermont, Connecticut and New York.

Until the resignation of Justice Holmes of Boston that city and the little First circuit [Rhode Island, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, and Maine] had two members of the Supreme court, Holmes and Brandeis.

Such situations are unfair to the bench and bar of the other eight circuits, which have plenty of experienced and capable state and federal judges. They are unfair to the territory, also. They are unfair to the Supreme court, which should possess the thought and knowledge of every section of the country. Further, they are contrary to the old policy which should never have been departed from, that of having each of the nine justices from one of the nine [now ten] circuits, so far as reasonably practicable. There is no law for this, but there is a statute that each of the justices be "assigned" to preside in a circuit. But as able judges abound in California, Oregon and Washington, why should one of three men from New York City, for example, be assigned to the Ninth circuit?

With three justices from New York City, one [Roberts] from Philadelphia and one [Brandeis] from Boston, the majority of the court are from a very narrow area and from three of the ten circuits. The great Fourth circuit [Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North and South Carolina], the great Fifth circuit [Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas], the great Seventh circuit [Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin], and the great Ninth circuit [California, Oregon, Nevada, Washington, Idaho, Montana] are without representation on the Supreme court. The Tenth circuit [Colorado, Wyoming, Utah, Kansas, Oklahoma, New Mexico] has two justices from adjoining states, Vandevanter of Wyoming and Sutherland of Utah.

Your dispatch says that Cardozo wrote a dissenting opinion to express his favor of the New York bonus law because "the bonus represented the 'liquidation' of a 'moral obligation' incurred by the state to its sons who had fought."

They were not in the service of New York. They fought for every other state as much as for New York. They were soldiers of the United States, and it was for the nation to pay them. It was the duty of the New York court to follow the law, as it did, and not try to "liquidate," as Cardozo would, a "moral obligation" of which judicial tribunals have no jurisdiction.

THOMAS JAMES NORTON.

BOTH ABSENT.

Chicago, Feb. 17.—In this morning's TRIBUNE I discover that neither U. S. senator from Illinois—Glenn or Lewis—was present and voting on the Costigan-La Follette unemployment relief bill. Whether they would have voted for or against it is not the point. The significant issue is that they were found not voting on the only major bill to come before the U. S. senate which was designed to directly relieve unemployment.

Not only that, but an editorial appears in this same issue of the paper entitled, "Keep Senator Glenn at the Fighting Front." He doesn't seem to want to be at the fighting front, especially when he is needed. W. R. BOORMAN.

A WINTER RAINBOW.

Iron Mountain, Mich., Feb. 15.—For fifteen minutes yesterday afternoon, from 4:30 to 4:45, a rainbow was plainly visible in the western sky, fragments of both sides being seen. The sky was clear, except for occasional fleecy white clouds, and the weather was crisp and cold, the temperature being 14 degrees above zero. No one to whom I have mentioned it can recall ever having seen a rainbow in cold winter weather.

J. E. PATTERSON.

A FORGOTTEN REGIMENT.

Chicago, Ill., Feb. 15.—As your paper is a national institution I write these few lines so the war department may take notice. This is regarding the regiment of infantry Uncle Sam forgot, the old 15th U. S. infantry, hidden since they got in bad at Fort Sheridan, Ill., in 1896 when the regiment turned the tables over on account of the food they served in the mess hall. THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE made investigations of this affair and in its editorial upheld the cause of our action and sharply criticized the officers in charge of the mess.

Then in 1896 the 15th U. S. infantry was ordered to relieve the 25th U. S. infantry [colored] in New Mexico and Arizona. The Spanish war came on and the 15th infantry was ordered to guard peaceful Indians on Indian reservations in the United States. After the Spanish war they were ordered to Cuba [Porto Principe] for pick and shovel duty.

When the world war came on the 15th infantry was left behind as usual in China. The regiment was sent there in 1912 and has never returned since. The war department gave them a one way ticket and they are still there, 20 years in one post. When will the war department forgive the regiment so we could see them again in the United States some day? LOUIS GROSSMAN.

Formerly Company D, 15th Infantry.

THE STATE AUDITOR'S QUALIFICATIONS.

Chicago, Feb. 16.—It is not easy to understand why the Democratic boss or bosses chose Mr. Barrett for their candidate for state auditor in preference to T. B. McGrath Jr., former president of the Mayfair State Savings bank. It surely appears to have been made on a basis other than qualifications for the office.

One of the educational qualifications of the holder of this job should be the ability to analyze the financial condition of a bank and close it, if necessary, before depreciating investments or the overt acts of its directors or officials dissipate the capital, thus avoiding loss to depositors. Mr. McGrath proved himself capable last fall by voluntarily closing the Mayfair bank and paying the depositors in full. It would be welcome indeed to have some one in that office who had the welfare of depositors in mind.

THE RIGHTNESS OF CONDITIONS.

North Riverside, Ill., Feb. 16.—About once every two weeks some nitwit has to break into print with this junk: "You will be pleased to know I saw a robin this morning," or "a dandelion," or "a violet."

What of it?

Supposing we had a first class snowstorm in July—what of that? True, it would be unusual, but not strange. It would mean this: That conditions were just ripe for a snowstorm, or it wouldn't be here. So it is with the robin, violet or dandelion. If conditions were not right, they would not be here, be it May or December.

I only wish we could have them the year round. I mean the birds and flowers, not nitwits. A. E. ANDRESEN.

AN INCIDENT CLOSED.

Carlinville, Ill., Feb. 12.—I am deeply grateful to your great newspaper and also your Springfield correspondent, Percy Wood, for the publication of your editorial and also news articles exonerating me of any connection with the Chicago sanitary drainage district scandal. I knew I sponsored no one, nor received a cent from this district, and I believed confidently that you would in time find this to be true and publish the truth, as you have.

The unfortunate occurrence is a closed chapter with me. TRUMAN A. SNELL.

WELCOME, STRANGER.

Park Ridge, Ill., Feb. 9.—I tendered a $5 bill toward the purchase of chamois skins the other day. The clerk called the floorman and asked for an O. K. on the $5 bill. Evidently it had been so long since she had seen one that she had forgotten how they looked. This bill had been received at the First National bank. WILL H. ADDLER.

BRUNDAGE TELLS HIS POSITION ON GOVERNOR RACE

Prefers Not to Run; Makes Plea for Chicago.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Under pressure from friends who have urged him to enter the Republican governorship fight, Edward J. Brundage issued a statement yesterday defining his position.

"Enthusiastic friends," the final paragraph read, "have circulated petitions and asked my sanction to file them, Monday being the last day. I appreciate their enthusiasm and their friendship, but there are others who are better able to stand the expense than I."

This was accepted as an expression of unwillingness to run, but, while the former attorney general refused to be more specific, the statement was not understood as closing the door finally.

Makes Plea for Chicago.

Although almost counting himself out of the picture, Mr. Brundage's statement voiced his ideas of the great need of some new candidate in the field.

"The desperate plight of our local government," it read, "emphasizes the need of a governor who understands Chicago's problems and is in sympathy with them.

"The threatened closing of our public schools—thousands of children thrown upon the streets, the teachers unpaid, all forms of governmental activities reduced to the minimum, meeting with indifference at Springfield—should arouse Chicago's voters.

"Chicago asked for relief, but received scant consideration. Its taxpayers are unbearably burdened. Without any threat to the people downstate, Chicago must use its voting power to obtain the relief it needs.

"Without prosperity in Chicago the state cannot thrive. It is the center of Illinois' activities, the market for farm products, the financial inspiration of the state. There can be no rivalry, except as inspired by politics, between Chicago and downstate voters."

Keep Out of State Race.

Unless there are changes in the situation, the Deneen Cook county group of Republicans will pursue a hands off policy in reference to all state offices except that of attorney general, for which they will back Assistant State's Attorney John E. Northup.

In other words, they will not indorse United States Senator Glenn, who seeks renomination; will not choose between the candidates for governor—Omer N. Custer, Attorney General Carlstrom, William H. Malone, and Len Small—and will not back any candidate for lieutenant governor, treasurer, auditor, or secretary of state. When the time comes for marking sample ballots they may favor some candidates, but the present attitude of the group is to hold aloof from the state battle as a whole.

Announce County Slate.

This became known yesterday when the Deneen county slate, a complete one, was announced. Attached to the local list was the name of Northup, but it was explained that this indicated an indorsement rather than that he was a candidate of the faction.

Assistant State's Attorney Northup left the city at noon on law business that will keep him away over the week-end. He has not announced his candidacy for the attorney generalship but it was said by those close to him that his petition will be filed at Springfield today and that he will issue a statement some time next week.

Much of the Deneen county slate—headed by the name of State's Attorney Swanson—has been public for some time. The group's new selections, announced for the first time, were the following:

Circuit clerk—Donald V. Steger.
Superior clerk—Jacob D. Allen.
Appellate clerk—Paul F. Koenig.
Coroner—Edmund G. Brust.
Surveyor—Valentine F. Weber.
County commissioner—Wilbur C. Smith.

The slate also included eleven entries for the Municipal court, leaving one place for the city bench open. Those indorsed included four sitting judges, Samuel Heller, Samuel H. Trude, Edward B. Casey, and George B. Holmes. The new entries were Edgar B. Elder, Lewis P. Holt, Arthur A. Mainia, August F. Mroz, William H. Haynes, Elmer M. Walsh, and Edward A. Fisher.

ABE ALLEN GETS THREE YEARS FOR GAS TAX FRAUD

Abe Allen, former head of the Midway Refining company of South Holland, who was found guilty of defrauding the state of gasoline taxes by a jury on Feb. 10, was sentenced to three years in the Bridewell and fined $3,000 by Judge John Prystalski in the Criminal court yesterday. A motion for new trial was denied.

Allen is the first defendant to be sentenced for gasoline bootlegging.

Former Judge George Barrett, who is representing the petroleum interests in the gasoline tax fraud cases, praised Assistant State's Attorneys John Hampton and John O'Hora for their work in obtaining the conviction. He announced that Attorney General Oscar Carlstrom has promised to assign one of his assistants to institute civil action to force certain gasoline dealers to pay their taxes. Mr. Barrett estimated that the state would collect $500,000 by this action.

CRIMINAL COURT.

Frank Hixon, assault to rob, sentenced to 1 to 14 years in the penitentiary; Charles Janis, conspiracy, sentenced to 1 year in the county all; Dennis Zenos, conspiracy, sentenced to 1 to 5 years in the penitentiary by Judge George Fred Rush.

Abe Allen, violation of the gasoline tax law, sentenced to 3 years in the Bridewell and fined $3,000 by Judge John Prystalski.

Robert Ruzinski and Chester Milewski, robbery, sentenced to 1 year to life each in the penitentiary by Judge Thomas Taylor.

Two men and a woman were held at the Racine avenue police station last night on a charge of slugging and robbing Miss Cecelia Rosendehl, 74 years old, in an alley near her home at 1626 Wright street as she was returning from a church meeting on Thursday night. Hearing a woman scream, members of the Redfield Athletic club at 1628 Wright street ran out and captured Noble W. Jahnke, 21 years old, 1518 Mohawk street. He implicated Mrs. Emily Collins, 32 years old, and Frank Warner, 35 years old, who were seized in a flat at 4004 Clarendon avenue. In the flat police found Miss Rosendehl's purse, her gold watch, and $1.08 which she had.

The Charming Cheat

By Clara Sharpe Hough

SYNOPSIS.

Ricardo Dane visits New York in search of his aunt, Miss Filomena Stanley, his mother's half sister. Ricardo's mother had recently died and left him heir to the ranch and mountain land in Romeu valley, California, where he had spent most of his life. He intended to find his sole remaining near relative and bring her back to Romeu valley. He had understood this to be his mother's dying wish. His aunt, an actress, had been out of favor with the family.

Ricardo locates a Filomena Stanley, but instead of an aged aunt he finds a beautiful young aunt. She is living in a Bohemian studio with a Follies girl named Frances. Ricardo readily believes this lovely creature, who acknowledges the relationship. His arrival was fortunate for Filomena, who had been out of work for weeks and was in a sad state financially. Ricardo showers her with gifts and moves her into a better apartment. He moves into the same building on another floor. Webster Sutton, a college friend of Ricardo's, visits New York. He and Eunice Greenway, a girl from home, who is studying in New York, are entertained by Ricardo and his aunt. Eunice is a friend of Ricardo's fiancée, Rachel Beatty. She heartily disapproves of Filomena. Web believes his friend is being trimmed, and before he leaves tells him so. Ricardo learns that Web was right when Filomena is called home due to the illness of her father. After another search Ricardo finds his real aunt. She is acting in a Broadway play. Ricardo takes Filomena to the city hall, where they obtain a marriage license. His plan is to have her prepare for the wedding and leave her waiting at the church, but before he can carry it out Rachel arrives in New York with her father, who has been called there on business. Ricardo takes Rachel to call on his real aunt. She doesn't fit in with the stories Rachel has heard. That evening Ricardo leaves Rachel and her father at the theater and calls on his aunt to tell her of his difficulties. Rachel's father wants her to marry Ricardo in New York and sail on a honeymoon cruise. After the theater they visit a night club, where they run into some of Filomena's friends.

INSTALLMENT XXIV.

A SURPRISE VISIT.

"Filomena," explained Fleming loudly and clearly, "was certainly not Ricardo Dane's little darling a few months ago. Don't argue that with me, for I can't stand it. I myself personally was the cream in that girl's coffee until he came along. He simply came and cut me out. She fell for him at sight, and he hasn't been out of her sight since." He burst into laughter to signify that this was humorous.

"Have a smoke, Fleming," urged Ricardo. He turned to Rachel. "He's drunk as he can be. We'd better clear, hadn't we?"

He began explaining that they had to leave. Mr. Beatty, who had been regarding them with growing consternation, hastily rose.

They were out of their chairs, Ricardo tucking under his plate a bill sufficient to cover the waiter's demands, when Fleming flung his final salvo.

"You're right," he exclaimed loudly. "Of course I'm a fool. Poor old Dick. Doesn't want his right hand to know what his left's doing, does he? That's the idea. My mistake. This here's his right hand and little old Fil's his left. What a team!"

"Daddy," said Rachel, "something perfectly awful has happened to Dick.

His drunken laughter followed them as they escaped, all too late.

"That was a pretty story your friend rang in on you, Dick," said Rachel in the taxi.

"He was drunk," said Ricardo briefly and with decision.

"That's your story and you'll stick to it, I suppose," she hazarded.

"You could see he was drunk," said Ricardo.

"The whisky wasn't half bad," said Mr. Beatty, "but they do certainly know how to charge for it. Which one of those pretty little things did you say was the proprietor, Dick?"

"The what?"

"I thought you called her Jeannette, and that was the same name, and I thought all these night clubs were run by girls of—well, of that type. Then she wasn't——"

"No, not Jeanette. Annette," Ricardo explained.

"The girls weren't drunk, too, were they, Dick?" asked Rachel.

"Well, they weren't really——"

"They seemed to remember the same thing that he did," she went on. "Now if he was making it all up because he was drunk, it's funny that they would——"

"They were humoring him," said Ricardo. "You know."

"He wasn't so very quiet at that," remarked Rachel.

He agreed heartily, if silently, that Fleming certainly had not been quiet.

When they reached the hotel, Mr. Beatty suggested that he go on upstairs and leave them to say good night alone. He did not, however, seem really surprised when they both said hastily that it was late and they could say good night now.

"Daddy," said Rachel at breakfast, "something perfectly awful has happened to Dick."

Her father looked mildly startled. "How do you know, honey?" The paper——"

"No, no. I mean," she paused. "I mean—he isn't the same as he was at home. Something has happened to him while he's been here in New York."

He laughed. "His friends don't look much like Romeu valley, do they?"

"Yes, I know," she agreed, "he was acting queer last night because he was ashamed of them, of course. And I should think he ought to be. But it—there's more to it than that, Daddy. His aunt—do you know his Aunt Filomena?"

"I've heard enough about her. Don't believe I've ever seen her."

"There, I knew it." Rachel was deeply disappointed. "I hoped that you'd known her out west some time or other. I don't just know when. You see, I don't think she's his aunt at all."

"Why not? Why shouldn't she be his aunt, I'd like to know?"

"Well, maybe—I don't know. I'm not sure I know just what I mean myself. She says she's his aunt. He says she's his aunt. But she somehow——"

"Then why on earth do you think she isn't? What's got into your head this morning, baby? Dick's aunt not his aunt! Why, the whole idea of his coming to New York in the first place was this old aunt. And if she——"

"Yes, exactly," cried Rachel triumphantly, "and if she really isn't his aunt at all—well, don't you see? Then that isn't what he came for. And if that isn't what he came for, then there's more than you've noticed in these things that keep coming up, like last night. How about this girl they were talking about, 'Dick's pretty little darling'? Who's she, I want to know? Well, she's not his aunt!"

"Hardly," agreed Mr. Beatty. "O, hardly. Of course, this poor chap was drunk as a baboon. He was babbling, more or less——"

"Well, he was babbling something that made Dick pretty uncomfortable," rejoined Rachel. "Dick played the drunken fool theory as hard as he could. He didn't want us to pay enough attention to find out how much truth was in it."

Her father had nothing to offer on this topic, and for a few moments Rachel attended to her omelet. Presently she looked up again.

"I'm going to find out about it," she said.

"What?" inquired Mr. Beatty, who was now reading.

"About Dick."

"O, yes, of course," said Mr. Beatty, turning to the paper.

"Well," said Rachel, briskly, having made up her mind, "I've quite a bit to do today, and I guess I won't see you till tonight."

"Do you need any money?" inquired her parent.

"No, I don't think so," she replied surprisingly enough, "I'm going to get Eunice Greenway to come with me."

"You can have them sent collect," offered Mr. Beatty. "I'll tell them to pay at the desk. I told you I'd stand for a good trousseau."

"Trousseau?" said Rachel. "O, yes. Well, I'm not shopping today. Not this morning, anyhow. I've something else to do."

"Why, honey, I thought we settled all that last night. I thought you and Dick had decided——"

"Dick and I haven't decided anything. We haven't had a chance to yet."

"Well, honey, you'll have to hurry and make up your mind. I thought it was all settled. You'd better——"

"I'll see you tonight," said Rachel firmly, and departed upward to her room again to prepare for a day's real business.

. . . . . .

Ricardo rang Filomena on the house telephone.

"Fil, darling, come for a ride?"

"You must. I've got to talk to you."

"O, no, you haven't at all. You're just as busy as you can be, entertaining the folks from out of town, and you haven't any time for me at all."

"Fil, you know perfectly well I couldn't help it. I had to——"

"Of course I know it." Her voice was honey sweet. "So I just made the best of things and filled up my own date book elsewhere. Bye, bye, pet."

Hating his adopted aunt cordially, he slowly descended the single flight of stairs to the lobby of the house. Here he paused to light a cigaret and debate as to how soon he had better call Rachel at the hotel. The chief difficulty in deciding when he had best see Rachel was that he had not yet the slightest idea what he was going to say to her.

At the top of the steps he almost collided with Rachel, who was just starting to enter the door. Close behind her was Eunice Greenway.

"Ray, where on earth—what're you doing here?" he stammered.

Rachel, slightly flushed and very pretty in her new fur coat, smiled at him sweetly and replied, "Aren't you up early this morning?"

"Good morning, Dick," said Eunice brightly and cheerfully. "We came around to call on your aunt."

Bright Sayings of the Children

My little son, Richard, age 6, came home from school very disappointed. When I inquired what was wrong he replied: "Mother, I like the children, but I think my teacher is selfish." When I asked him why he answered: "First she gives us scissors to cut out papers, and before we go home she takes them back again." R. P.

Kendall, aged 5, had eaten a rather large Sunday dinner and was observed opening his belt for better accommodations. However, it seemed to be without the desired result, for a little later he came to me and said, "Mother, I guess it is my skin that is tight." W. L. W.

Woman Pens Intimate Study of Lawrence

Mabel Dodge Luhan Offers Vivid Portrait.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"Lorenzo in Taos," by Mabel Dodge Luhan. [Knopf.] Published last Wednesday.

"LORENZO IN TAOS" is primarily an intimate portrait of D. H. Lawrence done in sharp, clear, brilliant lines by one who knew him in that strange, tense way that human beings do sometimes know one another. It is one of the most interesting literary portraits ever to be published, not alone for what it reveals about its subject but for what it reveals about the artist who did the portrait, what it tells about the queer swift urgencies of spirit between those who are essentially of one spiritual piece, as Mrs. Luhan says she and Lawrence were.

Frontispiece to "Lorenzo in Taos."

Mabel Dodge Luhan is a figure in American literature who is almost a tradition. She was one of the few American women who ever managed the "salon" with any success. Her years in Florence, her "evenings" in New York are still discussed with a special thrill of the voice by those who knew her and them.

Gertrude Stein did "The Portrait of Mabel Dodge" to put on paper the powerful urge of her personality. Carl Van Vechten did not name her, but he made her unmistakable in "Peter Whiffle." Other writers chronicling New York in the years of her literary reign have added to the legend about her. She dropped out of the regal art of patronizing the arts and artists, took herself to Taos, N. M., and became there a regnant personality of another kind. She married a full-blooded Indian. She gave shelter to writers and artists, among them D. H. Lawrence. She "willed" D. H. Lawrence to go to Taos, she says, because so passionately had the whole Indian scene there clutched her heart and so great a need did she feel to have it set down with understanding in a book, and so sure was she that Lawrence was the man to do it. She turned all of her energy to getting him to fulfill what seemed to her literary destiny. The novel which she hoped he would do, using her life as a framework, and in collaboration with her in the sense that she provided the material, he never did. The reason he never did it was because his wife was jealous!

That sounds like a very easy explanation, but Mrs. Luhan has not been dishonest enough to leave that statement unqualified. She does a thorough job of explaining all of the qualifications. She analyzes with intricate skill the exact relationship between the husband and the wife and between the husband and another woman—herself. That analysis is a frank and honest one. There was never any ordinary lovemaking between her and Lawrence, she says, but there was a spiritual intimacy which was immediate and binding—and she describes that intimacy of spirit so minutely that the reader feels it to be really a trick which many novelists have tried to pull off but in which, usually, the hand that has reached into the hat for the rabbit always emerges empty.

Half of "Lorenzo in Taos" will probably be quoted at one time or another. My copy is bristling with marks to paragraphs which I want to quote. But no one paragraph can give the solid, powerful feeling of reality and understanding that the reader gets from the pages. Quotations, I find, only detract from that power which I assure you is present in the book.

There are, besides, a very few of Mrs. Luhan's poems (which are not—whatever Lawrence thought of them—good), some ninety-odd letters which Lawrence wrote to her and which have never before been published. Mostly they are concerned with casual things, but some of them are deeply reflective of their author. The last one was written late in January of 1930. In exactly six weeks after that letter in which he wrote: "I feel so strongly as if my illness weren't me—I feel perfectly well and all right, IN MYSELF"—Lawrence's illness had become his self and had destroyed him.

The United States in World Affairs, by Walter Lippmann and William O. Scroggs [Harpers], surveys the events of the last year, with particular stress on the depression.

ABOUT PLACES.

Fair Winds and Foul, by Heinrich Hauser [Liveright], is a record of an actual voyage, the experiences of the sailors, and the capriciousness of the sea.

MYSTERY.

Murder in the Mind, by K. T. Knoblock [Harpers], tells the story of two murders in the sinister atmosphere of a decaying plantation. If the reader can resist the solution by not breaking the seal he may have money back.

ABOUT PEOPLE.

This Democratic Roosevelt, by Leland M. Ross and Allen W. Grobin [Dutton], authentically details the events in the life of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

FICTION.

For Women Only, by J. J. Markey [Macaulay], tells the story of a modern Casanova and his loves.

The Proud House, by Annette Esty [Harpers], with simplicity and vigor presents the life of the Zalinskis who come from Poland to settle in Vermont.

The Establishment of Madame Antonia [Liveright] opens the doors of nine lives that are lived in a famous House of All Nations.

One Way to Heaven, by Countee Cullen [Harpers], depicts sections of Negro life in Harlem, the intellectual and the primitive.

Friday to Monday, by Nancy Ross [Liveright], portrays the lives of several men and women thrown together at a house party.

The Richest Woman in Town, by Henry Bellamann [Century], covers the period from the end of the civil war to the present day and describes the love affair of a famous gambler with the richest woman in town.

Reckless, by May Edginton [Macaulay], is a story of a daring young girl who wants to have her cake and eat it, too.

Children Given Newer Views of Washington

Recent Books Reveal His More Human Side.

BY AGATHA L. SHEA.

IN preparation for the bicentennial celebration next year of George Washington's birth new biographies and stories of the first President's life are beginning to make their appearance. Helen Nicolay whose biographies of Lincoln, Grant, and other American heroes have won for her an enviable place in this field has now added to this list the "Boys' Life of Washington." [Century.]

In an endeavor to invest the person of Washington with something of the kindly humanity and spirit of comradeship which always has haloed the memory of Abraham Lincoln, and which the author believes, was also characteristic of the father of his country, Miss Nicolay has given us a picture of his childhood and youth, of his family relationships and friendships, of his appreciation and love of home which bring out the character of the man as the story of his public life emphasizes the hero and the patriot.

Excerpts from Washington's own writings and diaries regarding personal as well as public matters are scattered throughout the book, and one finishes it feeling that he has been in close communion with a friend of long standing whom he has revered and loved, but with whom he has hitherto never quite felt at home. It is an excellent biography of unusual merit and without doubt will serve its purpose of bringing one of the greatest of Americans closer to the boys and girls of today.

Another biography of interest is Alden A. Knipe's "Everybody's Washington" [Dodd-Mead], a beautifully illustrated edition which will make a particularly suitable gift for the home library of the boy or girl of high school age. While it lacks the personal characterization which marks the previous book, it presents an interesting and authentic account of Washington and his work and will appeal particularly to young history lovers because of its detailed account of campaigns. The illustrations are by Mead Schaeffer.

"In the Days of Young Washington," by Nancy Byrd Turner [Houghton-Mifflin], is a fascinating tale of colonial days in which the children of the Widow Washington play a part. Quaint little Judith Archer and her brother, Richard, have the good luck to find Starface, George Washington's horse, and return him to the Washington farm thus making the acquaintance of the younger children and their mother, and eventually of young George himself. The book serves as a fine introduction of George Washington to younger children, giving them a picture of his boyhood days and his life at Mount Vernon with his brother, Laurence, which offers, in fiction form, good background material for further biography reading.

Mabel D. Holmes, in her "George Washington, the Soul of a Nation" [Winston], gives us in the first chapters of her book a very appealing and appreciative picture of the young George Washington, to whom we are first introduced as a lad of ten awaiting eagerly the return of his hero brother from his South American adventures. As we continue the story we meet the young surveyor, the leader of armies, the founder of a nation, and we find ourselves knowing them all a little better because of that serious, eager little lad whom we met sitting on the horse block in the first page. The book is based on the Washington Irving biography and the author has made numerous footnote references to this and other volumes. While these may detract somewhat from the attractiveness of the book for the casual reader, they add to its reference value, as do also the inclusion of some of the famous maxims, selections from the Farewell Address and Washington's will.

William N. Beach Presents Armchair Journey to Alaska

For the American who's always wanted to see Alaska but never had the opportunity we recommend "In the Shadow of Mount McKinley," by William N. Beach [Derrydale Press] as a worthwhile fireside substitute. To the Chicagoan the foreword by John Burnham [son of D. H. Burnham] will prove especially interesting.

Mr. Beach tells of four trips he made to the neighborhood of America's tallest mountain, and on each journey the armchair explorer can accompany him comfortably and without recourse to an atlas, for the book is well equipped with accurate maps.

In addition to the author's own experiences in Alaska, he has a chapter on early explorers, including that intrepid old British sea dog, Capt. Cook, who visited Alaska in 1778.

First Bennett Journal to Be Issued Soon

Publisher Edits Work of Noted Author.

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.

LONDON, Feb. 19.—[Special.]—The first volume of the Journals of Arnold Bennett will very shortly be published. It will be edited by Newman Flower, Bennett's publisher and friend. Mr. Flower is very well fitted for the task of editing such a book, for he is, besides being a publisher of exceptional insight, a musical amateur who has written the lives of both Handel and Sir Arthur Sullivan, one well acquainted with the circle in which Bennett lived most at ease, and a man of discretion and knowledge. I do not think a better editor could have been found.

COMPTON MACKENZIE.

Compton Mackenzie, who now presides over the meeting of learned professors at Glasgow university, is definitely resident in Scotland. So much is this the case that London hardly ever sees him. He has become a stanch supporter of Scottish nationalism, has plays about Bonnie Prince Charlie broadcast over the radio, and plans to write a great series of Scottish novels after the manner of Sir Walter Scott. I do not know if this broad scheme will be carried out, but there is no other novelist of this day who is so capable as Mr. Mackenzie of announcing [and producing] a long series of books of the kind.

Scotland can do with a new literary revival. Since the days of the late Neil Munro, Scotland has lacked a national romancer. This is not to belittle the beautiful work of Neil Gunn or the sturdy novels of George Blake. I speak only of romancers. If the Scottish novels of Mr. Mackenzie do really get written, they will help greatly to advance the cause of Scottish nationalism, and will certainly increase the attractions of Scotland for the tourist.

Speaking of the radio reminds me that a curious row has been proceeding in London over the criticisms of books which have recently been broadcast. The British Broadcasting corporation employs five chief reviewers, Desmond MacCarthy, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Nicolson, Miss Clemence Dane, and Michael Sadleir. Of these, the first three are active propagandists of what is known as "modern" literature [which means the Lawrence, Joyce, Woolf brigade], while the others innocently disport themselves among new novels.

I gather that of late Nicolson has been lecturing on modern literature, and that he has spoken in terms of warm praise of the school he admires. There have been two types of protest. One from the mugwumps, who wish to hear nothing about books that would disturb any eminent Victorian; and the other from those authors who do not write "modern" books. And so the B. B. C. has said that in future books are not to be mentioned by name; and that only tendencies are to be remarked by critics.

At once, all the publishers in England, and all the friends of the lectures, and all the writers of "modern" books have rushed into the fray.

Meetings and Lectures

This afternoon Irving Bacheller will lecture on George Washington in the book section of Marshall Field's and also autograph copies of his books. On Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock Rupert Hughes will speak on "The True George Washington" in the walnut grill of Marshall Field & Co.

"Newton D. Baker," by Frederick C. Palmer, will be discussed at the meeting of the Bookfellows this evening at 6 o'clock in the Y. M. C. A. building, 19 South La Salle street.

Tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock Leo Rosenberg will lecture on "The Bitter Humor of Ambrose Bierce" at the Jewish People's institute.

Dr. John H. Finley will speak on "Washington and the West" at the Sunday Evening club tomorrow night at Orchestra hall.

"Tapping the Wires of Secret Diplomacy" will be the subject of Maj. Herbert O. Yardley's lecture on Monday evening at 8:15 o'clock at the Emil G. Hirsch center.

Thornton Wilder will continue with his lectures on "Sophocles" on Tuesday at the Art institute at 6:45 p. m. with a discussion on "The Life of Sophocles."

Friends of American Writers will present a lecture on "The Faith of Humanism: Reflections on Some Phases of American Letters," by Dr. Edgar J. Goodspeed, at noon on Wednesday in the Wedgewood room of Marshall Field's.

"National Defense," by Sherwood Eddy, will be reviewed by Mrs. Albert Coe at the meeting of the current book review committee of the Woman's City club at 2 o'clock on Thursday.

Lower California Studied by Boat Journey Along Coast

Griffing Bancroft, son of Hubert Howe Bancroft, famous historian, and said to be the leading authority on Lower California, having spent the past ten years making an intensive study of its ornithology, has written a strangely interesting book, "The Flight of the Least Petrel" [Putnam] about that desolate peninsula. It's the record of a cruise in a motor boat from San Diego, down the west coast of lower California, 'round Cape San Lucas and up the eastern coast to the mouth of the Colorado river.

The author was accompanied by his wife, an assistant, two naturalists, the captain and a cook. They jogged along the coast, visiting both mainland and nearby islands, studying birds and getting specimens; having few thrills but much satisfaction in the accomplishment of their purpose.

It's a slow moving voyage, but oddly enough it's as satisfying to the reader as it seemed to be to the real passengers on the Least Petrel. It certainly covers territory which the regulation traveler carefully and thoroughly leaves alone.

Elizabeth Shaw Writes of Travel to Unusual Places

"Painted Maps," by Elizabeth Shaw [Dial Press], is as unusual as its title. It's a collection of delightfully written accounts of jolly jaunts to odd and interesting corners of the world. We know of no travel volume in recent years told with more charming style or with more vivid picturing of people and incidents than in this attractive book.

"If you are looking for time-table information, for the customary haunts of the average traveler, you will be disappointed," cautions the author in her introduction. "But let me tell you something. I've found it gloriously worth while—this going about alone over the broad, kind face of the earth. I think I've discovered the color in some out of the way corners, and perhaps have heard the music that throbs beneath some painted maps."

will talk on George Washington

Today is the publication date of Mr. Bacheller's contribution to the Bicentennial of Washington's birth. The Master of Chaos is a fascinating narrative woven around the dominant character and inspired leadership of George Washington. What Mr. Bacheller did for Abraham Lincoln in A Man for the Ages, he does for Washington in this stirring tale.

At the conclusion of his talk, Mr. Bacheller will be pleased to autograph copies of his book.

"The Big Little Book"
It has helped thousands of men and women take a new grip on life!
Let it help you
The man who wrote this book has been down to the bottom—and pulled himself up again. He was a failure—out of a job, in debt—before he discovered what was the matter with him, and set out to change it. Since then he has helped to set thousands on the road to success and happiness. In this book he tells how he has made others able to help themselves—and how you can help yourself. No bunk, no platitudes, no patent formulas—but a plan of life that works, as hundreds of letters from readers of the book prove. A small book—a small price—a value you can never measure. Spencer Tracy Becomes Lover in New Movie

Joan Bennett Charming as Working Girl.

Produced by Fox.
Directed by John Blystone.
Presented at the Oriental theater.

THE CAST.

Jane Miller.....Joan Bennett
William Kelley.....Spencer Tracy
Mary Taylor.....Una Merkel
Roger Norton.....James Kirkwood
Mrs. Miller.....Dorothy Peterson
Mr. Miller.....Douglas Cosgrove
Humphrey.....Donald Dillaway
Mother Norton.....Lucille La Verne
Charlie.....Tetsu Komai

By Mae Tinee.

Good morning!

Again we have brought home to us the fact that practically anything can happen. For instance, here is Spencer Tracy, champion hard-boiled egg of stage and screen impersonating a great lover.

Not that he strums guitars or poses under any fair one's window. He doesn't. But, O, BOY, how he loves Joan Bennett—in the film, in the film!—and O, BOY, BOY, how he makes that devotion count in time of need!

This picture shows, at the start, all signs of telling just another story of the working girl who sets out to wed a millionaire, finds that a heart of dross beats under his golden vest [I guess that's good!] and runs to safe shelter in the arms of the poor but honest youth who can't give her anything but love—Baby.

For a time "She Wanted a Millionaire" runs true to the above form. Heroine, walking home from a date with a rich young man is given a lift by a young engineer with noble ambitions, arms of steel and a dirty face. They become well acquainted and you think they're going to make a match of it when—but that would be telling things.

Well, I'm GOING to tell just a wee bit more. Jane Miller WANTED a millionaire and she GETS a millionaire. After that . . . you have simply no idea! Nor shall this department hand you one.

This is the photoplay during the making of which Joan Bennett fell off a horse and broke her hipbone. The horse shied at the hooded cameras and, as a result, the little actress was laid up for several months before she was able to finish the film. The producers tell proudly of how, upon her recovery, she pluckily mounted the steed that had thrown her and again rode him past the fearsome things which had caused him to rear.

The story's plunge, at the end, into the most hectic of melodrama, is to be deplored, but aside from that spasm the piece holds up as worthwhile entertainment.

Miss Bennett, who, to me, is one of the most feminine and appealing of the women stars, with her pure, untouched little face and quiet, unobtrusive manner, gives a pleasing account of herself as wistful Jane Miller. Spencer Tracy is likable and adept as her noble, self-sacrificing suitor. James Kirkwood portrays convincingly an extremely horrible person, and Una Merkel provides the laughs as the newspaper woman assigned to chaperon Jane to Atlantic City where she enters a bathing beauty contest and is chosen as—never mind!

"TRAPPED IN A SUBMARINE."
Directed by Walter Summers
Presented at the Orpheum theater.

THE CAST.

Commander.....J. F. L. Hunt
Chief Petty Officer.....Sidney Seaward
Members of the crew:
John Batton.....Charles Peachy
James Eastone.....Valentine White
Edward Gee.....Syd Crossley
Wang Wong.....Chang Fat

"The British admiralty reports that one of its best submarines has been sunk by a merchant vessel. Most of the crew have been saved but there are still men confined in the torpedo chamber. We cannot be sure of their fate but this we know, twenty fathoms deep in the ocean a tale of heroism is being enacted . . . ."

The voice of a radio announcer carries this news to the world in general, and, in particular, to the white-faced mother of a tiny baby, a lonely wife with haggard face of fear, a white-haired couple. These loved ones of men who may never return wait and pray, pray, and wait for each dreaded, hoped for announcement.

While they pass through their Gethsemane you learn what is going on in the L-56 where brave men, fighting to live but steeled to die, strive—at last successfully—to outwit the greedy sea.

This little British production—so timely, following as it does on the heels of the sinking of the M-2, Jan. 27—only lasts forty minutes. It is inspiring and informative. One thing that you seldom think of is brought to your mind. This, that even in peace time submarines face peril. For, while they cleave the subseas they are in danger from cruisers, merchant ships, great liners whose mighty bows plough the waters. A collision with any one of these is quite probable to prove fatal to brave underseas sailors.

The men trapped in the L-56, hold, you are informed, the most dangerous posts on a submarine. They are the ones who must shut iron doors between themselves and the rest of the crew when peril overtakes their craft. [Just why I wasn't bright enough to understand.] Sincere and touching work by these actors!

See you tomorrow!

Gertrude Atherton in City; Completes Her Memoirs

Slim and chic for all her 74 years, Gertrude Atherton, who wrote "Black Oxen" a few years back, demonstrated both physical and mental resiliency yesterday as she arrived in Chicago from the west coast. Chatting vivaciously, she smiled at all and sundry through a tiny nose veil on her becoming hat, with which she wore a gray squirrel wrap. She has just concluded writing her memoirs, she confided, adding that the total wordage was 200,000, and the chapters featured by many authentic adventures.

BY MARY MEADE.

Shepherd's pie is a dish that is fast returning to fashion and favor. It is especially appropriate at this time when we all stress the economy of utilizing left over foods. This pie may be made from any cooked meats that happen to be lounging in your icebox. The old fashioned methods of preparing the pie were either to have all the meat together in the bottom of a dish, with the whipped potatoes forming the top crust, or the method given in today's recipe.

Shepherd's Pie.

Cut up in small pieces any left over or cooked meat such as veal, beef, mutton, or lamb. Season the pieces with salt, pepper, and a slice of minced onion. Mix the ingredients well. Grease a baking dish and put in a one inch layer of meat. Then put in a layer of mashed potatoes. Pour over this three-fourths of a cup of stewed tomatoes or tomato sauce, and then add another layer of meat. Cover the top with buttered bread crumbs and moisten them slightly with milk. Bake the dish about twenty-five minutes in a moderately hot oven.

Chiffonade dressing is easily prepared. The proportions may be varied slightly if it is too hot or not salty enough for you. I have experimented with different measures of the ingredients, and this is the happiest average of my experiments. I hope you like it. May I suggest that it's an appetizing way of partifying our everyday lettuce?

Chiffonade Dressing.

8 tablespoons of French dressing.
1 tablespoon of minced onion.
1 tablespoon of minced green pepper.
1 tablespoon of minced red pepper.
1 tablespoon of minced parsley.
1 finely chopped hard cooked egg.
¼ teaspoon of salt.

Put all the ingredients together in a jar and shake well just before using. Chill thoroughly.

Cottage Pudding Sauce.

1 tablespoon of butter.
1 cup of sugar.
¾ teaspoon of vanilla.
⅛ teaspoon of salt.
2 tablespoons of corn sirup.

Melt the chocolate in a saucepan over hot water. Add the butter and blend thoroughly. Add the boiling water slowly, stirring constantly, and then add the sugar, salt, and corn sirup. Boil for five minutes. Cool, and add vanilla.

Change of Diet Is Big Help in Skin Treatment

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Says the oily skin sufferer to the dry skin victim: "But your troubles are all in the future. Mine are here, and right now!" Which is what makes the oily skin the harder cross to bear. The dry skin can be helped with local greasings, which, at least, substitute for the natural lubrication and help preserve the skin's youth.

While the oily skinned one's day of worrying about wrinkles is postponed, her present troubles discount the future advantage. That greasy shine is hard to bear up under stoically, because it is ugly. The pores coarsen because the excess oil discharge distends them. Powder, dust, grime get mixed up with the excess oil discharge and then real troubles begin, with blackhead formation.

Now, if there is one type of skin that can stand soap and water punishment, it is this type. Not only stand it—but flourish on it, clarify on it, refine on it and beautify on it. You can't put too much heart into thorough, active cleansing of this type of skin. Nor too much enthusiasm. And here's another point about oily skin:

We've come to associate it with brunettes rather than blonds, with some degree of truth. But blonds suffer, too. Perhaps the mixture of race strains influences the blond cases. But because oily skin is more common as a Latin characteristic we tend to attribute it to brunette heritage or coloring.

The real influence often is the diet and living conditions of the individual, rather than the color of the skin. This diet feature is a hard one to drive home to oily skin sufferers, I find. They'd rather experiment with local aids than with a reformed diet. A diet high in fats, starches, and sugars puts additional burden on this type of skin through the faulty workings of the digestive system.

A complete change of diet is recommended, eliminating as much fat, starch and sugar as can be gotten along without comfortably. Going on liquid diets every now and then for a few days is a good practice. The idea is to reduce the secretions of the sebaceous glands. And this calls for internal help.

Place of Church to Be Discussed by Unitarian Body

Whether the church should take a share in dealing with problems of public health, crime, child welfare, and poverty or be merely a general influence for good in a community will be discussed today at the first midwestern convention of the Unitarian Laymen's league. The conference will be in the First Unitarian church, Woodlawn avenue and 57th street, and will continue through tomorrow evening.

Herbert C. Parsons of Boston, president of the league, and executive secretary of the Massachusetts child labor committee, will preside and give the final address. At the luncheon today Michael M. Davis, director for medical services of the Rosenwald fund, will speak on "Community Health." Group conferences will be held in the afternoon. Speakers this evening will include the Rev. Dr. Horace Westwood of Boston, and Prof. John Gillin of the University of Wisconsin.

At the Sunday afternoon session Prof. Harrison A. Dobbs and Prof. Garfield V. Cox of the University of Chicago will be on program and that evening Prof. Ernest W. Burgess, also of the university, will speak.

Lovely Spring Clothes Will Fit the Budget

And New Things May Be Worn Later On.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

HAVE you a depressing or a depression clothes allowance . . . are you a budgeteer by necessity or choice . . . do you administer strenuous stretching exercises to your coppers and dollars when you shop for new apparel. If so take heart . . . the ladies of budgets are getting a lot of good breaks this season. New spring clothes are far lovelier than they have ever been . . . but the best news remains . . . they are excitingly inexpensive, too.

You, who seek new frocks to wear right away can find plenty . . . no disillusion awaits you, for the things you select now will be equally smart worn much later without a coat. The new models will change you completely, your manners, your attitude, your disposition and even your mind . . . for instance, you may have been very firmly prejudiced against navy blue, but no mere feminine mind or heart can withstand the alluring navy blue that is so lovely combined with bright red this spring. And for those who would be one hundred per cent American, red, white, and blue is fashion's favorite tri-color combination.

Suit or Trim Coat for Spring.

Most of the smartest dressed women will wear a suit this spring . . . and if not a suit, a slim, trim coat. Many of the suits are really smart sheer woolen frocks with matching jackets that give a suit effect . . . and if a jacket is not a jacket, it's usually a cape. When you buy a real suit this spring notice the skirt . . . the newest ones are trying their best to be a dress, for no fashion respecting skirt stops abruptly at the waistline any more, it reaches up to the ribs of the wearer. Of course the accessories you wear with your suit expresses your personality . . . try a dashing red patent leather bag, navy blue shoes, and a navy blue straw hat trimmed with a bit of white and red with a navy blue suit.

If you still cling to a particularly good looking winter coat, the costume to wear with it now is a redingote. This, too, you can wear later on when the weather grows warmer . . . a redingote, consisting of a long slim coat dress, that buttons at the waist and is open and collarless above, and worn over either a printed or plain colored silk frock. A redingote is a costume, almost made to order for our late spring days. With one spring redingote you can achieve several interesting effects. With a dark brown rough woolen coat you can wear a flower spotted silk crêpe dress in gold and green . . . as another change you can choose a dress in a dusky powder blue . . . and as a third alternative, select an under frock of brown and ivory coin dotted silk. Each ensemble is distinctively different, but the same brown coat is used for all three.

Hat Shops Will Cause Spring Fever.

You'll probably run a temperature and have a real honest to goodness case of spring fever, after a day in the hat shops . . . but cautious collectors of hats will find out that each kind of clothes . . . berets and small kind of clothes . . . barets and small models without much trimming were made for tailored suits and dresses . . . you can wear flowers and ribbons on your hats for afternoon . . . the eternal fitness of things will guide you right. One thing you simply can not wear with these trim new hats is unruly, long hair or the last year's sausage roll effects . . . the smartest heads will be smooth and trim.

It is not especially wise to even try to assemble your complete spring wardrobe in a week, much less in a day or so . . . the thing to do is to go about for a few days, everywhere, until you have seen everything . . . watch the many fashion shows, go to smart restaurants and theaters and see what well dressed women are wearing. . . and then plan your own.

MISS MARJORIE LOUISE FRANK.
[Chidnoff Photo.]

Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Frank of 2634 Lake View avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Marjorie Louise, to Henry Hanna Brigham, son of Mrs. Henry H. Brigham of Glencoe. Miss Frank attended the Chicago Latin School for Girls and will be graduated from Smith college this June. She made her debut at the Fortnightly two years ago. Mr. Brigham attended Phillips Exeter academy and will finish at the University of Illinois this year. The wedding will take place in the early fall.

First Few Years of Married Life Called Period of Adjustments

BY DORIS BLAKE.

They have been married exactly six months and she writes to tell that "he isn't the man she thought she married; that at times, he seems like a total stranger to her."

Of course, he isn't the man she married. And at times he will seem like a stranger. What the girl never guesses is that similar thoughts are racing through the man's mind. She isn't the girl he married. At times, she seems like a strange woman in the house.

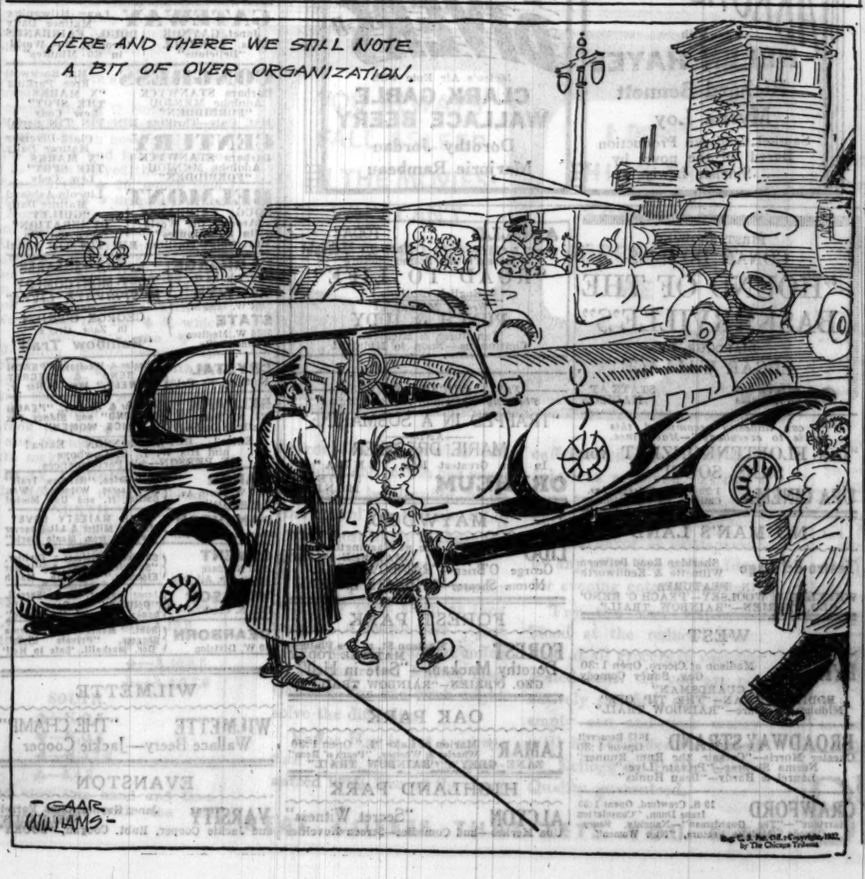
But that's nothing to see the divorce lawyer about. It's what happens very, very often during the first years of married life. It doesn't mean she has struck a tragic note in her career, nor he in his. It means only that two people now are having a chance to become really and truly acquainted. They just thought they knew and understood each other up to this time. But they did not see each other as marriage automatically changes the relationship, or changes the status of each.

Their relation to each other is different. Their point of view toward themselves is different. They've started a new game as one of our better marriage authorities says. A new game with a new deal, a new set of hands and they are even playing in a new house.

They are down to prosaic facts of living now. That idealized creature of the imagination is turning into a human being, day by day. The uncertainty and joy of the chase is gone. There is possession now where before the game of pursuit was present. People are different under this new living arrangement. If more newly weds recognized this fact there would be far less difficulty in the first year. Because people appear different it does not follow that they must be worse. They are themselves, that's all. In marriage they cannot go on playing the rôle created often what is called the love image.

The first year of marriage involves process of unraveling oneself from the idealized pictures created out of pure imagination and getting down to realities. Instead of regretting that "he or she isn't the man [or girl] married accept him or her as a human being with faults and virtues, and go ahead building from there."

SOMETHING OUGHT TO BE DONE ABOUT THIS



Suburbs Busy Making Plans for Flower Exhibit at Pier

Clubs Plan Large Garden Designs and Special Displays for Spring Exposition.

BY JUDITH CASS.

THE main topic of conversation among garden club members in the suburbs these days is the spring flower show to be held on the Navy pier April 2 to 9, and, although the opening is six weeks away, work on exhibits already is far advanced, I'm told. Mrs. John Coleman Jr. is chairman of exhibits for the Lake Forest Garden club, which has entered two gardens. Mrs. Ralph H. Millman is directing the work on a large garden, 24 feet square, while Mrs. William E. Casselberry Jr. and Mrs. Stephen Y. Hord are in charge of an evergreen garden 10 by 20 feet.

The Evanston Garden club, which is one of the largest in the state, will make a garden 24 feet square and a border planting 10 by 20 feet. Mrs. William H. Colvin is in charge of preparations, and Mrs. John E. Blunt Jr. and Mrs. Horace Capron of Winnetka are planning the border planting. Mrs. George B. Dryden and Mrs. Lansing B. Warner of Hubbard Woods are working on the large garden design.

The Winnetka Garden club is planning to have several exhibits and Mrs. Richard Walsh, Mrs. Robert H. Gardner, Mrs. Arch Shaw, and Mrs. Willoughby Walling are in charge of them. The St. Charles Garden club has asked for a space 60 feet square in which to develop a Mexican cactus garden, but the show management is in doubt whether so much space can be found, but the cactus garden will be made even if on a reduced scale. Mrs. Ross Judd and Mrs. Leslie Coleman are in charge for the St. Charles club. The Wheaton Garden club is developing a modern terrace garden which those who have seen the sketches declare will be most attractive. A white house of modern design has black awnings, and the terrace is planted in a formal pattern with pink flowers, using tulips, hydrangeas, and flowering almonds. Mrs. W. Russell Maxwell is in charge, assisted by Mrs. Douglas Tweedie and Mrs. Max Finley.

Harriet Lowden Madlener and Charlotte R. Smith will give a two piano recital for the benefit of Grant hospital on Tuesday, March 1, at the Nurses' home at 526 Webster avenue. The woman's auxiliary of the hospital is sponsoring the concert. Mrs. Catharine Bartholomay Osborne is chairman of the ticket committee.

Foreign Relations Council Luncheon.

Adlai E. Stevenson will preside at the luncheon of the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations to be held this noon at the Palmer house, when Dean Kalaw of the University of the Philippines will discuss the point of view of his people on the question of Philippine independence, which now is causing considerable agitation in congress. Mr. Stevenson, secretary, is presiding in place of Graham Aldis, the president, who is vacationing with Mrs. Aldis as the guest of the John T. McCutcheons on Treasure island in the Bahamas. At the speaker's table will be Mrs. Stevenson, Mr. and Mrs. Mason Phelps, and Mr. and Mrs. Clay Judson. Among those who have made reservations for the luncheon are Mrs. Tracy Drake, Mrs. Ambrose Cramer, Mrs. Stephen Y. Hord, Mrs. Wilhelm L. Baum, Mrs. Edward R. Litsinger, and Russell Tyson.

Among the Chicagoans in Windsor, Vt., this week-end for the marriage tomorrow of Miss Barbara Bullard of Boston and Schuyler Van Ingen Colt of Chicago are the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. William E. Colt Jr.; the bride's uncle, the Rev. Dr. Sydney B. Snow, who will read the service, and Talcott Griswold. A former Chicagoan, the Rev. Dr. Norman O. Hutton, now of Wellesley, Mass., will assist Dr. Snow, and Dr. Hutton's son, Norman Jr., will serve Mr. Colt as best man. The marriage is taking place at the country residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Bullard. Mr. Colt and his bride will be at home after March 1 at 15 East Division street.

All the women and children in Lake Forest who have been riding this winter in the Onwentsia indoor riding ring will be there this afternoon to take part in the George Washington gala gymkhana, which will start at 3 o'clock. There will be four classes for children and two for ladies. The announcements of the affair asked for "a good Lake Forest representation as there is to be keen competition from the children of the Fort Sheridan army post."

Lake Forest Wins Contract Tourney.

Lake Forest certainly must be the home of excellent contract bridge players, for the four winners of the duplicate contract bridge game held at the Ambassador East last Thursday afternoon were all young Lake Forest women, Mrs. Edison Dick and Mrs. Robert S. Pirie, who won the high score cup for north and south, and Mrs. J. Glenn Samples and Mrs. Elliott R. Detchon, who were the east and west victors. This was the first of a series of such games and it was attended by a large and fashionable group of women, including Mrs. Robert G. McGann, Mrs. Charles Edward Brown, Mrs. Robert J. Thorne and her daughter, Mrs. Corson Ellis, Mrs. Joseph H. King, Mrs. Raymond C. Dudley, Mrs. George Henry High, Mrs. Thomas Dennehy Jr., and Mrs. John P. Wilson. Miss Betty Jane Norcott and Mrs. Charles Cook [Leslie Pope] and Paul Parcells and B. K. Edwards were the winners of the duplicate tournament held last Tuesday night at the new Contract Whist club at the Drake.

The John Coleman household in Lake Forest is a sad one just now for Jim, the Irish setter, which has been a pet of the whole family for some years, has not returned since he wandered away last Sunday, and up to late yesterday evening there had been no answer to the advertisement the Colemans inserted in this week's Lake Forest is a sads one just now, ward for the return of Jim.

Chicago had an interesting visitor yesterday, albeit his visit was very brief—Albert J. Beveridge Jr., who spent the day with his friends, the junior Frederic Clay Bartletts of 1301 Astor street. Young Mr. Beveridge is on his way to Japan to write special articles for the Boston Herald.

Miss Barbara Poole left Lake Forest yesterday to join her mother, Mrs. Ralph H. Poole, in New York, to sail for a month's vacation in Nassau. Mr. and Mrs. Poole went east several days ago, but Mr. Poole is returning to Chicago instead of going to the Bahamas with his wife and daughter.

Mrs. Charles H. Morse, who returned recently from Munich, is leaving next week for Washington, D. C., to visit her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. William S. Covington, and their children. Mr. Covington is going to Seattle in March to live, but Mrs. Covington and the children will come to Lake Forest with Mrs. Morse for a visit before joining him in the west.

Lieut. and Mrs. Stewart Warren Towle Jr. [Janice McNear] are being congratulated upon the birth of a son at the Community hospital in Riverside, Cal., on Feb. 15. Mrs. Towle's mother, Mrs. Charles W. McNear of 1320 North State street, is visiting the Towles and the new and only grandson.

James Ballard Moores Plan Vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. James Ballard Moore of 32 Scott street are leaving next Friday for a visit in Washington, D. C. Mrs. Moore had hoped to take 4 months old Ballard Gray Moore along to visit his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Campbell Graef of Georgetown, but the pediatrician who has the young man in charge thinks he is too young to take the trip as yet, so he will remain at home while his parents have a brief vacation.

Mrs. Frederic W. Upham is expected home from an eastern visit on the last day of this month.

Mrs. Joseph L. Valentine has returned from the east, where she left her debutante daughter, Jane, in Smith college. Miss Valentine interrupted her college course long enough to make her debut last fall and to take part in all the deb festivities until the second semester at Smith started.

Mrs. Edward Hines and her daughter, Mrs. Howell Howard, who have been in New York for ten days, will return early next week.

Mrs. William L. Hodgkins and Mrs. Frank P. Hixon sailed from New York last week for a cruise of the West Indies.

Among the Washington birthday balls tonight are those of the South Shore Country club, the Opera club, and the Interfraternity club. A cotillion, with appropriate colorful favors, will be the feature of the South Shore party, the Opera club will have its usual impromptu theatrical entertainment, and the Interfraternity club, which will have its ball in the Empire room of the Palmer house, will dine on a "dinner of venison brought by the friendly Palmerattomies, fowl with chestnut dressing, spiced with rarities from the orient." H. Stanley Wanzer is chairman of the committee in charge of this affair.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Washington, D. C., Feb. 19.—[Special.]—Mrs. Hoover received the national association of deans of women and the American association of principals of private schools for girls today, greeting them at the tea hour.

Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, sister of the Vice President, was the guest of honor at luncheon today of Mrs. Robert J. Burdette of California, who entertained at the Mayflower.

Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana has gone to Pinehurst, where he is spending a fortnight at the Carolina hotel.

Maj. Gen. Peyton C. March, chief of staff, U. S. A., during the world war, was the guest of honor at the exhibition drill at Fort Myer this afternoon. Others at the drill were Senator J. Hamilton Lewis of Illinois, Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Senator Joseph T. Robinson, Senator Reed Smoot, Senator and Mrs. Cordell Hull, Senator Tasker L. Oddie, and Senator and Mrs. Henry F. Ashurst.

Gives Solution of Year to Year Yard Problem

Grading Grounds Is First Step of Plan.

BY PAUL POTTER.

One problem that faces many home owners is the finding of a year by year plan for the beautification of grounds—a plan that need not be completed at once. A simple two year system of eight steps can be used to advantage by most home owners.

In "starting from scratch" for landscaping new homes or those which have been built for some time but which have never been framed into a suitable picture by setting out trees, shrubs, perennials and annuals, the grounds must first be properly graded and the walks laid out.

Then a planting plan should be devised, preferably on paper. This not only prevents mistakes but increases interest in the program and often provides an incentive otherwise lacking to get the work completed.

For the two year plan, two other steps can safely be taken the first year. The proper places for shrubs and flower beds and borders can be marked out on the home grounds, and after this the new lawn can be seeded. Trees and foundation plantings can be put in place the first year.

This marks a good division point between the first and second year's work and cost for plants. The second year of the plan consists principally of four more projects. The first is the setting out of masses of shrubbery designed to hide objectionable views, and the planting of evergreens and other plants planned to accent certain characteristics of the home and the yard.

Shrubbery backgrounds for borders should be planned and in front of these the perennials set in for what is called the permanent garden picture. Later such architectural features as trellises, arbors, bird baths, fountains, and bird houses can be arranged to fit the yard.

Father Decides What Child Thinks of Him

By GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

So many parents find greatest happiness when their children are cuddly babies, or when they're still little enough to be dependent, beautiful and docile. But when the children grow older and more independent and lose their babishness, trouble often sprouts.

I've seen this happen again and again and again. Some fathers, for instance, will adore their babies, but be impatient and dictatorial with the children when they grow older. Here are a few comments that came in to me along this line.

"To any small boy of 4 Dad is a hero—a person who knows how to overcome all difficulties, one around whom the known world revolves, a person greatly to be admired. Whatever sort of man the father is at home, whatever happens to him outside, in politics and economics, the fact remains that Dad's influence on his son's life for good or ill is greater than that of any other man. Why? Because during those early years of childhood, when the foundations of the boy's character and health and future life are built, Dad is his son's hero.

"But here's a question: If this small boy saw more of his Dad, would that tall person still be a hero? Sooner or later, the son will discover things—whether or not his father gets his way with tolerance and fairness—whether or not he counts on sincerity, justice, and gay, good humor to turn the wheels of his relationships with people.

"As the boy grows older, then, will his father's living example translate the early hero-worship into a happy bond of comradeship? Will Dad become as successful as a companion, guide, and counselor, as he has been as provider?

"There are many men throughout the country in whose relations to their children the transition from hero worship to companionship took place gradually and happily. There are men like this one who was described at a bankers' convention. The only man from his small community who had been to college, he had given up the practice of law and returned to the farm.

"There he had married and had brought up four sons. One of these is today the president of the leading bank in that state, one the president of the leading insurance company and one a United States delegate to a recent conference in London. This father, rated a failure by all his neighbors, was counted by the bankers' convention a greater success than they. With such a man as this, thousands of fathers would like to discuss the job of being a father."

Appeal for New Theater Blood at College Conference

Iowa City, Ia., Feb. 19.—(AP)—Critics, playwrights, professors and little theater directors, speaking at a national drama conference here today, agreed that new blood must be injected into the American theater and that new plays must be given a trial somewhere away from Broadway.

Hatcher Hughes, playwright and director of the Columbia University Little theater, declared that after experiments in his play house, Broadway often becomes more interested in new scripts.

There is no reason, he declared, why all new plays must have Broadway's stamp of approval before they will be well received in the country.

Alice Gerstenberg, a playwright, criticized the commercial theater because it makes no attempt to train talent—"it simply takes it or lets it down," she said.

Parties a Part of School Work at Lake Forest

Hayrack Ride Features One of Them.

BY RUTH DE YOUNG.

When a great hayrack lumbered through the winding lanes of Lake Forest one pleasant afternoon last week, residents of the fashionable little town sat up and took notice. It was a sight indeed—not the hay, but the dozen or more young citizens who had laid aside family prestige for the "days of real sport."

Little Colby Ingram, son of the Dwight Ingrams, reached his maturity [so far as school is concerned] on Feb. 13, and the hayrack ride was his sixth birthday party to all his classmates. For anniversaries and their necessary celebrations are almost as much a part of the curriculum at the Lake Forest Day school as reading, and 'writing, and 'rithmetic. The youngsters have only one regret—that a birthday doesn't fall on every one of the 365 days in the year.

Young Colby had hoped for snow and a bobsled party, but since Jack Frost can upset "the best laid plans of mice and men," dirt roads and a hayrack were substituted. Not a guest was sorry for a minute, however, since the change provided a "down on the farm" experience most of the children had never before enjoyed.

College students might have taken lessons from the hayrack enthusiasts when they rang out with songs and yells. At one point in the ride, as the chorus started on the "one, two, three, four" of "Down by the Stream," 6 year old Harry Clow III. broke into

"One, two, three, four,
Who are we for?
Lake Forest Day school,
Rah! Rah! Rah!"

It may be that Harry's leadership and the readiness with which the other children follow is inspired by the parental influence of Harvard and Yale. Every one of the mothers and fathers of the day school pupils, especially of those children enrolled in the primary grades, is interested in the birthday parties as a medium between school and home and as a means of developing "social consciousness" at an early age.

Most of the celebrations are home parties with the little men and women practicing the curtsies and bows they have learned from their governesses and teachers. But never do these rules of etiquette interfere with a good time, for there's always plenty of fun in "pinning the cat's tail," "puss in the corner," or some new game a hostess has devised. Hours are carefully watched with arrival at 4 and departure at six, immediately after supper, so that bed hours will be strictly kept.

Little Helen Milman, daughter of the Ralph Milmans, entertained her classmates recently, and the children haven't yet forgotten the elaborate party Harry Clow gave last fall at his grandfather's country estate. Other first graders who will have a birthday celebration during the year include Alice Bentley, daughter of the Richard Bentleys; the Keith Carpenters' little daughter Alice; Curtis Smith, who has already followed in the footsteps of her father, Maj. C. C. Smith, with a couple of blue ribbons at an Onwentsia gymkhana; Nanette Sadler, John Walbridge, Robert Wood, and Jack Wheeler; son of the John Wheelers.

Robbie Odell, son of Mr. and Mrs. William R. Odell Jr., a second grader at the Lake Forest Day school, and little Benjamin Carpenter, who is in the kindergarten, received special invitations to Colby's party last week. Birthday celebrations are quite as much an institution in the upper grades at the day school as in the primary classes, but the hosts and hostesses become a little more "choosey" on occasion, not limiting their guests necessarily to classmates.

It is interesting to know that there are seven grades in the school, which was organized only six or seven years ago, and that the board of trustees, composed of parents, intends to add one more class during each of the next three years. With ten grades, which will carry instruction through the junior high school, the curriculum will be complete.

But from all reports the children will regret leaving even after ten years, for the school with its parties and games and studies is their one engrossing interest.

Reports $3,629,500 Spent by Carnegie Fund in Year

New York, Feb. 19.—[Special.]—The philanthropic grants made by the Carnegie corporation from the income of the $115,000,000 endowment fund left by Andrew Carnegie, totaled $3,629,500 during the year ending Sept. 31, 1931, according to the annual report by Frederick P. Keppel, president, made public today. The grants were for the benefit of libraries, adult education, the fine arts, educational and scientific studies, research and publication. Most of $880,000 in grants to libraries went for the enrichment of college libraries in the United States.

Afternoon Dress May Be Made from Rough or Flat Silk Crepe

WOMAN'S AND MISSES' DRESS.

The new afternoon dresses are lovely made of light shades of both rough and flat silk crêpe. A pretty jabot frill is tucked under the flat applied neckline band of this dress, and small frills that suggest sleeves are chic details. The skirt, in panel styling, back and front, gives a slender effect.

The pattern, 2707, comes in sizes 14, 16, 18, and 20 years, and 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measure. Size 16 requires 3 yards of 39 inch material with ½ yard of 35 inch contrasting and ½ yard of plaiting.

WEDDINGS

Prof. and Mrs. S. F. MacLennan of Oberlin college, Oberlin, O., announce the marriage of their daughter, Janet, to Dr. John Austin Kerr, son of Mrs. Norman Kerr of 529 Wellington avenue and the late Dr. Norman Kerr, the marriage to take place today at the Fairchild chapel of Oberlin college. Dr. and Mrs. Kerr will reside in Santa Marta, Colombia. For the last seven years Dr. Kerr has been doing health research work under the Rockefeller foundation, specializing in yellow fever. His foreign assignments have taken him to Paraguay, Brazil, and Nigeria, West Africa, where he was until last December. His present assignment will take him to Santa Marta, where he will be engaged in special research into a disease peculiar to that locality. Miss Mac Lennan has been an instructor for the last four years at the Milwaukee-Downer college.

Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Briley of 3122 Wilson avenue announce the marriage on Wednesday of their daughter, Dorothy, to Paul H. Shelton.

Official Contract

By Charles True Adams

(International bridge authority; author of "Official Contract at Sight.")

The mere fact that we usually count a man's worth in terms of money does not mean that he may not be exceedingly rich in land, cattle, or other property. Similarly in contract bridge, the fact that we usually speak of the power of the hand in high card tricks does not mean that great bridge wealth may not be held in other ways. Position of cards on the board and distribution in general are quite as important. For instance, in yesterday's play-a-problem, North and South succeeded in making a little slam and yet they held between them only five high-card tricks. And ordinarily we think that a partnership should hold six and a half to seven to be able to bid and make six odd. This was the hand:

NORTH [Dealer].
♥—A,Q,J,9,8,7
♦—A,Q,10,6,5,4
♣—6

WEST	EAST
♠—A,K,10,9,8,4	♠—Q,J,5
♥—4	♥—6,5,3,2
♦—K,J,8,7	♦—9
♣—K, Q	♣—J,10,4,3,2

SOUTH
♠—7,6,3,2
♥—K,10
♣—A,9,8,7,5

North dealt and bid two hearts. East passed. South took out with three clubs and West mentioned three spades. North now showed his other suit with a bid of four diamonds. East again passed. South went to four hearts. West passed and North jumped to six hearts.

The bidding had shown North a great deal. In the first place he placed South with at least 1½ high card tricks. That meant in all probability either the ♣ A or ♣ K, Q. West's spade bid probably showed that South had no top card strength in that suit and since South preferred the hearts to the diamonds North was fairly safe in figuring that South's other high card was in hearts.

North also figured that South was short in diamonds and, therefore, calculated that he would lose either no clubs, or one at the most, no hearts, no spades and probably not more than one diamond. If South held the ♣ A in place of the ♣ K, Q, North's little slam looked sure and even with the ♣ K, Q in South's hand it looked quite possible.

East opened the ♠ Q, South played the 2, West the 4, and North trumped with the ♥ 7. North now led the ♣ 6 to dummy's ♣ A and led back dummy's ♦ 2. West played the ♦ 7 and North finessed the ♦ 10, which held. However, East's ♦ 9 dropped, which caused North to figure East with a singleton diamond. North, however, was still far away. He now led the ♦ 4, East played the ♣ 3, South the ♦ 3, and West took the trick with the ♦ 8. West now returned the ♣ K, which North trumped with the ♥ 8. North now led the ♦ 5, which dummy trumped with the ♥ K. West's J falling. South returned the ♥ 10, which North overtook with the A. North now led out the ♥ Q, J, 9, clearing the trump suit, and then led the ♦ A, which dropped West's K and took in the ♦ Q, 6 for the twelfth and thirteenth tricks, North and South making their little slam.

PLAY A PROBLEM.

Here is Monday's play-a-problem:

NORTH.
♠—J,7,3
♥—9,7,4,3
♦—Q,9,4
♣—Q,10,2

WEST	EAST [Dealer]
♠—9,8,6,4	♠—A,10,2
♥—A,J,10,8,2	♥—6
♦—3,2	♦—A,10,8,5
♣—K,9	♣—A,J,8,7,6

SOUTH.
♠—K,Q,5
♥—K,Q,5
♦—K,J,7,6
♣—5,4,3

Bid and play this hand and then compare the result with the one printed Monday.

Fox to Release M'Laglen; Bans Rough Comedy

Soldier-Player Plans Tour with Film Pal.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 19.—Victor McLaglen's contract with Fox is up in June, and apparently is not to be renewed. The new Fox management is not favorable about the somewhat Rabelasian stories which took Vic and Edmund Lowe on an amorous tour of the world, and Lowe's contract was allowed to lapse several months ago. McLaglen recently finished "The Devil's Lottery," and at present has not been cast for anything to come prior to termination of his contract. He and Lowe, although not the most chummy of personal friends, are both good enough business men to be considering the advantage of making a personal stage tour of the country together in some of their lady killing rough talking characterizations and may leave Hollywood on such a venture early in the summer.

Raquel Torres has announced her engagement to Charles Feldman. He is a film writer.

George Arliss has paid Hollywood's finest professional compliment to Evelyn Knapp, who now is having good luck to the same extent she suffered ill fortune when she fell over a cliff, broke a hip, and was laid up for six months without work last year. Arliss, who has the privilege of okaying or refusing co-members of all his casts, has asked for Miss Knapp to be assigned with him again for "The Successful Calamity." She last worked with Arliss in "The Millionaire."

Now here's the same thing again with the sexes reversed. Lew Stone's rôle in "Grand Hotel" marks the sixth time he has played in support of Greta Garbo. The silent Swede rarely addresses a word to Lew on the set [she doesn't talk at all to others in her casts during the entire making of a picture], but she thinks highly enough of Lew Stone to ask for him and recommend him for parts in films she is assigned to appear in.

Jimmy Starr, columnist about Hollywood affairs, showed up with a black eye today. He laughed about it, and said the eye was administered by "an actor who didn't like a recent review of a picture he acted in. I won't tell his name: his case will be taken care of otherwise." The contretemps preceding the eye tapping took place at Helen Twelvetrees' evening party.

Gilbert Roland, who until recently was unofficially named as Norma Talmadge's probable spouse in case she decided to divorce Joe Schenck, has gone separate ways from the retired dramatic star. While Miss Talmadge is in New York declaring she will shortly sail to Europe and seek her decree there. Roland is remaining in Hollywood and today was signed for a screen part in "The Woman in Room 13." In that movie Elissa Landi and Ralph Bellamy are co-featured. Roland played opposite Miss Talmadge as star in a succession of motion pictures, and accompanied her on trips to Europe and Hawaii.

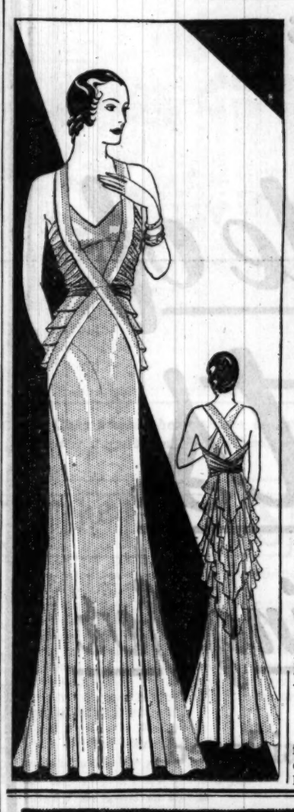
Chinese Vermilion Red Evening Gown Displayed in Paris Shop



BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Among the pale shades that dominate the evening scene in Paris—the ice blues and greens, the pale pinks and so forth—arises a new color, a lusty Marianne of a shade. It is brilliant Chinese vermilion seen on lacquered boxes and screens from the orient.

Pure blonds and girls with ebony hair, hear ye, hear ye! This red is your color. Nothing can be more striking or glamorous than a lovely blond or a handsome brunette garbed in a frock of Chinese vermilion red. Girls with neutral coloring had better steer clear of it unless they are willing to deplete the rouge pot, for it will outshine them, and no proper dress can do this and remain chic.

For such as can dominate the evening dress of brilliant vermilion the pictured frock from Jane Regny is recommended as something having genuine, unadulterated Paris chic. It is made of moire, this model. The skirt is a simple circle of that gorgeous silk and falls in many folds around the hem.

The bodice consists of a front and wide crossed straps for a back, these bias straps being also crossed in front and passed around the hipline. From the straps in front are placed wide, shirred bands of vermilion chiffon that pass under the arms and are crushed and crossed at the waistline in back.

Below the waistline from these same bands emerges a ruffled swallow tail drapery that hangs almost to the knees in back and is split up the center to the waistline. This also is made of chiffon.

Charity Card Party.

Italy Bars Style Hints That Urge Slender Figure

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

ROME, Feb. 19.—Instructions have been sent to all newspapers in Italy, in line with Premier Mussolini's viewpoint, to avoid any references likely to implant in the minds of women the idea there is anything fashionable in being thin, or that there is anything to be ashamed of in being plump.

In their zeal to obey orders, many newspapers have begun ridiculing women who starve themselves to achieve slim, youthful figures.

The new orders have been a boon to humorous papers and magazines, whose activities have been greatly curtailed by decrees forbidding them to caricature or make indiscreet jokes about political figures. They ridicule women who live on salads or do their daily dozen to rid themselves of superfluous flesh.

Dinner Dance Tonight.

The Chicago Amity club will hold a dinner dance this evening in the Knickerbocker hotel. Proceeds will be used to care for needy school children in the west suburban district.

Many Groups Pay Tributes to Washington

Exercises to Be Held at U. of C. Chapel.

Tomorrow afternoon the University of Chicago chapel will be the scene of a special ceremony commemorating the 200th birthday of George Washington. The event, one of the most important of the city's celebration of the Washington bicentennial, is sponsored by the Illinois chapters of the Society of the Colonial Dames, the Sons of Colonial Wars, and the Society of Mayflower Descendants.

Dr. Charles W. Gilkey, dean of the university chapel, will deliver the address, and the Rev. Duncan H. Browne, rector of St. James Episcopal church, will give the invocation and benediction. The service will begin at 4:30 o'clock with a processional of the three societies, led by Prof. Robert V. Merrill, marshal of the university.

A collect composed by Washington rediscovered by Mack Evans, university choirmaster, will be sung by the university choir. Mrs. Ferdinand Schevill will sing a solo. Mrs. Carroll H. Sudler is president of the Colonial Dames, Mr. Sudler is president of the Sons of Colonial Wars, and Henry A. Rumsey of Lake Forest is president of the Mayflower society. The public is invited to attend the ceremony.

Other Chicago organizations launched the observance of the bicentennial yesterday with exercises in schools, clubs and patriotic societies.

At the Drake hotel University of Chicago students celebrated the event with their 28th annual Washington prom. At the county building a framed reproduction of Gilbert Stuart's portrait of Washington was presented to Judge Henry Horner of the Probate court by William G. Thon, head of the Illinois commission created last summer by Gov. Emmerson.

Among the leading events today will be that of German-Americans who will attend a luncheon in the Midland club given under the joint auspices of the German-American division of the state commission, the German club of Chicago, and other German-American organizations.

The Chicago Bar association will hold a Washington day luncheon today at which Prof. Andrew C. McLaughlin of the University of Chicago will speak. A similar luncheon will be held by the Chicago Real Estate board.

At the Union League at 2:30 p. m. today will be the finals in the public speaking contest sponsored each year by the club in the public schools. Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts plan special exercises.

Chicago churches of every faith tomorrow will join others of the nation in paying tribute to Washington.

The Hub Will Open New Woman's Store Monday

After years and years as a store for men, with just a relatively small space reserved for women's apparel, The Hub, Henry C. Lytton & Sons, are opening on Monday their entire fifth floor especially for the presentation of clothes for women and girls. Dresses, suits, and coats, as well as hats, will be available. Against warm ivory walls, with furniture of old blue leather and a floor covering of warm rusty red, will be shown feminine fashions.

If you fall asleep when you shouldn't and toss in bed when you should be sleeping, be on your guard for the one thing that is most likely to cause the trouble — caffeine.

Many people still wonder why they can't sleep as they used to. A simple test — just changing your brand of coffee to the improved Kaffee Hag Coffee — for one week might solve the difficulty.

Kaffee Hag is not a substitute — but real coffee guaranteed 97% free of the drug caffeine and with the indigestible wax removed. It can't keep you awake or affect your nerves or digestion. Yet experts say its flavor is unsurpassed by any other fine coffee. Ideal for evening entertainments.

Try the new improved blend at the reduced price. Sold at all grocers in vacuum-sealed cans. If you are not entirely satisfied, send us the empty can and your money will be refunded. Roasted by Kellogg in Battle Creek. Quality guaranteed.

SUPREME COURT ASKED TO FORCE REDISTRICTING

Chicago Attorney Files Appeal for Writ.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 19.—[Special.]—In a petition submitted to the Supreme court today Attorney John W. Keogh of Chicago asked the court to issue a writ to compel the Illinois legislature to do its duty and reapportion the state.

In support of his appeal he showed that because of the legislature's twenty-year delay the average downstate voter now enjoys approximately twice the representation in the general assembly that the Cook county voter has.

Cites U. S. Constitution.

Attorney Keogh, petitioning for himself as a citizen and taxpayer, held that the Supreme court has jurisdiction in the case under the third article of the federal constitution. He declared that the legislature's failure to perform its duty violated the federal constitution's guarantee of a republican form of government to every state.

He showed that the 19 districts wholly within Cook county have more than 52 per cent of the state's population and the 32 districts without Cook county less than 48 per cent. The average population of a Cook county district, he explained, was 209,585, and of a downstate district only 114,016. The Forty-first district, composed of Will and DuPage counties, with a population of 202,730, was the only district outside Cook county, he declared, which approached the Cook county average.

The Thirty-second district [Hancock and McDonough counties] has a population of only 53,749, his figures showed.

The state Supreme court, said Attorney Keogh, was powerless to act for want of jurisdiction.

Asks Federal Order.

His petition did not ask the Supreme court to order the Illinois assembly to exercise its judgment or discretion in a political manner, but only to require it to perform a purely ministerial function which it was clearly commanded to do by the state constitution, the Chicago attorney argued.

Since the assembly is illegally constituted, he maintained, his taxes and the taxes of others in Cook county have been wrongfully spent.

"The writ of mandamus," he asserted, "is the only means through which to remedy petitioner's grievances as set forth in the foregoing petition and to terminate the contumaceous usurpation of legislative power by the general assembly of the state of Illinois hereinbefore shown to be illegal and unconstitutional as now constituted."

BANDITS RETURN FOR LOOT.

Two bandits who robbed the Community Loan company at 721 East 63d street of $700 four months ago returned yesterday with a companion and escaped with $450. E. A. Danford, manager, handed over the money and was locked in a washroom.

AVIATION NOTES

Braniff airways, operating between Chicago and Oklahoma City, yesterday announced a further reduction in passenger rates to 5 cents a mile, with an additional 10 per cent reduction on round trip tickets. The new rates, it is said, are the first adopted by any airline that are below rail plus Pullman rates for the same distance.

Peoria, Jacksonville, Decatur, Kankakee and Effingham are considering plans for new airports with the technical advice of the Illinois aeronautics commission, the commission announced yesterday.

Headquarters of the Embry-Riddle division of American airways will be moved to St. Louis from Cincinnati on March 1, it was announced yesterday. Col. Halsey Dunwoody will head the consolidated Embry-Riddle and Universal divisions.

JURY FOREMAN TURNS SLEUTH IN KEGEL MYSTERY

Finds Store Owner Won't Identify Lee.

So interested is the grand jury in reinvestigating the poison plot charges made against Mrs. Marie Sahlin Kegel that the foreman, John P. Larkin, undertook a bit of private sleuthing Thursday night. He revealed this yesterday when George Voulgaris, proprietor of a confectionery store at Broadway and Irving Park boulevard was called into the jury room.

MRS. MARIE KEGEL

Mrs. Mary Ryan, formerly a maid in the Kegel home, charged Mrs. Kegel with having poisoned her in Voulgaris' store. Mrs. Ryan was to testify in a divorce suit for Mrs. Kegel's husband, Dr. Arnold H. Kegel, former health commissioner, that on several occasions Mrs. Kegel tried to poison the doctor.

Mrs. Kegel Indicted.

Mrs. Kegel was indicted on the poison charge and Gerald Lee, a grocery clerk, was named as her accomplice after he admitted being present on the alleged occasion when Mrs. Kegel "dropped mercury powder" in Mrs. Ryan's ice cream soda. Later Lee repudiated this admission and said it was due to his having been beaten by detectives.

"Did you ever see this man before." Voulgaris was asked in the grand jury room yesterday as Lee faced him.

"He was in my store last night, but I don't remember ever seeing him before that," the witness answered.

Then Foreman Larkin said he was present the night before with Lee in the store. He had taken Lee there to see if Voulgaris would recognize him, and he reported that no recognition was apparent. The jury had been impressed with Lee's alibi and the jury learned that Dr. Kegel was communicating with Voulgaris, which accounted for his action, Mr. Larkin said.

May Identify Mrs. Ryan.

Voulgaris said he believed he could identify Mrs. Ryan, from pictures taken of her since she has been in the hospital, as a woman who patronized his store in company with another woman and a man about the time the poison incident was alleged to have occurred [Jan. 25]. It was decided to have Mrs. Ryan appear before the grand jury next Tuesday if she is able, and if not to have the hospital records subpoenaed.

Mrs. Kegel, who has been in seclusion since the accusation was made but is expected to appear in court today to give bail on the indictment, may also be a witness next Tuesday, Assistant State's Attorney Edwin Spiro said.

NORTH SIDE HAILS GOLDEN GLOVES CHAMPIONS

PURDUE BATTLES N. U. FOR BIG 10 LEAD TONIGHT

STEWART ILL; MAY BE LOST TO BOILERMAKERS

Reiff and Wooden Match Shots.

Games Tonight

Michigan at Illinois.
Ohio State at Chicago.
Northwestern at Purdue.
Indiana at Iowa.
Wisconsin at Minnesota.

Lafayette, Ind., Feb. 19.—[Special.]—Undisputed lead in the Big Ten will be at stake here tomorrow night when Purdue and Northwestern meet in the first game of their home and home basketball series. With championship aspirations for both teams hinging on the outcome, one of the outstanding games of the season is in prospect.

Each team will have its strongest lineup available. Northwestern will depend on a free scoring offense built around Joe Reiff, leading scorer of the Big Ten. Purdue banks on the speed and cleverness of a fast passing and dribbling offense fashioned around its co-captains, Harry Kellar and Johnny Wooden.

The only doubtful starter on either team is Charles Stewart, veteran Purdue center, who has been ill with a cold, and again may be replaced by Dutch Fehring, a sophomore who has shown to advantage in the last three games.

Each Beaten Once.

Purdue entertains little hope of controlling the tip-offs and will depend almost entirely upon its superior speed. The contest between Reiff and Wooden, two of the outstanding scorers in the west, is assuming an important aspect on the eve of battle.

Northwestern comes to Lafayette with a record of seven victories and one defeat to date. Its triumphs were achieved without a break, the only defeat coming last Saturday at the hands of the revived Iowa quintet. Purdue suffered its only defeat in its first conference start, bowing to Illinois. It then won its next five games. Purdue has been less active than Northwestern in the early part of the season and therefore has more games to play.

ASHLEY REJOINS MAROONS

Chicago university's basketball team, which has become better known for its persistence than its success, will have another try at a conference victory tonight when Ohio State's sixth place team appears at the Midway fieldhouse.

Tonight's forecast is not quite so hopeless for the Maroons as was last Saturday's, when Chicago faced Purdue. Purdue has since defeated Ohio State by four more points than it accumulated over the Maroons. In addition, Coach Norgren's squad is strengthened by the return of Capt. Harry Ashley, regular guard, who was out of the Boilermaker game with a cold.

Ohio comes to the Midway in sixth position, with a record of four games won and four lost, and a general advantage in height. Frederick Conrad, Ohio's 200 pound sophomore center, who stands 6 feet 4 inch, probably will be able to control the tipoff, and with Howard Mattison, guard, will be dangerous under the basket.

Chicago's showing against Purdue last week was the best Coach Norgren's men have made so far, and if Parsons or Evans can give Paul Stephenson, the Maroon scoring ace, any real assistance, the Maroons are hopeful of victory.

AVALON CLIMATE TURNS SQUARE AS CUBS PRACTICE

Hornsby Eyes Batting Work of Rookies.

Woody Goes Early

WOODY ENGLISH of the Cubs will leave Chicago tonight on the Los Angeles Limited from the North Western station. Woody will have a three day advantage on the second squad of the Cubs, which will leave on the same train Tuesday night.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Avalon, Catalina Island, Feb. 19.—Affairs reached a state of normalcy in the Cubs' reducing camp today. The weather, which had been on a prolonged jag, much to the embarrassment of the climate boosters, returned in all its sun kissed glory, so the athletes went to work seriously for the first time.

For two days the twenty odd hopefuls had been slightly amused by the fact that with the assistance of the rain and cold they had been able to escape with nothing more than light, limited exercises. But today they paid for their previous leisurely program. Manager Hornsby put them in motion at 11 o'clock after waiting for the field to dry out a bit, and for the ensuing four hours there was nothing to do except work.

Brings Work for Andy.

The result was not only considerable reduction in the aggregate poundage of the performers, but an epidemic of sore muscles which Andy Lotshaw, the eminent trainer, tried to rub away by applying some of his customary time honored jokes.

As proof that he thinks the most important feature of a rookie camp is hitting practice, Hornsby started his youths on this sort of labor as soon as the batting box was dry enough to provide safe footing.

"Find out if they can hit first, and then take a look at their fielding," is the Cub manager's view. "When you find a hitter you have time enough in which to locate the one particular spot in which he is at his best as a fielder."

Since it was the first batting workout of any consequence, nothing startling was revealed. A few of the lads took toe holds and let go with long drives, but things such as that are not taken seriously until about the second week. But the swinging of the various fellows revealed to Hornsby's expert eye some minor faults about their style and the boss showed no hesitancy about giving them the needed pointers.

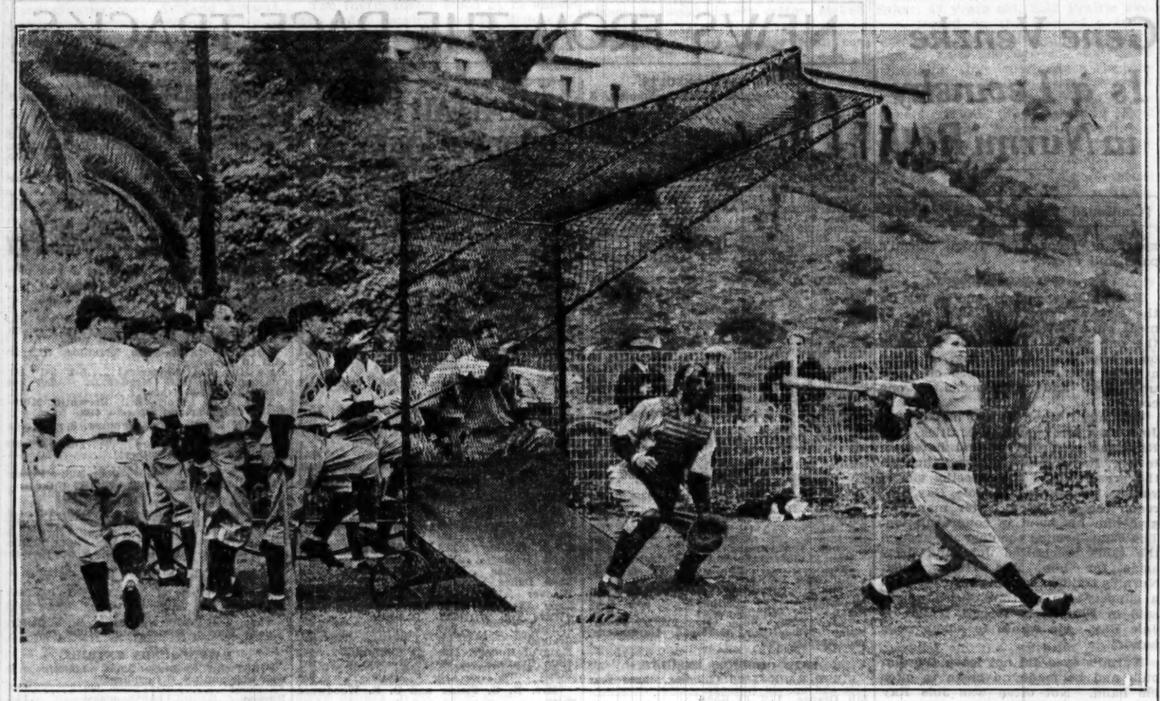
When a rookie can get hitting instruction from a man of Hornsby's skill he thinks he's in his seventh heaven. He was especially attentive in this respect to Harry Taylor, the young man who is to be given an opportunity to run Charley Grimm off first base.

Mackenzie Gets Chance.

A good part of the batting practice was handled by Red Mackenzie, the slatlike southpaw who was picked up by the Cubs in the east last summer and turned over to the Los Angeles club because of the rule which prohibits the majors signing any free agents unless they are college products. Red is the left handed kid they think might develop into a second Bob Grove. He has the same free, easy delivery of the Athletics' star and also a ton of speed.

Thus far he is troubled only by a tendency toward wildness, but it is Hornsby's belief that before the summer is half over the weakness will be overcome and the Cubs will be buying his release from the Angels. Red had to quit work today when he slipped fielding a ball and landed on his working arm.

O, FOR THE LIFE OF A BALL PLAYER!



The opening of the baseball season is still seven weeks away, but the Cubs are at the business of getting set for it by daily workouts at their Catalina island training camp. They've been somewhat slowed up on their regular outdoor schedule by daily showers, but the sun came out yesterday long enough to give them time for a regulation drill. [Associated Press Photo.]

NOTRE DAME WINS AGAIN; CONQUERS BUTLER, 37 TO 32

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 19.—[Special.]—Notre Dame continued its basketball rampage here tonight when it came from behind to defeat Butler university, 37 to 32, before 7,500, a record collegiate crowd in the Butler field house.

Taking an early lead on field goals by Ed Krause and De Cook, Notre Dame went into the closing minutes of the first half with a 6 to 1 advantage only to be tied by Butler at the intermission, 14 to 14.

Butler Takes Lead.

Voegele, Irish forward, broke the tie on the first play of the second period, but within five minutes Butler was leading, 25 to 16, on baskets by Chadd, Miller, and Proffitt. A Notre Dame rally brought the count to 28 to 25 in Butler's favor and a minute later, Voegele cut the Bulldogs' margin further with two shots that made the score 30 to 32.

Play became unusually rough as both teams speeded up in the waning minutes of the half. De Cook tied the score with a field goal, Voegele gave the Irish the lead again with a free throw then added a basket, which, with Capt. Crowe's, put the game on ice.

Voegele Leads Irish.

Voegele led the Irish attack with fifteen points. Krause, Notre Dame's main spring, was held to seven points by the Butler guards, Chadd and Tackett. Chadd was Butler's high point man with five field goals and a free throw. It was Notre Dame's 13th victory in 15 starts. Lineup:

Corbett Pronounced Fit; Released from Hospital

New York, Feb. 19.—(AP)—James J. Corbett, former heavyweight champion, who has been in Presbyterian hospital for three weeks for a general observation, was discharged today.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

WHERE AGE TELLS.

JACK DEMPSEY'S friends were convinced, if they had any doubt, at the Stadium Thursday night, that there is a wide margin between Jack's boxing, or rather punching, ability shown now, compared to his Chicago appearance against Gene Tunney four and one-half years ago. That opinion was formed without allowance for any improvement which might accrue from regular hours and training at a camp rather than the irregular regimen, if any, of an exhibition tour.

Of course, power of recuperation lessens with years. But what most affects a fighter and causes him visibly to "slow up"? Dempsey, himself, says it is the matter of speed, both in attack and defense. Blows which once would have landed miss by an eighth or a quarter of an inch. Blows are taken which once would have been avoided by the same margin.

Probably many boxers do not realize the change—simply wonder why they do not land more effectively and why opponents reach them more easily. Dempsey does—at least enough to assign speed as the principal reason for a boxer's decadence from his prime.

In American heavyweight ring history, no champion after defeat and loss of his title ever regained it. Several tried. Jack Dempsey and Jim Corbett came nearest to upsetting the fighting bromide of "They never come back."

The Manassa Mauler's effort at Soldiers' field, after having lost the crown to Gene Tunney at Philadelphia a year previous, is within recent memory. Whether or not Jack would have succeeded without the long count cannot be included in the record book.

Back in 1897 "Gentleman Jim" Corbett, who had obtained the title from John L. Sullivan five years before, was knocked out by Bob Fitzsimmons at Carson City, Nev. Fitz succumbed to Jeffries two years later. Then, in 1900, eight years after he first won the championship and three years after he had lost it, Corbett, then 34, essayed a comeback rôle against Jeffries.

Ever a clever boxer, Corbett kept away and outpointed the champion until the 23d round. At that time he was so far in the lead strictly on points that he would have gained the decision had the battle gone the limit of 25 rounds. Jeffries, desperate and baffled up to that time, finally put through a crushing body blow and Corbett folded up for the count. Es-saying another attempt three years later, Corbett received the soporific punch in ten rounds.

Jeffries himself came out of retirement as a "white hope" against Jack Johnson after he had quit active ring work for nearly eight years. He was 35 years old at the time. It was a sorry exhibition by Jeffries, compared with his former invincibility. Johnson won in fifteen rounds.

VENZKE BECOMES THE LEVINSKY IN OLD NURMI'S PATH

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 19.—There will be work for Paavo Nurmi, the morose Finn, when he comes over for the Olympic games in Los Angeles because a young American named Gene Venzke, so new to fame that he remains even now almost an unidentified young man, has recently beaten the record that Nurmi was proudest of, his time of 4:10 2-5 for the mile.

Perhaps it is assuming too much to assume that Nurmi was proudest of his mile record, for there is an athlete who may be stuffed with sawdust or seaweed for all that any one in this country ever was able to learn to the contrary, and pride may not be one of his ingredients.

He Ran Alone.

He ran fast and with a stride which Al Copeland and other old aesthetes of such sports described as beautiful and, unlike the Scandinavian skaters in the Olympic winter games at Lake Placid he ran utterly alone, however numerous the field might be, ignoring all competitors as though they didn't exist, making his own pace and timing himself, as his manager said, with a stop watch held in the palm of his hand.

Whether he did hold a stop watch or merely studied the gloss of his nails like an orator pausing for laughter, I never was able to determine, although on two occasions I picked him up at the close of his romps around the floor of the old Garden and tagged along to the dressing room under the stairs with him, jabbering broken English so as to sound like a Finn, in a wish to make sure.

I never saw the watch and if he did carry one he must have palmed it away like a parlor magician between the track and the rubbing table. This table was set in a moldy little closet in the dark recesses of the old Garden, full of the rich old smells of generations of athletes who had dressed and been rubbed down there and it was invariably crowded with jubilant Finns wishing to strike some

MR. DEMPSEY'S STILL TRAVELING COMEBACK ROAD

That Levinsky Bout Was Not Even a Detour.

BY FRENCH LANE.

He is going to carry on. That was the word which came from Dempsey's camp last night. "And Jack will surprise the most skeptical critic with his success before the summer is over," his manager, Leonard Sacks, said when he announced there would be no change in the Dempsey comeback campaign plans.

Dempsey wasn't disheartened in the least at his showing against the younger Levinsky. He greeted friends with the same old cheerful "hello," said he never made an alibi for a fight in his life, and would not start at this late date.

Fought with Cold.

It developed, however, that Dempsey for the last few days has been suffering from a severe cold, which was at his worst on the night he fought Levinsky. It might have affected his breathing to some extent, but Dempsey would not say so. He did not pick up a scratch or a cut in his struggle with Levinsky, although the Kingfish fired a volley of blows to all parts of his head and body from the first tap of the bell until Dempsey wearily lunged back into his corner at the end of the fourth round.

"We are not discouraged at Jack's showing against Levinsky because it isn't the first time he has been outscored," Sacks said. "Dempsey has been outscored many times. Bill Brennan, Tommy Gibbons, Jack Sharkey, and Tunney were some of the fellows who outscored him. But he stopped Brennan and Sharkey and later in the fight came on to outscore Gibbons. Tunney outscored him in both fights, but still there was the "fourteen count" which possibly robbed Dempsey of a victory.

"Jack has been kept busier on this tour than he had expected to be. He was forced to attend many outside functions. Some of his railroad jumps were not easy to make. He shakes hands with thousands of his well wishers every day and he has been under a severe strain from the time the tour started. He isn't one bit dissatisfied with the showing he has made, and when the time comes for Dempsey to meet a major opponent in an important bout over a distance, the difference between six and ten ounce gloves and the difference in his condition will reveal a new Dempsey.

Lost Before Biggest Crowd.

"We are sorry Jack's poorest showing of his tour had to come before the largest crowd that turned out to see him. There are many reasons for this, and I do not care to mention some of them at this time."

Talk was heard of a ten round rematch between Dempsey and Levinsky yesterday, but the arrangements for such a scrap had made no official headway. Dempsey's next bout is scheduled in Louisville on Feb. 23. His opponent has not been picked.

MISS ORCUTT DEFEATS MISS HICKS ON 19TH

Miss Hicks was 1 up going to the 18th hole, but the match was evened when she took a five and Miss Orcutt had a four. Miss Orcutt won the 19th with a birdie three, sinking a 12 foot putt after reaching the green with two.

The north side named its Golden Gloves boxing team last night at Loyola university gymnasium. Two thousand five hundred attended the ceremonies which, at the conclusion of three hours and a half of boxing, interspersed with knockout punches, saw the best 16 boys of the tourney picked on the team which will start in the Tournament of Champions Feb. 29.

The west side, and now the north side of Chicago, have seen future Golden Gloves stars in action. There remains only the south side tournament, which opens Monday night at White City. And what a tournament that will be! Four hundred and sixty-seven lads have entered the eight divisions.

How to Describe It?

What adjectives are there to describe the action in the ring last night, or the roar of the crowd as it beat against the skylight windows of the gymnasium and reverberated from the walls! The hundreds were in constant uproar from 7 o'clock, when the first boys came into the ring, until shortly before 11, when the last pair fought for the right to enter the Tournament of Champions.

Powerful punches, hooks, right crosses and jabbing lefts. All were mixed in one long parade of rounds. Knockouts and knock downs. Game boys going down in defeat, gamer lads catching a wild blow on the jaw and tumbling to the canvas for the long count. These were but a few minutes of the greatest boxing show the north side ever has seen.

The finalists last night, eight in each division, battled with all the energy they possessed. Previously they had won on Thursday night in the preliminaries and by that token they were better boxes and had more endurance. But each lad was pitted against a better man than in his first fights.

Take Dunnington, for Instance.

It's difficult to single out any one bout as the best of the evening. A score might be termed best and still one might overlook others equally as good. But let us tell you about Harold Dunnington. This little colored featherweight has been trying for three years to win a coveted pair of diamond studded Golden Gloves. He's a right smart hand with the gloves, too, as many an amateur in Chicago will testify.

Young Dunnington won his preliminary bouts. Last night he drew George Haberski, the 118 pound champion of the Catholic youth tournament, who now is fighting as a featherweight. In the first round Harold punched Haberski smack on the jaw with a left hook and George was counted out. The defeat was most bitter for Haberski, for last year he

Hinsdale at Maine.
Glenbard at Downers Grove.

St. Patrick High school regained the north section heavyweight basketball lead in the Catholic league last night when it defeated Weber, 36 to 23, while St. Mel, which temporarily held first place, was upset by St. George, 28 to 24, at Evanston.

It was the second defeat for St. Mel, which took first place from St. Patrick last Tuesday by whipping Loyola. Previously the teams had been tied with six victories and one defeat.

Elrich and Joyce led St. George, the former scoring five baskets and two free throws and Joyce collecting five points. St. George led at the half, 13 to 11.

Meyer and Cinsie Star.

Leading the St. Patrick attack against Weber were Meyer and Cinsie. Meyer scored three baskets and one free throw, and Cinsie four field goals and two free throws. St. Patrick led, 16 to 10, at the end of the first half.

New Trier's undefeated heavyweight squad scored its eighth Suburban league victory by beating Deerfield, 35 to 19, at Winnetka. The victory assured New Trier of at least a tie for the championship. Only two games remain on the league schedule and its closest rival, Oak Park, has already suffered two defeats.

York strengthened its lead in the west suburban heavyweight race by triumphing over Downers Grove, 22 to 21, in an overtime game at Elmhurst. A free throw by Smotherman, who was fouled by Reninger in the final minute of the extra period, gave York the victory.

Bloom of Chicago Heights clinched the heavyweight championship in the South Suburban league by winning from Kankakee, 29 to 15. The Thornton lights maintained their lead by defeating University, 27 to 13, at Harvey.

Austin, Lane Tech Win.

Austin lightweights and Lane Tech heavyweights swept into the semi-finals for the Chicago Public High School league championships. Austin defeated Tuley, 40 to 10, to win second place in the west section, while Lane triumphed over Schurz, 33 to 15, and now jointly holds the north division title with Lake View.

The games yesterday brought to a close the sectional races for the season. The winner and runner-ups which qualify for the title series have all been determined in the four sections with the exception of second place in the south division, where the Calumet lightweights and Bowen are tied. They will meet Monday afternoon at White City. The lineups:

Harris Beats Lindquist in Amateur Cue Tourney

Shamrocks, Oilers Meet for 3d Time

Champions and chief contenders of the American Hockey league meet tonight when the Tulsa Oilers oppose the Shamrocks at the Chicago Stadium for the third time this season. The Oilers won the title last year and the Shamrocks, recently emerging from a slump, with six victories and one tie in their last eight games, are again outstanding contenders for this year's championship.

The Shamrocks haven't had much luck on local ice against the Oilers. The latter have conquered the Green and White at the Stadium twice, 4 to 2 and 1 to 0. On both occasions the battering of the Tulsa goal by the Rocks was successfully resisted by Red McCusker, an experienced goalie.

La France Leads Oilers.

The Shamrocks' kid line of Riley, Wiseman, and Prelesnik has been traveling at top speed of late. Eddie Wiseman leads the league's scorers and Jack Riley is tied for second place with Gus Forslund. Tony Prelesnik is well up among the leaders, besides contributing all around power to the combination, with the result that the three outdistanced all other lines by 16 points.

Heading the Tulsa offense is Leo La France, second to Gordie Brydson of the Shamrocks in scoring last year. La France and Brydson are now tied for 10th place. The Tulsa lineup also boasts Larry Goyer, leading scorer of the league year before last. Speed Moffatt and Gus Marker are the latest Oiler casualties and neither may be in tonight's game.

Defending Goalie McCusker tonight will be Emil Hanson, the fastest defence man in the league; Charlie Langlois and the aging but still able Babe Donnelly. Starting the forward attack of the champions probably will be Sheppard at center, La France at left wing, and Sonny Boy Wakeford at right wing. Acaster, Healey, Metcalf, Goyer, and possibly Marker will do spare duty.

Shamrocks Can Tie for Lead.

Victory over the Oilers and another over the Duluth Hornets Tuesday night would restore the Rocks to a tie with the Kansas City Pla-More for the league leadership. Lineup:

CHICAGO.		TULSA.
1. Karakas	G	1. McCusker
10. Buswell	D	3. Donnelly
12. Taylor	D	10. Hanson
18. Clayton	F	11. Acaster
6 Brydson	R. W.	15. Healey
7. McFadyen	L. W.	9. Metcalfe
SPARES.

Chicago—MacKenzie, 14; Johnson, 9; O'Neill, 4; Riley, 8; Prelesnik, 17; Wiseman, 4; Headley, 11.

Tulsa—Sheppard, 4; La France, 6; Wakeford, 8; Langlois, 2; Goyer, 7; Marker, 5.

BADGERS WILLING TO PAY NEYLAND $9,000 AS COACH

Madison, Wis., Feb. 19.—[Special.]—The University of Wisconsin athletic council today announced that it had asked Maj. Robert Neyland, head football coach at the University of Tennessee, to come to Madison to confer on the possibility of succeeding Glenn Thistlethwaite.

The announcement was made by Prof. J. F. A. Pyre and Scott Goodnight. The council indicated that the school is willing to offer terms of $9,000 or more. It was revealed here recently that Thistlethwaite received $7,500 a season.

The decision to increase the offer follows an announcement from Maj. Neyland that he was not interested in the Badger coaching job.

DE PAUL IS HOST TO DETROIT U. QUINTET TONIGHT

De Paul university will meet Detroit university's basketball team tonight at the De Paul gymnasium. It will be the first game for the Blue Demons since returning from their invasion of the east. De Paul lost to Detroit, 36 to 25, at Detroit two weeks ago.

Coach Jim Kelly has announced that the Blue Demons will be at full strength tonight. Jim Gorsky, who started the road trip as a substitute and finished as the leading scorer on the squad, will appear with Heine Coan at the forward positions. Eli Weston will start at center, but probably will give way to Pete Barskis.

Michigan Beats Wisconsin in Big Ten Hockey, 7 to 1

Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 19.—[Special.]—Michigan defeated Wisconsin, 7 to 1, tonight in the first of two hockey games, scoring three goals in each of the first two periods and one in the dying minutes of the last period. Reid of Michigan starred with five goals and an assist. The teams play here again tomorrow night.

Edgewater Beach Girls Beat J. P. I. Swimmers

He Recognized Nobody.

But he knew nobody and he lay on the slab as impersonal as a side of meat on a butcher's block gazing at the one grimy yellow bulb dangling on a wire from the ceiling, as other athletes put on or stripped off their underwear and their socks in one corner.

One night when Paavo had beaten Joie Ray for one of the titles that Ray was so proud of and hated so to lose, Ray bumped his way through the press around the dressing closet, yelling "gangway for Joie Ray" to reach the side of a better man and give him his hand in congratulation. The Finns around the door and around the table recognized Joie and drew aside for him, and Hugo Quist, Nurmi's trainer, working on a leg with a slippety-slap rhythm of his palms, said in Finnish to Nurmi, "Here is Joie Ray. He wants to shake your hand."

Nurmi's eyes did not leave the dim bulb and he made no move to offer his hand. Not often was Joie Ray embarrassed, for he didn't embarrass easily, but this time he stood with his mouth open and his hand extended until at last in confusion, instead of slapping Nurmi's face and inviting him outside to fight, he grabbed his right hand, pumped it twice, dropped it, yelling, "My God, that ain't alive."

Hugo Did the Talking.

All that Nurmi ever said for publication in this country was said by his manager, Hugo Quist, and whether he left the United States with a fortune in gate receipts, according to the prevalent suspicion, or went home as poor as he came, never was disclosed.

He began his American stand by running three races in record breaking time on three successive nights in New York, Chicago and New York and these feats, considering the travel between engagements and the possible interference with Paavo's sleep on both nights, had a dramatic value that brought the crowds storming to the doors for weeks afterward.

The final disposition of the receipts was never disclosed and the A. A. U. was not inquisitive. Nurmi ran for the Finnish-American A. A. and the Finnish-American A. C. had the privilege of disposing of its own funds according to its own desires. Yet, when Nurmi returned home to Finland he was listed as a second class passenger and his character was still as blank as before. It was not even mysterious.

Call for Nurmi on Skates.

When the Norwegian and Swedish skaters at Lake Placid were complaining of the jockeying which the American style of racing permitted, a Nurmi on skates would have solved the difficulty by going away so far in front that any man who wished to use him for a windshield would have had to skate close to the records all the way.

The Venzke boy ran a mile in 4:10, two-fifths of a second better than Nurmi's best time, with a backward glance near the finish and strength enough to continue on for a half a lap taking his bows. He may run another mile even faster next Monday evening in the national indoor championship meet and it is doubtful that Nurmi will ever catch him now, for, like Jack Dempsey, he is old in his game and the legs which a hysterical lady reporter described as twin white vases of living marble cannot be as good as they were.

RAN KNOCKS OUT BILLY TOWNSEND IN SECOND ROUND

New York, Feb. 19.—[U. P.]—Eddie Ran of Poland knocked out Billy Townsend of Vancouver, B. C., in the second round at Madison Square Garden tonight.

Townsend won the first round. In the second they were fighting on even terms until Ran slipped over a right to the chin that momentarily dazed Townsend. The Polish battler followed up with another right that sent Townsend sprawling.

ERNEST MUST BE IN EARNEST ON GOLDEN GLOVES

Scores Two Knockouts in Less than Two Minutes.

BY FRENCH LANE.

There is one boy on the new north side Golden Gloves team who did some tall and fancy punching when he scored two knockouts in less than two minutes of fighting last night.

His name is Ernest Tonelli and he came into the tournament unknown to most of the amateur boxing followers along the north shore. His home is in Ottawa, Ill., but employment out north brought him into the north side sectionals.

McKievick First Victim.

He came into the lightweight division and he saved the final night of the tournament for the fireworks. And what a job of firing he did. His first victim was Eddie McKievick and it was one to write home about. They had been out in the center of the ring face to face with each other for only a few seconds when Tonelli's left began a trip toward McKievick's chin. And when it landed down went McKievick for the full count on the only blow that had been delivered in the fight.

It was less than an hour later when Tonelli brought his now well advertised left back into the ring. This time he squared away against Joe Schmitt, representing Immaculate Conception C. Y. O.

Scores Another Knockout.

This time a half dozen punches had been exchanged when Tonelli's left started moving toward another chin. It landed with full force and down went the Schmitt boy. He heard the referee count ten. The crowd just realized that in Tonelli it had been looking at one of the most scientific sluggers ever to fight for a place on the north sectional team.

That punch in Tonelli's left fist is going to be heard from in the Tournament of Champions. It is worth going miles to see.

LAKE FOREST LOSES, 19-12, TO NORTH CENTRAL

North Central college defeated the Lake Forest college quintet at Naperville last night, 19 to 12. North Central led throughout. Manning, McLaughlin and Brewe were high scorers for North Central. Waidner led Lake Forest.

North Central freshmen defeated Lake Forest B team, 22 to 19, in three overtime periods. North Central swamped Morton college, 85 to 14, in an indoor track meet held simultaneously with the basketball games.

Thurnblad Loses to Towle in Cue Tournament, 50-42

Arthur Thurnblad, former world's champion, was beaten by Harry Towle, 50 to 42 in 49 innings in the all star three cushion billiard tournament at the Kleckhefer recreation yesterday. Towle's high run was 6, Thurnblad's 7. In another game Harry Ticks defeated Charles Legros, 50 to 31, in 72 innings. His high run was 5 to 4 for Legros. Earl Lookabaugh will meet Charles Ward tonight.

Central Beats La Porte for Third Time, 25 to 14

South Bend, Ind., Feb. 19.—[Special.]—Central High school achieved its third victory of the season over Laporte tonight, 25 to 14. Hadrick, Morrow and Piotrowski led Central's scorers with six points apiece. Central led, 19-8, at the half. Other scores:

Goshen, 16; Elkhart, 14 [overtime].
Michigan City, 26; Riley [South Bend], 10.
Plymouth, 22; Nappanee, 21.

BY BOB BECKER.

Shell Creek, Fla., Feb. 19.—[Special.]—On our last fishing trip near Charlotte Harbor today before moving into the Florida keys it was necessary to get way up into the headwaters of Shell creek to find the black bass. A high tide backed by a stiff wind filled the creek with so much water that it was imperative to angle well above the regular fishing grounds. Therefore the climax of the day's trip did not come until around 4 o'clock. Beginning at that time the husky large mouth bass became active.

Shell creek is a stream of unusual beauty. Its high banks of sand and shells are topped by a thick growth of palms and oaks. These oaks are festooned with Spanish moss which trails its fingers overhead as one paddles along.

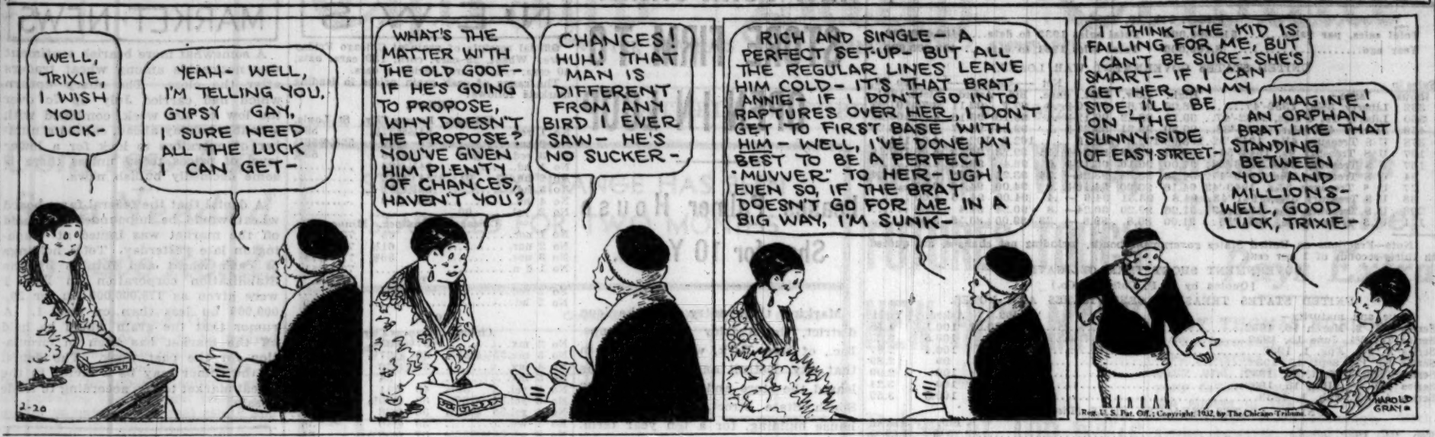
A cormorant kept just ahead of us in the stream for quite a distance, another fisherman hard at work. Occasional herons startled us as they got under way from their positions along the bank.

We found the bass in a very narrow part of the stream. Some times it was not more than 25 feet wide. There were deep holes and old snags here where the fish could hide easily.

We were casting one of the guide's home made cedar lures, a very small and light thing. On a forward cast we had gotten a loop in the line around the reel. As the lure hit the water, we began to straighten out the line. With our eyes on the reel and not on the water, we didn't see a bass strike nor did we feel it. The guide called a warning, we began to reel in our line and then for the first time saw what was happening in the clear pool ahead.

A bass had struck the lure and right at his side was another bass, very much interested in this strange, brightly painted piece of cedar. Fish No. 1 hit and dropped the lure just as we got our line taut. However, when bass No. 2 saw this little plug dart off, he hit and we soon landed a 3 pounder. Fifteen minutes later this same little lure drew a four pounder out of some brush. We saw it start, rush through the clear water for about five feet and strike, a beautiful and thrilling picture.

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: Doubt



North Siders Hail Golden GlovesChamps

also was in the thick of the Golden Gloves campaign until he lost a close decision. But for Dunnington it was a break of luck, since he was to meet Anthony Marcy, another C. Y. O. lad, in the last round.

That was a battle. Toe to toe, neither yielding an inch, Dunnington and Marcy fought with all the power they had. Each pounded to the body and the other took it, exchanging blow for blow.

Marcy's Reserve Wins.

Dunnington had the advantage of the first round. Marcy won the second. And all through these tense minutes the throng stood and cheered. Then came the third round. Marcy called on reserve strength to carry the battle to his colored rival. For each blow he sent back two until, at the final bell, the judges and referees unanimously gave him the verdict. And you'll hear more about Anthony Marcy at the Chicago Stadium.

Dependable Johnny Phagan, a member of the 1931 Intercity Golden Gloves team, won a place in the Tournament of Champions. Johnny has the grace of a leopard as he shuffles across the canvas and when he brings over a one-two, he lands with a precision of aim a professional might envy. In his first match Phagan won a decision over George Taylor, a Waukegan welterweight, and then he repeated to whip Marshall Bennett, another boy from the Lake county city.

Verri Reaches Final.

Pete Verri of the Nelson A. C. achieved a long standing ambition to reach the final tournament. Last night he stopped Paul Unterzubert of the Avondale A. A. in one round and followed that conquest with a decision over Charles Hartigan of the North Side A. C. Verri is one of Chicago's best lightweights and the lads from out of town will know he's in the Tournament of Champions.

17% OF DEATHS IN AUTO CRASHES ON THREE STREETS

Ashland, Western and Halsted Named.

Three of the city's longest streets, Western avenue, Halsted street and Ashland avenue, were the scenes of 17 per cent of all the automobile fatalities in Chicago during 1931. This was the discovery made by Ald. John A. Massen, chairman of the city council committee on traffic and public safety, in his investigation of the 978 automobile deaths in the city during the year.

Another discovery was that all the accidents occurred at street intersections, and usually these intersections where street car tracks and movements complicated the traffic. Street car lines stretch from end to end of Western avenue and Halsted street, and the greater length of Ashland avenue also is laid with tracks.

Ashland Most Hazardous.

The most hazardous of the three thoroughfares was Ashland avenue, which was recently widened south of Madison street. Fatal accidents on the street accounted for 78 lives. Western avenue's toll amounted to 62 and Halsted street trailed with 26. The total of the three was 166.

"It is significant that these three streets carrying a heavy load of the north and south traffic of the city l d in deaths," Ald. Massen said. "The fact that all three are used by the surface lines increases the need for caution by all motorists. Many persons whose names now are in the death records were lured from the safety of the sidewalk in an effort to board the street cars."

Children Found Careful.

"Jay walkers seem to be a diminishing breed," the alderman added, "or if they still exist they are careful and do not come to grief. Children too, having been taught to be careful, do not figure in my records. Only 12 of the 166 persons killed were under 16 years of age. Seventy-eight victims were between the ages of 16 and 50, and 62 were over 50."

The council committee is planning to prepare a spot map of all the accidents in the city limits in an effort to discover the causes which make "death corners" of certain intersections.

Three automobile fatalities in Cook county yesterday increased the toll for 1932 to 155. The victims:

Mrs. Theresa Kelley, 60 years old, of 6907 Cornell avenue, died last night in the Jackson Park hospital of injuries received Feb. 12 in a collision of two cars at 72d street and Ridgeland avenue. One of the machines was driven by her son, William, and the other by John Musachio, 7645 South Chicago avenue.

Michael Sinkiewicz, 63 years old, 2636 West 23d place. Died at the county hospital from hurts suffered several days ago when he was run down at 19th street and Ashland avenue.

Sam Bell, colored, 55 years old, 925 South State street. Died at the county hospital from injuries received when he was run down at State and Harrison streets by the car of a hit and run driver who stopped and then drove on. His companion, who remained behind, was held. He is James Green, colored, 4112 South Park way.

Marian Booz, 8 years old, 2016 Harrison street, Evanston, daughter of Edwin G. Booz, industrial engineer with offices at 14 East Jackson boulevard, was critically injured when she was struck by an automobile in front of the Evanston police station on Sherman avenue. She was taken to the St. Francis hospital and X-ray pictures disclosed that she was suffering from a skull fracture. The accident was the second in which the child was seriously hurt. The driver was George E. Thompson, of Morton Grove.

Chicago Man Is Injured in Oklahoma Train Crash

Muskogee, Okla., Feb. 19.—(AP)—Seven cars of the north bound Missouri, Kansas and Texas Blue Bonnet passenger train left the rails near here tonight, injuring two passengers, Julien Hyer, Fort Worth, and Arthur O. Creasey, Chicago. Hyer suffered a sprained back and Creasey a sprained shoulder and back. H. I. Newell, an assistant yard foreman, died from paralytic stroke while surveying the wrecked cars. Railroad officials said a split switch caused the derailment. Hyer is president of the Lions International. He was en route to Chicago.

Rites for Miss Todd, Pioneer Teacher, Today

Funeral services for Miss Emma Todd, 85 years old, a pioneer school teacher of Aurora, will be held at 2:30 o'clock today at her home there, followed by burial in Spring Lake cemetery. Miss Todd died on Thursday. She was a member of a prominent Aurora family, and, with the late W. B. Powell, former superintendent of schools of Washington, D. C., wrote a reader which was widely used in public schools.

Last Survivor of J. A. Logan Regiment in Civil War Dies

Marion, Ill., Feb. 19.—[Special.]—Martin Odom, 90, the last surviving member of the John A. Logan regiment in the civil war, died at his home on Route 4, Creal Springs, following a long sickness. He served with Company C, Thirty-first Illinois Volunteers, in many important engagements to the end of the war.

WARTIME VETERANS OF THE 33D DIVISION WILL MEET TONIGHT

BURIED BENEATH STONE 8 HOURS, REVIVED BY RUM

Afton, Mich., Feb. 18.—[U.P.]—Gingerly picking their way through ten feet of limestone, 100 workmen tonight rescued a comrade, Amy Brasseur, 35, who had been buried for eight hours by a stone slide at a quarry near here.

"Only God could have saved me," Brasseur, a driller and father of six children, gasped as he was dragged from beneath two large rocks which had formed a protecting arch above his head. Apparently he was uninjured.

The thermometer stood at 12 above zero and it required two big drinks of whisky to revive Brasseur. He was at work alone at the bottom of a "funnel" surrounded by 40 feet of limestone when the slide came without a warning.

"I threw my hands about my head and shut my eyes," Brasseur said. "When I opened them the rocks were above me. I lay there for hours, it seemed days. I thought it was the end and I thought about my kids, my wife, and the fellows. I wondered whether I would be crushed or freeze to death. Somehow I had enough air.

"After a long time I heard the boys shouting. It was cold and I couldn't holler back very loud. I dozed off every now and then. When I woke up the last time the boys were just above me."

DRY WRITS HIT PLANET MARS, 31 OTHER PLACES

Thirty-two temporary injunctions against places charged with violation of the prohibition law were issued yesterday by Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson.

Among the establishments named was the Planet Mars, a cabaret operated by Harry Voller at 188 West Randolph street, which was raided on the night before New Year's eve. Texas Guinan, the hostess, appeared at the federal building on the next day, but no charges were placed against her. Charges against the owners and several employes are still pending.

One order was issued against Katherine Lidikewicz, owner of a candy store at 615 West 18th street. Mrs. Lidikewicz is the estranged wife of Boleslaw Lidikewicz, a janitor, who served a 60 day term in jail for making home brew for a gathering of Legionnaires.

ELENBOGEN GETS U. S. DELAY; HELD ON STATE CHARGE

The continuance, until today, was granted by Federal Judge John P. Barnes when Elenbogen appeared before him on the charge of embezzling funds from the bank in conspiracy with John E. Malloy, former assistant cashier of the institution, who is now in Leavenworth penitentiary.

The new charge was made by David Joseph, 772 West Van Buren street. He said he deposited $1,200 worth of Liberty bonds with Elenbogen as security for a lease, and that Elenbogen had kept the bonds. Last night Elenbogen surrendered at the detective bureau on the state charge and posted a $1,000 bond.

PURCHASE CARS TO CREATE JOBS, AUTO MAN SAYS

Public Is Urged to Aid Prosperity Return.

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 19.—[Special.]—Prosperity cannot come back until the automobile factories begin to work on a normal basis, according to H. J. Klingler, vice president and general sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor company, and the motor car plants will not resume normal production until the public is convinced that the purchase of a new car is a major contribution toward unemployment relief.

"In addition to being the nation's largest manufacturing industry," he said at lunch today, "the automobile companies are the largest consumers of raw materials. Not until motor car sales are revived can there be any prosperity for steel, iron, plate glass, hardwood lumber, cotton, nickel, or rubber. Not until automobile sales increase can America rise from the depression."

With Leading Company.

This is perhaps the strongest statement made in the last two years by any leader in the automobile business on the relation of motor car sales to the general economic condition of the country. It comes from the merchandising director of the company which led the industry in 1931 sales, enjoying 30.7 per cent of the total business. W. S. Knudsen, president of the Chevrolet Motor company, is an engineer and production manager.

"The public," Mr. Klingler continued, "must be brought to realize just what the purchase of an automobile means in the unemployment relief. The owner of a 1932 car should be made to appreciate the fact that he has helped put mechanics back to work in the motor car plants, that he has sent miners down shafts in Arizona and Utah for copper, that he has taken iron puddlers out of the bread lines, that he has recalled workers to the cotton mills.

Sees Press Opportunity.

"Here is an opportunity for an outstanding job by the American press. Make the new car buyer as proud of his purchase as the buyer of a Liberty bond during the world war! Give him the information on unemployment relief that will justify pride in new car ownership. The public is well aware of the fact that the automobile industry has made tremendous improvements in its product during the depression and the prices have undergone substantial reductions."

2 GUN BANDIT SHOOTS VICTIM; SEIZED BY POLICE

Ralph Greenspan, 33 years old, 1609 South Karlov avenue, was seriously wounded late yesterday afternoon when he resisted a robber, armed with two pistols, who tried to hold him up in front of 2035 South Union avenue. He prolonged the struggle long enough to enable a police squad, summoned by residents of the neighborhood, to arrive and place his assailant under arrest.

The bandit, who said he was Frank Saker, 49 years old, 2552 Prairie avenue, leaped on the step of a truck Greenspan was driving and ordered him to raise his hands. Instead of complying Greenspan seized the one pistol he displayed and tried to wrest it from him. They both rolled to the street. While they struggled Fred Fichella, 5120 Wentworth avenue, a truck driver, went to Greenspan's assistance and secured the pistol.

Saker then drew his second pistol and fired, the bullet striking Greenspan in the right lung. He still held the weapon when Sergts. John Hickey and Frank Cunningham arrived. Greenspan was taken to a physician's office, where he was given emergency treatment, and then taken to the Mercy hospital.

HAWAII PRINCESS, LAST SURVIVOR OF ROYALTY, DIES

The last survivor of the most famous of Hawaiian families, the princess was the wife of Prince Jonah Kuhio Kalanianaole, who served as Hawaii's delegate to congress from 1902 until his death in 1922.

Afterward she married the late J. Frank Woods. She was active, after her first husband's death, in carrying on the work of Hawaiian rehabilitation as a member of the Hawaiian homes commission.

JAPANESE WIDOW OF HEARN, FAMED AUTHOR, IS DEAD

TOKIO, Feb. 19.—(AP)—Setsuko Kiozumi, whose husband was the late Lafcadio Hearn, author, is dead at the age of 69. She and Hearn were married at Matsue in 1891, shortly after his arrival from the United States. Mme. Kiozumi died yesterday after a long illness in a Tokio suburb where they both lived until the author's death in 1904.

Some time after his marriage Hearn became a Japanese subject and adopted his wife's family name, Koizumi. Three sons and a daughter of the couple survive.

Although her husband's fame became widespread in the western world, Mme. Koizumi had virtually no contacts outside of the Japanese society into which she was born. She will be buried tomorrow by his side in Zoshigaya cemetery, in Tokio.

RAYMOND PARK REORGANIZATION NOW EFFECTED

BY AL CHASE.

Out of one of the most complicated entanglements confronting any real estate bond issue in the Chicago area, with 55 law firms involved, the Raymond Park apartment reorganization has been effected by the protective committee for first mortgage bonds underwritten by Holzer, Inc., it was stated last night by T. E. Williams, secretary. Mr. Williams outlined the problems that arose and how they were worked out in forming the new Raymond Park Realty trust, which is now operating the property.

WALTER J. McGUIRE.

The building is being operated under the supervision of three trust managers: B. P. Traynor of the Chicago Title and Trust company, Walter J. McGuire of McGuire & Orr, and George H. Dovenmuehle of Dovenmuehle, Inc. Mr. McGuire is also a member of the bondholders' protective committee, the other members being H. D. Pettibone, president of the Chicago Title and Trust company, as chairman; S. J. Campbell, Herman G. Amling, and Barnet L. Rosset.

Mr. Williams stated last night that approximately 97 per cent of the outstanding bonds have been deposited. He also announced that latest figures indicate that the nondepositing bondholders will only get a fraction less than 3 cents of every dollar of bonds. The time limit for depositing bonds with the Chicago Title and Trust company has been extended to March 5.

Entanglements Ironed Out.

He stated that the bondholders' committee had successfully ironed out the complicated entanglements and countless problems over a period of one year, in connection with Dovenmuehle, Inc., who provided the new financing.

The Raymond Park apartments, one of the north shore's outstanding projects, at the northeast corner of Hinman avenue and Grove street, Evanston, was financed through a $685,000 Holzer bond issue. During construction the building got into severe financial straits and mechanics' liens totaling $276,000 were filed against it. The issue defaulted interest and principal payments on Oct. 15, 1930. Default also was made in taxes for 1929. These were paid later by the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, out of funds collected from the property.

"The committee, confronted with this complex situation, promulgated a plan of reorganization which was submitted to all depositing bondholders, representing approximately 97 per cent of the bonds outstanding, and unanimously approved by them," said Mr. Williams.

Secure $180,000 Loan.

"The committee compromised the lien claims for approximately $175,000 in cash and at the same time secured the consent of the equity owners to eliminate the running of the period of redemption. A new loan of $180,000, five years, at 6 per cent, was obtained by Dovenmuehle, Inc., which enables paying off the claims, much of the reorganization expense, court costs, taxes, and other expenses."

After settling the lien claims, Mr. Williams stated it was necessary in straightening out this matter to deal in all with fifty-five different law firms representing claimants. The reorganization also entailed much original legal research work on the part of the attorneys for the committee, Pritzker & Pritzker, and the Chicago Title and Trust company.

"On Feb. 5 the property was sold in an open foreclosure sale," said Mr. Williams, "and on Feb. 8 the sale was confirmed in the Circuit court. On the 9th the Raymond Park realty trust acquired title to the property by redemption from this sale.

"Depositing bondholders will receive a preferred trust certificate of the new Raymond Park realty trust as soon as they are printed, representing their original investment in full. This certificate bears a 3 per cent interest coupon payable out of the income if earned, and in the discretion of the trust managers the balance of such income, after the payment of operating expenses and such interest, will be used as a sinking fund for the retirement of certificates by tender or lot."

Chesapeake & Ohio R. R. Reports January Income

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 19.—The January statement of the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad, the first of the important carriers to report for the month, shows the effect of the further slump in traffic this year, revealing a decline of $2,379,781 in gross earnings to $7,998,232, compared with $10,378,013 a year ago. Deductions in operating expenses absorbed a substantial part of the decrease in gross, but net railway operating income nevertheless receded $810,121 from last year's figure to $1,951,526. Net income for the month, after sinking fund appropriations, amounted to $1,196,638, compared with $2,088,651 for January, 1931.

Northwest Grain Men Want U. S. to Get Out of Business

According to a Minneapolis message to J. E. Bennett & Co., the Tri-State Grain Shippers' association at its annual meeting there adopted a resolution demanding the government get out of private business as soon as possible. The meeting was attended by men representing 150 elevators in Minesota, North Dakota, and South Dakota.

NAMES RECEIVER.

The Irving Trust company of New York has been named by Federal Judge John C. Knox as equity receiver for the Manati Sugar company, which has offices in New York. The receivership was on application of the Sinclair Cuba Oil company, South America, which is a creditor of the Manati company to the extent of $8,756.64.

BROKERS HERE APPLAUD CURB ON SHORT SALES

BY O. A. MATHER.

Chicago brokers and bankers yesterday expressed satisfaction over the action of the New York Stock exchange to curb the practice of short selling. However, this comment was tempered by the suggestion that the New York stock market officials appear to have made virtue out of necessity, preferring to make a voluntary restriction rather than run the almost certain alternative of restrictive or even prohibitory legislation.

It is no secret that several influential Chicago brokers, who are members of the New York exchange, urged the governors of the exchange two years ago to take action to restrict bear raids and vicious short selling. This advice was given following the collapse of the bull market, but it was ignored. But now it seems that everybody wants to get on the band wagon. The Chicago Stock Exchange will take action next Wednesday and the Philadelphia Stock exchange did so yesterday.

Opinions Recalled.

It may not be amiss to recall that some opinions on the theory and practice of short selling appeared in this column several months ago. It was particularly emphasized that the lending of stocks held by customers by their brokers was unfair practice, even though the customer who held the stocks had signed a general power of attorney which authorized, among other things, the lending of his stock to short sellers. I then contended that most customers did not understand just what sort of document they were signing.

Now it would appear that the New York Stock exchange authorities have come around to this view. Some critics might even say that they have had a change of heart from a few months ago, when Richard Whitney, president of the New York Stock exchange, was making addresses asserting that short selling was necessary and legitimate in the conduct of the stock market.

Urges Rule Be Law.

If now I may be permitted a further suggestion, it is that one or other of the congressmen who have proposed legislation aimed at short selling now embody the present ruling of the New York Stock exchange in legislation that it make the safeguards permanent. If the current stock exchange ruling encourages bona fide investors and even speculators to buy securities, a rescinding of the ruling a few months from now would reëstablish the present practices that have been to their disadvantage.

At all events, the general view of the New York Stock exchange ruling yesterday was that it is "constructive." There undoubtedly will be brokers hardy or calloused enough to ask permission of customers owning stocks to lend them to short sellers. However, it would seem that any one granting such permission will merit the name of "sucker" which so often is applied to small investors or speculators.

MORE OPTIMISM IN TRADE

There was a slight improvement in sentiment and more optimism shown, according to the trade reviews for this week, although the volume of business reported virtually is at a standstill. Shoe manufacturing continues to show the greatest promise, while steel and other heavy industries continue quiet, although a better feeling prevails.

In some of the larger eastern cities department stores have reported a somewhat better volume of buying, although the margin of gain is slight. The petroleum industry is continuing its efforts against the overproduction which is holding it down.

Retail Trade Better.

"This is now usually the in between season for retail trade," Bradstreet's Review says. "However, with the level of activity so low this winter, since Christmas, there is little downward trend discernible at present. In fact, belated colder weather has helped some lines, while continued 'sales' have also added. On the whole, retail trade has quickened slightly from the previous week.

"Wholesalers and jobbers are still filling orders for spring in limited volume, but are being handicapped by the hand to mouth buying. The hope for improvement in the heavy industries failed to materialize; they are dragging with curtailed schedules and the little demand for their products. Collections throughout the country again must be classed as very slow, necessitating greater restriction of credit."

Western Union Reports 1931 Profit of $5,974,500

Western Union Telegraph company's report to the interstate commerce commission shows net income for 1931 of $5,974,500 after taxes and charges, compared with $9,248,232 in 1930, a decrease of $3,273,732. Gross totaled $108,736,949 last year, compared with $130,581,858 in 1930. December net income amounted to $386,222, contrasted with $994,639 in the same 1930 month. The actual figure for the final month of 1931 is $281,049 lower than was previously estimated.

New York Exchange Seat Brings $161,000; Up $1,000

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 19.—Reflecting improved sentiment, due largely to increased market activity, a New York Stock exchange seat was sold today for $161,000, an increase of $1,000 over the last price paid.

Congress' Aid Seen Needed to Save Roads

BY SCRUTATOR.

If the railroads are to be revived congress must do its share.

The roads can help themselves by instituting pickup and delivery service, speeding up passenger trains, disposing of unnecessary real estate and adopting better merchandising methods.

The interstate commerce commission can help unfreeze freight rates by permitting special rates on trainload lots and regular shipments and by granting fourth section relief.

But the job will not be complete until congress removes some of the stumbling blocks to railroad prosperity.

Its first task should be to study railroad taxes. Not only the federal government but states and municipalities as well have drained increasing amounts from the railroads to cover increasing public expenditures. The source seemed for a long time to be inexhaustible, the theory being that the amount expropriated from the railroad treasuries could be compensated for by the interstate commerce commission's permitting the railroads to earn more. The railroads were pictured as tax gatherers rather than tax payers.

Congress had in 1920 directed the commission to enable the roads to earn a fair return over and above taxes.

Taxes Eat Earnings.

But the commission failed to do this. The return on the investment in railroad properties remained low even in boom years, but taxes kept steadily digging further into earnings.

Last year the tax bill was 310 millions and the amount available for dividends on railway stocks was only 89 millions.

The policy of the various tax spending bodies has been to get as much as possible out of the railroads. No attempt has been made to disguise the fact that the basis on which the taxes were levied was neither equitable nor just. The sole idea has been to get the money.

If the railroads enjoyed a monopoly of transportation they might escape the squeeze, for most of the tax increase could be passed along to the shipper. But there are other ways to ship. The 7 per cent of the freight bill represented by taxes is a premium above the charge for service that the shipper must pay for the privilege of using a heavily taxed means of transportation.

Huge Tax Increase.

Early last year Fred W. Sargent, president of the Chicago and North Western railway, pointed out that since 1890 railway property investment in the United States had increased 203 per cent, but railway taxes had increased 1,220 per cent, which was 270 per cent more than the increase in all other taxes during the same period.

"Many counties and smaller subdivisions of government," said Mr. Sargent in the address referred to, "have become and are almost wholly dependent on railway taxes for their support. For instance, there are counties in some of the states that collect 50 per cent of all their taxes from railroads, and in some counties they collect as high as 82 per cent of all their taxes from railroads."

In 1929 taxes on class 1 railroads per mile of line varied from $9,342 in New Jersey to $484 in Texas. In addition federal taxes amounted to $395 per mile.

Waterway Charges.

Congress should also undertake to prevent discrimination against the railroads by making a suitable charge for the use of waterways improved by the government.

Another necessary step is the repeal of the recapture provisions of the transportation act, to enable the carriers in good years to tuck away something for a rainy day. One great fault with this law has been that it arbitrarily set up the calendar year as a measure of earnings. Business cycles do not coincide with calendar years.

The interstate commerce commission has recommended the repeal of this law. It has been the reason for the futile attempts to evaluate railway properties. When the valuation job was originally undertaken proponents estimated that it could be done for five millions. The government has spent 60 millions and the railroads have spent 145 millions. Now values aren't what they used to be, and the money squandered on these historical studies might just as profitably have been spent counting the grains of sand in the Mojave desert.

NORTH AMERICAN CO. EARNS $3.41 ON COMMON STK.

Earnings for the common stock of the North American company for 1931 totaled $22,452,916, equivalent to $3.41 a share, according to the company's preliminary statement released yesterday. This compares with $27,003,085 for 1930, or $4.53 a share.

Gross earnings for the year were $117,921,860, contrasted with $133,751,380 in 1930. The statement points out that gross for 1931 does not include gross earnings for any part of that period of the former California subsidiaries, which were sold on June 30, 1930, to the Pacific Gas and Electric company. The gross for 1930 includes the California subsidiaries for the five months and twelve days to June 12, 1930.

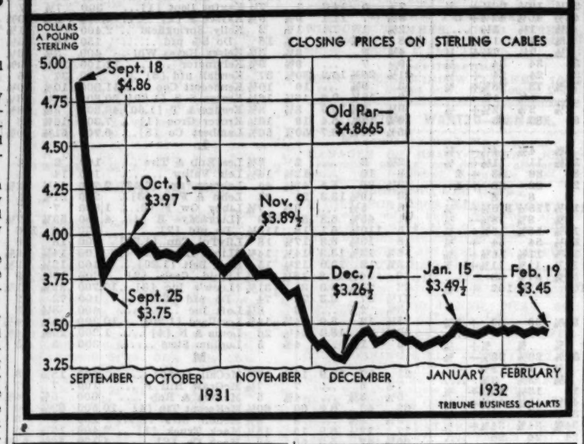
Drug, Inc., and subsidiaries reported for the year ended Dec. 31 consolidated net profits of $19,433,237, equal to $5.55 a share, compared with $21,123,430 in 1930, or $6.03 a share.

American Telephone Plans $300,000,000 Construction

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 19.—A budget of $330,000,000 for new construction during 1932 has been prepared by the American Telephone and Telegraph company. This is $59,000,000 less than the system spent during 1931. The bulk of this year's appropriation will be spent for replacements and betterments to telephone properties, since there are but few places which require additional buildings. It is understood that the difference between this year's budget and what was actually spent last year reflects an advantage in labor and material costs.

STERLING EXCHANGE HAS BEEN STABILIZED FOR TWO MONTHS



Bright Spots in Business

Bank clearings for forty-seven leading cities of the United States, as reported to Bradstreet's, advanced 3.1 per cent over the preceding week. The index of bank clearings, after seasonal adjustment, made its first advance since the first week in January. It now stands at 49.8 per cent of the 1928-'30 average, compared with 48.1 last week and 58.0 a year ago. The total for the week ending Feb. 17 was $4,992,278,000, as against $4,842,102,000 in the previous week. Omitting New York City, clearings increased from $1,721,114,000 last week to $1,835,305,000 this week or 6.6 per cent. The relatively better showing in bank clearings outside of New York this week is, no doubt, a reflection of better trade conditions due to the improved sentiment caused by the proposed Reconstruction Finance program.

The Gillette Safety Razor company reports an increase of 70 per cent in January sales over the previous month.

The Hazel Atlas Glass company announced the largest profit in its history last year. Net profit for the year was $2,490,333, equivalent to $5.73 on the 434,477 shares of stock outstanding. This compares with profit of $1,528,611 in 1930.

Alco Products, Inc., a division of the American Locomotive company, has received orders for 1,000 tons of riveted steel tunnel lining.

The monthly bulletin of the National Association of Flat Rolled Steel Manufacturers discloses that January sales of steel sheets totaled 121,258 net tons, as against a production of 118,921 tons. Shipments were 112,971 tons and unfilled tonnage as of Feb. 1 was 126,508 tons.

The cotton spinning industry was reported by the census bureau to have operated during January at 84.5 per cent capacity, on a single shift basis, compared with 79.3 per cent in December, and 80.7 per cent in January last year.

Gen. R. E. Wood, president of Sears, Roebuck & Co., predicted the southeast will develop in ten years into the greatest industrial center of the United States. Addressing a meeting of Georgia manufacturers, he declared "the south has more young people under the age of 20 than either the north or west, and it is this advantage of youthful population that in the next ten years will make it the greatest industrial section of the nation."

WESTERN TRUNK LINES RESTORE OLD GRAIN RATES

Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 19.—(AP)—Grain rates in force prior to Aug. 1 last year, will be restored at midnight tonight by railroads in the Western Trunk line territory, which includes Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma, Nebraska, Iowa and some sections east of the Mississippi river.

The restored tariffs will supplant a lower rate schedule established by an order of the interstate commerce commission, latter nullified by a decision of the Supreme court.

The court held the commission should have granted the railroads permission to show new evidence of economic change since the rate fixing body decided upon its schedule in 1928.

The case has been reopened and farm organizations in the grain states and the state public service commissions have joined in an attempt to regain the lower rate.

U. S. Offers Securities to Lure Hoarded Money

Washington, D. C., Feb. 19.—(AP)—As part of the administration's effort to draw hoarded dollars back into circulation, Secretary Mills tonight announced a special issue of treasury certificates would be offered to the public March 7 in denominations of $50, $100 and $500. The interest rate will be announced later, he said, and will be at least one and one half per cent. It is planned that the certificates mature at the end of a year and be redeemable upon sixty days notice. The total of the issue was not announced.

Secretary Mills also announced receipt of applications totaling $196,183,000 for the $60,000,000 tender of 91 day treasury bills maturing May 25. The highest bid was 99.377, equivalent to an annual interest rate of about 2.46. The lowest bid accepted was 99.307.

ECONOMIES BY MANDEL BROS. MINIMIZE LOSS

Last year was a difficult period for Chicago department stores. The general situation, coupled with constantly declining commodity prices, produced losses, although these were minimized by operating economies. While the preliminary report of Mandel Brothers, Inc., shows a net loss of about $375,000, this was less than half of the $759,377 loss incurred in 1930. Moreover, the 1931 loss included some nonrecurring items. It was about equivalent to depreciation charges.

Although dollar sales declined last year, there was a substantial increase in the number of retail transactions. Expenses were materially reduced, although many economies did not become effective until the middle of the year and, therefore, their full benefit will appear this year. The company improved its cash position to $1,530,000 at the end of the fiscal year on Jan. 31, compared with $1,203,637 a year previously. Cash and marketable securities alone were equivalent to all liabilities and there are no bank loans outstanding. The ratio of current assets to current liabilities was more than 3½ to 1.

BANK REPORTS $5,131,400 DROP IN GOLD STOCK

New York, Feb. 19.—(AP)—Today's gold transactions resulted in a decrease of $5,131,400 in the country's monetary stock. The New York Federal Reserve bank statement showed exports of $4,711,100 to France, $2,366,400 to Portugal, $300,000 to Germany and $50,000 to Holland.

The principal offset to these shipments was a $2,167,100 decrease in gold under earmark for foreign account. There were no imports, but the bank reported the arrival at San Franscico today of $129,000 in gold from China.

Weakness of the Japanese yen carried Tokio exchange down to the level of Shanghai taels today. Some dealers reported transactions in the former rates below the Chinese quotations, but others quoted similar closing prices for both.

European currencies were slightly mixed. French francs ruled lower, just under the gold point, although there was some firming in the late dealings. Sterling, German marks, Italian lire and Canadian dollars made small gains.

Stock Prices in London Continue to Improve

LONDON, Feb. 19.—(AP)—Prices on the Stock exchange continued to benefit from the effect of the reduction in the bank rate and better American news. Gilt edged securities improved all around and American issues also advanced under the lead of nickel issues which were firm. Paris bought mining shares and oil issues but home rails eased, especially Northeasterns, which were weak and declined from one to five points on disappointing dividend announcements. Japanese and Chinese bonds closed weak on latest far eastern news.

Paris Market Strong.

PARIS, Feb. 19.—(AP)—There was a considerable volume of trading on the bourse today and prices continued to improve. Profit taking had little effect and sales were easily absorbed. The closing was very steady.

WALTHAM WATCH CO. PASSES DIVIDENDS ON 2 PREFERRED STOCKS

Waltham Watch company yesterday took no action on the $1.75 quarterly dividend due on the 7 per cent, cumulative prior preferred and the 50 cents a share due on the 6 per cent preferred.

Directors of the Gary railroads voted to suspend payment of the regular quarterly dividend of $1.80 on the class A preferred stock which would have been payable March 1 to stock of record Feb. 20.

The Virginia Carolina Chemical company omitted the prior preferred quarterly dividend of $1.75 due at this time. Officials said that the company has $17,000,000 of current assets, of which approximately 25 per cent is in cash and government securities, with no debts except current trade accounts amounting to approximately $300,000.

Directors of the Radio Corporation of America have postponed action on the dividend on the preferred "A" stock until March 4.

Fiscal agents for the state of San Paulo 7 per cent coffee loan of 1930 report receipt of remittances exceeding requirements for interest and sinking fund payments for the seven months ended Jan. 31.

NEARBY WHEAT FUTURES TOUCH NEW HIGH MARK

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

A burst of bullish enthusiasm yesterday carried wheat prices to a new high on the nearby futures since Nov. 20 and the September to a new high on the crop. May sold up to 63c and July to 64¼c on general buying in sympathy with the strength in stocks, and in foreign grain markets. Heavy realizing sales through commission houses appeared on the bulge, especially at 63c for May, and there was also liberal selling against offers.

Despite the fact that prices at the top showed an advance of 6⅜@7c from the low of last week the sales of wheat during the day were readily absorbed. Final trades were on a recession of around ⅝c from the top, with net gains of ⅝@⅞c. March closed at 59c; May, 62⅜c; July, 63½@63⅝c, and September, 65¼c.

Outside Trade Broadens.

There was a rather marked broadening in the outside interest in the wheat market, with commission houses having numerous small buying and selling orders, and local professionals were also active on both sides. While the advance in securities was not as marked as many had anticipated there was a rather noticeable degree of confidence on the part of buyers both here and at Winnipeg.

Part of the buying of wheat futures during the day was based on independent strength in Liverpool, which closed ⅞@1⅛c higher, with May at 60¾c, the highest price quoted for that delivery since Nov. 25. Higher offers from Argentina, official confirmation of drought in India and liberal buying of Argentine grain on Thursday by the continent helped along the upturn abroad. Winnipeg was up ¾@1c for the day, with May at 67¼c in Canadian funds. Removal of hedges against liberal sales of Manitobas via Vancouver was a factor in the Canadian market. Buenos Aires was ½@⅝c higher, with March closing at 46⅜c.

News More Favorable.

General run of news from abroad was more favorable to holders of wheat, with export demand the largest of the week, sales in all positions being finally estimated at 1,000,000 bu or more, including Manitobas and American and Canadian durums. There were also unconfirmed reports of sales of hard winters.

There was some selling of wheat futures here during the day against daily and also weekly offers, and also selling by southwestern interests who were credited with changing over hedges from Kansas City to the local market. May in the former market closed at 53⅜c, or 9c under Chicago, compared with a freight rate of 10½c per bu.

March Corn Lower.

Corn made only a moderate response to the strength in wheat. The country sold 102,000 bu to arrive and there was scattered liquidation in the March, which went to 4c under the May, the widest difference so far and about a full carrying charge. The nearby future finished ¼c lower at 36¾c, while the distant deliveries were ⅜@½c higher, with May at 40¾; July, 43⅛@43¼c, and September, 44½. Shipping demand was slow, with sales of 8,000 bu. Selling against offers checked the advance.

The trade paid little attention to bullish crop reports from Argentina, where the corn crop is officially claimed to have been badly damaged. Buenos Aires closed ⅞@1⅛c higher, with March at 31c, the highest since Jan 5. Sales of 100,000 bu corn were made to go to store and the trade is now inclined to look for fairly liberal deliveries on March contracts.

Oats were firmer early with some buying which was regarded as for foreign account. Prices held within narrow limits, meeting with local opposition on the bulges, and closed ¼@⅜c higher. May finished at 25⅞c and July 26c. Rye closed ⅜c higher with wheat, May being 46⅞c and July 48⅝c.

Atlantic Refining Co. 1931 Earnings Drop Sharply

The consolidated balance sheet of the Atlantic Refining company for 1931, shows net earnings for the year of $513,749, against a net for 1930 of $2,743,000. For five years previous to 1930 the company's earnings averaged $10,137,000 a year. Current assets of the company are listed at $41,412,230 and current liabilities at $6,126,727.

35 Firms in 1931 Increase Their Earnings Over 1930

The concerns thus far having reported which were able to better their 1930 income number 35, according to a compilation made by the Standard Statistics company of New York. These comparatively satisfactory results were largely achieved either by reason of the fact that the companies cater largely to ultimate consumers, or the improvement was merely relative, in as much as the previous year's show-

Quaker Oats Profits Rise; Pays Extra

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

The favorable earnings report issued yesterday by Quaker Oats company and Swift International company failed to stir much activity in the shares of the two concerns on the Chicago Stock exchange. Both stocks, however, closed the day at higher prices on light transactions.

In addition to reporting an increase in earnings for 1931, Quaker Oats company announced the declaration of an extra dividend of $3 on the common stock as well as the regular quarterly dividend of $1 a share.

Net income of Quaker Oats for 1931 was $6,856,592 after depreciation and taxes but before allowing for $2,295,323 adjustment on securities and foreign current assets, which was charged to surplus.

Equals $8.23 Per Share.

The earnings before adjustments were equivalent after preferred dividend to $8.23 a share on 702,000 shares of common stock outstanding. This compares with 1930 net income of $6,003,860, or $7.01 a share on common on the same number of shares.

The extra dividend voted was the same as that distributed a year ago, and continues the policy which has been followed for several years. The company's balance sheet at the close of the year showed a strong current position. Current assets totaled $31,739,429, including cash and government securities of approximately $18,800,000. Current liabilities were $4,783,207.

John Stuart, president, said in his report that the company did not have the shrinkage in inventory to contend with in 1931 that it had in the preceding year. Inventories of grain materials, products, and supplies were $5,600,000 less than they were at the close of 1930, he pointed out.

Swift Profit Higher.

The Swift International report also showed a gain in earnings last year, and the figures were in line with the estimates made earlier by officials. Net income for 1931 was $6,610,739, equivalent to $4.41 a share on 1,500,000 shares of capital stock outstanding. This contrasts with net earnings in the preceding year of $6,549,287, or $4.36 a share.

The earnings of the company, which is the South American and Australian affiliate of Swift & Co., set a new high record last year. The balance sheet at the close of the year shows cash on hand of $1,224,676, compared with $1,065,520 a year earlier.

President Edward F. Swift stated in his report: "We have revalued our inventories and adjusted our costs to meet conditions resulting from England's going off the gold standard in September, 1931. In accordance with the custom which we have followed several years, we have made what we consider to be adequate provision for possible future losses in exchange."

Swift International was quoted yesterday slightly higher at 21, while Quaker Oats common was more than 2 points higher at 95. The market generally was higher on the early transactions following the upturn in New York caused by the move against the shorts.

WOOLWORTH CO. ADDS 20C GOODS TO 5 AND 10 LINE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 19.—The F. W. Woolworth company announced today that it will depart from its policy of selling only five and ten cent lines of merchandise by adding a line of 20 cent goods. The company was established as a five and ten cent chain system and has been operated as such for fifty years.

"We shall continue to feature standard quality merchandise at our present prices of five and ten cents. The establishment of the new 20 cent price will not in any way result in any change in the price of the merchandise now offered at five and ten cents," an announcement by the company states.

The new 20 cent lines will be first offered in about 100 stores. If these stores succeed, the company said, the lines will be extended to all the Woolworth stores.

TRANSAMERICA OFFICERS FACE SALARY CUTS

New York, Feb. 19.—(AP)—John M. Grant, new president of the Transamerica corporation, today said he would advocate salary reductions for officers of that company on ground that "stockholders should not be asked to carry all the burden when times are hard."

The new president said he had already cut his own $20,000 salary by 10 per cent. In the Wilmington, Del., meeting last Monday, when control of the corporation was wrested by the Giannini interests from Elisha Walker and his associates, Mr. Grant was selected in place of J. A. Bacigalupi, former president, who received $60,000 annually.

Mr. Grant said that Transamerica corporation's loans were virtually the same as they were one year ago when they stood at $20,000,000. The corporation's 9 per cent stock interest in the National City bank of New York, received in exchange for the company's interest in the former Bank of America of New York, would not be disturbed, he said, so far as he could tell now.

Holds Abilene & Southern Has Recapturable Income

Washington, D. C., Feb. 19.—(AP)—The interstate commerce commission in a tentative report held today that the Abilene and Southern railroad had $148,957 of recapturable income from Sept. 1, 1920, through 1926. The road had an income of $297,913 in excess of the fair return provided by law, of which one-half is recapturable.

Packard Motor Car.

Please give me some information on Packard Motor Car company stock. I thank you very kindly in advance for whatever you can give me.—C. S.

Income from other sources is substantial. The company has introduced a Diesel engine suitable for aircraft. It has also developed a marine engine on the Diesel principle.

In 1929 the company changed its fiscal year to coincide with the calendar year. On Feb. 5, 1932, loss for 1931 was estimated at about $3,000,000, after reserve of $650,000 for adjusting book value of securities held to market value, and provision for fluctuation of foreign exhange.

Net income for 1930 was $9,034,000, or sixty cents per share, against net of $19,291,000, or $1.29 per share for the 1929 calendar year.

Net income for the year ended Aug. 31, 1929, was $25,183,000, against $21,885,000 for the preceding year and $11,743,000 for the year ended Aug. 31, 1927.

For the first nine months of 1931 the company reported income of $14,000,000, against $6,680,000, or 45 cents per share for the corresponding 1930 period.

On March 31, 1931, current assets were $31,617,000 and current liabilities were $5,400,000. Cash and cash assets were more than $18,000,000.

The company had no funded debt. Capitalization consisted solely of 15,000,000 shares of no par capital stock.

In connection with the omission of the dividend due in March, 1932, the company issued the following statement: "The dividend policy in the future will depend upon earnings and general economic conditions."

Iowa Southern Utilities.

Please give me your opinion on Iowa Southern Utilities company 6 per cent debentures, due May 1, 1950. Are same safe for a widow to buy?—Mrs. C. F. L.

Iowa Southern Utilities company supplies utility services to 149 Iowa communities. For the twelve months to Sept. 30, 1931, income available for interest on unsecured obligations before depreciation was $1,459,000 and such interest totaled $249,000. Total earnings available for all interest before depreciation were $2,273,000 and interest charges were $1,063,000. Interest was earned 1.74 times in 1930 and 1.93 times in 1929.

On Sept. 30, 1931, secured obligations outstanding adjusted totaled $14,175,000 and unsecured obligations totaled $4,175,000. The company offered to exchange the outstanding 5½ per cent notes due Jan. 1, 1932, for new six per cent notes due Jan. 1, 1933.

The debentures are a business man's risk.

E. I. DU PONT DE NEMOURS & CO.

Wilmington, Del., February 15, 1932.

The Board of Directors has this day declared a dividend of $1.00 per share on the outstanding $20.00 par value Common Stock of this Company, payable on March 15, 1932 to stockholders of record at the close of business on February 26, 1932; also dividend of $1.50 a share on the outstanding debenture stock of this Company, payable on April 25, 1932 to stockholders of record at the close of business on April 9, 1932.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 19.—An epidemic of nerves in the bear camp, brought on by the newly announced restrictions on short sales, precipitated about the liveliest thirty minutes of trading of the year so far on the New York Stock exchange today.

Nearly 700,000 shares were turned over in the hectic half hour and prices went skyrocketing all the way from $2 to $7 or more throughout the list. Numerous issues attained new highs for the year. The ticker fell more than five minutes behind operations on the floor.

The flurry was as brief as it was spectacular, however. With the pile of buying orders which had accumulated over night out of the way, the street began to take what the market letter writers are fond of referring to as "sober second thoughts" on the effects of the exchange's new ruling and the early enthusiasm cooled off in no time. The list turned downward, trading dried up, and the second hour found conditions back to normalcy, with business just rocking along and nobody seeming to care very much what happened.

Prices Melt Away.

Floor brokers said that the early flash was due almost entirely to covering orders wired in over night by shorts who had interpreted the new order against such operations to be much more drastic than it was. As a matter of fact, brokers do not expect the order to make any great difference in the speculative activities of big bear operators. These, it is pointed out, usually are careful to make their arrangements in advance for borrowing stocks before putting out large short lines. Moreover, the restrictions will not go into effect until April 1 and commentators found it difficult to understand how the rule could have much effect on trading at this early stage.

Think It Over.

Evidently many of those who had jumped to other conclusions upon the first announcement that the board had decreed that members must obtain the written consent of customers to lend long stock held by them against short commitments changed their minds after thinking it over and set about to renew their obligation at the higher levels.

Prior to the opening of the market here, there had been short covering of a rather frantic nature on the London exchange and before that on the exchanges of the Pacific coast in the last hour of trading yesterday afternoon. The short ruling was not announced here until long after the exchange had closed, although the sudden spurt of buying in the last thirty minutes of trading indicated that traders here and there had got wind of it in time to make a little hay while the sun was yet shining.

Eastman Up 7 Points.

The opening prices in most cases proved to be the highest of the day. Eastman Kodak showed the way with a jump of 7 points on a single transaction. Auburn was a close second, with an upthrust of 6. United States Steel common did not open until about fifteen minutes after the trading began, and then rose 3 points on a block of 5,000 shares. A few minutes later the market bellwether rose another eighth of a point to achieve a new 1932 high of 52⅝. Gains of 1 to 4 points or more were widely distributed among the initial prices, with the buying orders converging very largely on trading favorites.

HOOVER ASSERTS HE ASKS CURB ON SHORT SELLERS

Confers with Exchange Officials, He Says.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 19.—[Special.]—President Hoover announced today that he had conferred with stock exchange officials prior to their action of yesterday in placing new restrictions on short selling of securities. The President said that exchange officials had been urged by administration officials to take adequate measures to protect investors from artificial depression of the prices of securities for speculative profit. He said the action of bear raiders during January in depressing prices had "brought discouragement to the country as a whole."

Tells of Conversations.

"Individuals who use the facilities of the exchange for such purposes are not contributing to recovery of the United States," Mr. Hoover declared.

"There have been discussions as reported," he added, "between myself and other officials of the administration with officials of the New York stock exchange on the question of bear raids.

"Stock officials have, during the last eight months, from time to time taken steps to restrain bear raiding with a degree of success, but during the latter part of January, despite these steps, there was a large increase in the short account, which unquestionably affected the price of securities and brought discouragement to the country as a whole.

Express Their Views.

"I and other administration officials again expressed our views to the managers of the exchange that they should take adequate measures to protect investors from artificial depression of the price of securities for speculative profit. Individuals who use the facilities of the exchange for such purposes are not contributing to recovery of the United States."

PENNSY WORK MAY CEASE IF LOAN IS HELD UP

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 19.—Contrary to reports, the Pennsylvania Railroad company has not abandoned its plan to seek financial assistance from the Reconstruction Finance corporation for completing its huge electrification and improvement program, it was learned today.

Furthermore, it is understood the management of the road has not been advised officially by the Finance corporation that an application for funds for such purposes is hopeless.

To date, officials of the governmental credit agency have not announced a hard and fast policy in respect to loans that would appear to bar the Pennsylvania. It is generally understood that loans will be granted only where an emergency exists and when applicants are unable to obtain accommodation from the usual sources.

In the case of the Pennsylvania it is entirely probable the major improvement program, already well under way, will have to be postponed for a lengthy period unless financial aid is extended by the Finance corporation.
